Roughing Up By Police O.K.—Poll

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A sample survey of B.C. voters shows three out of five think police are justified roughing up a person who resists arrest.

Almost half of those answering also thought roughing up was alright where a person was disrespectful or abusive to police while one-third found such police action acceptable where the person was a sex criminal.

One in eight even said roughing up by police was justified if they needed to obtain informaion from a person.

The survey shows police enjoy strong support from the vast majority of the population and few people think police abuse of their powers is common.

Answers from those surveyed show more criticism of the court system, with 47 per cent claiming the courts are too easy on criminals in contrast to 1 per cent who think the courts are too harsh.

The opinions come from questionnaires mailed to a representative sample scientifically selected from voters lists across the province by sociologists Dan Koenig and Trevor Proberbs. The sampling in March drew 905 usable replies.

Asked what type of job B.C. police forces are doing, 94.1 per cent replied good or very good, 0.6 per cent said neutral and 5.3 per cent said bad or very bad.

On police treatment of people suspected of breaking the law, 21 per cent answered they did not know. Of the others who had a opinion, 46.8 per cent said it was "about right," 25.89 per cent said it was "too inconsistent," 21.4 per cent said it was "too easy" and 2.3 per cent said it was "too harsh."

MRS. NOT MS.

OTTAWA (CP) — For Pope Paul VI, Mrs. Joe Clark is Mrs. Joe Clark, not Maureen McTeer.

Ms. McTeer, as the opposition leader's wife has preferred to be called, was asked by Vatican officials to be Mrs. Joe Clark for a scheduled audience with the Pope. Clark's office confirmed Tuesday the Vatican's request was accepted. But because of prior commitments, Ms. McTeer did not get to the audience.

CLRA, Unions Reach Accord in Shutdown

Officials of both sides in the construction strike-lockout said today they will urge their members to ratify a proposed agreement that could have the province's 40,000 trade union members back on the job by Monday.

Chuck McVeigh, spokesman for the 850 construction companies in the dispute, said he will recommend to the board of directors of Construction Labor Relations Association that they ratify the agreement at their meeting Thursday.

"It is the best agreement we could get under the circumstances. It provides the basis for a settlement and I will urge the board to vote yes."

A spokesman for the provincial Building Trades Council said the proposed agreement "looks very good."

He said unions will be urged by their officers to vote in favor of the settlement.

Neither side would discuss the proposed settlement. However, the only issue in the strike-lockout, which started Sept. 3, was the demand by plumbers for 15 minutes extra paid time at noon so the union members could walk to a place where they could buy a hot lunch.

One souree said there was a compromise worked out giving unions the right to the extra 15 minutes but only under special conditions. The conditions were not announced.

The agreement was reached about 5 a.m. after more than 15 hours of negotiations. Both sides had expressed an eagerness to settle the issue and get back to work.

It was the second strike-lockout of the summer.

A strike by cement masons in late June resulted in a five-week lockout that was lifted Aug. 4 when both sides agreed to a one-year wage contract retroactive to April 30 for all 15 unions involved in negotiations. The pay award was an increase of $1.29 per hour in wages and benefits. Base rate ranges from $9 to $12, depending on the trade.

Money was not at issue in the second dispute which began in September. At the request of the provincial government a three-man commission was to be established to handle all non-wage issues. The question of downtown parking was referred to this committee.

The companies wanted a second controversial issue, 15 minutes extra time at noon, also referred to this commission.

However, the plumbers and pipefitters union vetoed the referral and said it was a strike issue. When they struck, the CLRA retaliated Sept. 3 by locking out all 15 unions working for 850 companies.

The CLRA said the new agreement could have some companies back at work by Friday but union spokesmen said it probably would be Monday before the proposal could be ratified by all unions.

Major projects held up in Victoria include the provincial government office complex at Broughton and Blanshard and the federal government mail sorting centre at Royal Oak.

QUE. SOCREDS FACE CHARGES

MONTREAL (UPI) — Eighteen Quebec members and officials of the Social Credit party, including two members of parliament, have been charged with income tax fraud involving $98,810, the RCMP announced today.

Superintendent Marcel Coutu said the charges were laid late last week after a year-long investigation.

The greatest number of charges were laid against Gilbert Rondeau, Socred member for the riding of Shefford. Rondeau, 48, an MP for the past 14 years, was charged with 21 counts. He was summoned to appear in court Oct. 29.

Eudore Allard, 61, the other MP charged, was summoned to appear Nov. 1 on five counts. Allard, who is the member for Rimouski, was elected to parliament in 1972.

Most of the $98,810 which was allegedly defrauded went to the party, he said, but the remainder went to individuals.

While charges have been laid concerning the alleged $98,810 fraud, he added that the total fraud may be close to $2 million and may involve as many as 200 persons.

No More Park Strolls For Fighting Granny

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Eighty-four-year-old Monica Young used to enjoy the Sunday afternoon concerts in Beacon Hill Park.

But the four-foot 10-inch grandmother will never go back again. Not after two youths, "who should be hauled up and a lash put to them," knocked her to the ground in an attempted purse-snatching in the park Sunday afternoon as she walked near Goodacre Lake.

"I look just terrible," Mrs. Young said Tuesday from her apartment at 1319 Newport.

"They came up behind me on the run and hit me with such force I went flat on my face to the ground. My glasses were bent, my nose was bloodied and my eyes are all black," she said.

But she clung to her purse containing identification, a bus pass, her doctor's name and about $10.

Mrs. Young said a friend who lives near the park told her last year not to go there alone. She's learned her lesson.

Mrs. Young does not believe in capital punishment, ("Policemen and prison guards go into it with their eyes open.") but she doesn't agree with being soft-hearted toward young people who need discipline.

They need a good thrashing, she said.

It is believed Mrs. Young's attackers were fairly young because they were only about the same height as the diminutive pensioner.

Passersby helped Mrs. Young to the edge of the park where she took a taxi to Victoria General Hospital.

Her nose and mouth were x-rayed and she was treated and released.

"I knew what to do. I had been a nurse, you know," she said.

Victoria city police S.Sgt. Gordon Bennett said Sunday's incident was "not an isolated one" and recommended strollers, especially elderly ones, not carry valuables in their purses.

He suggested older persons should try and find a companion to walk with, and to carry all valuables on their person, not in a purse. They also should give the purse up without a struggle if accosted by a thief.

Split Grows In BCGEU

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The 33,000 members of the B.C. Government Employees' Union will be asked to stay off the job Oct. 14 in support of the Canadian Labor Congress day of protest against federal anti-inflation measures.

A formal announcement will come Friday when the BCGEU executive meets in Vancouver.

BCGEU general-secretary John Fryer said today there is "not much doubt" the executive will decide to support the CLC protest.

But in Victoria, the largest single component of the BCGEU — the 3,800 member administrative support Local 1201 — passed a resolution Tuesday that no matter what the provincial executive decides, members of the local can work or stay home as their conscience dictates.

The resolution asked that the union support its members no matter what position they take.

Fryer said it is a little upsetting that the Victoria local felt it necessary to pass such a motion.

"This union has always respected the rights of individuals not to comply, even in strike situations."

Norm Richards, president of the BCGEU and a member of Local 1201 said it is important only about 180 of 3,800 members attended the meeting in the Labor Hall on Quadra.

But Arnold Clark, former vice-chairman of the local and the man who proposed the resolution, said many of those present were shop stewards, and the resolution will be circulated among all members.

"Basically we feel the majority of the Victoria local want to report to work. They feel the protest is futile and won't accomplish anything," Clark said.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said today Fryer was showing a "very irresponsible attitude."

She said cabinet had not yet discussed whether legal or disciplinary action would be taken against civil servants who walk out Oct. 14 but said she would consider the walk-out a breach of contract.

"When they (union members) understand the disruption and ramifications to the people of B.C. . . . I hope they will take another look."

He said he hopes Local 1201's resolution will encourage more locals to "get off their butts and stand alone and make their own decisions."

He said too often union executives make decisions without canvassing the membership.

"The leadership makes decisions based on their own feelings. This is very evident in the BCGEU," he said.

Rhodesian Cabinet Consensus

SALISBURY (Reuter) — The Rhodesian cabinet has reached a consensus on proposals for ending the country's constitutional problem, Prime Minister Ian Smith said today at the end of a 2½-hour cabinet meeting.

He would not disclose the cabinet decision. But government sources later hinted that ministers favored accepting the settlement package presented to Smith by U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger last weekend.

Smith said the matter would now go to the ruling Rhodesian Front parliamentary caucus Thursday for a final decision.

The prime minister told reporters that he hoped Kissinger would be pleased with the cabinet decision.

"It's difficult to get Rhodesians down, as you know," Smith said. "I think we are going to go on keeping our chins up in spite of what the rest of the world is trying to do to us."

Government sources said after today's meeting — the second cabinet session in two days — that "some problems" could be expected at Thursday's caucus meeting, when that group's 50 members will debate the peace plan and cabinet decision.

TRUDEAU HECKLED

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — About 300 chanting demonstrators, some carrying signs bearing the Nazi swastika, swarmed into a downtown street here today to protest against Prime Minister Trudeau and the federal anti-inflation program.

The demonstrators, members from various unions in Saint John, blocked the road in front of a hotel where Trudeau was speaking to a group of service clubs. (No Subsidies without Conservation. See page 6).

They said they represented shipbuilding, steel, electrical, oil refinery, pulp and paper and sugar firms.

Irving Pulp and Paper Ltd. closed its mill and provided buses to transport its employees to the two-hour protest. The Irving company and its workers object to a ruling by the Anti Inflation Board (AIB) ordering a lower wage settlement.

At one point Trudeau stood in the hotel lobby with provincial Liberal leader Robert Higgins and talked to a group of school children.

The demonstrators chanted "We want Trudeau," and "Trudeau is a bum," and waved signs saying "We need the AIB like we need VD."

Several of the signs said "Let's fight Trudeau" and carried the swastika.

The protests came as Trudeau continued his five-day tour of Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick.

He was jeered by trade unionists when his aircraft arrived Tuesday night.

BCR Enginemen Settle Strike

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A strike that tied up most of British Columbia Railway's operations since Monday has been settled with the 40 enginemen here voting to return to work.

They struck in protest of a rollback ordered by the federal anti-inflation board of wage increases agreed upon with the Crown-owned railway in January.

Their return is dependent on fellow union members in North Vancouver also approving the return.

The enginemen had set up pickets in Prince George Wednesday, the pickets spreading up and down the line and tying up nearly all traffic.

The railway had been tied up in its northern region by a strike of maintenance-of-way workers, also over AIB-ordered rollbacks, which began Tuesday.

B.C. Rail said operations would be restored to normal as soon as possible.

The maintenance-of-way picketing which occurred at Prince George ended after midnight after discussions between Ed Peck, Labor Relations Board vice-chairman, and officials of the Brotherhood of Railway Workers and the railway.

DROP BANKS WOMEN URGED

QUEBEC (CP) — The federal advisory council on the status of women today urged all Canadian women to withdraw their money from banks which do not have women on their boards of directors.

By a vote of 10 to 7, the council decided to condemn the attitude of the Royal Bank of Canada and of the Bank of Nova Scotia, whose executives said recently they could not find qualified women to fill directors' positions.

Hatred Drives 100 'Scabs' from Kitimat

KITIMAT (CP) — Confrontation and hatred created in June during an illegal strike has driven about 100 workers out of the Aluminum Co. of Canada plant here.

And a vociferous member of the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers told Vancouver Province reporter Chuck Poulson the "exorcism" won't end until every last one of the remaining 300 or so marked men have paid their union dues.

The campaign began during the 11-day blockade with threatening phone calls to families of workers who remained inside the second largest aluminum smelter in the world. The workers collected 24 hours of pay each day—$300 per shift—to keep the pots boiling.

After the blockade was broken by a 160-man RCMP riot force, the retribution turned particularly ugly.

A Molotov cocktail was thrown through the window of one man's home — nearly destroying the building. ("I think his cigarette fell into a drink," grinned one worker).

A car was burned. ("Must have been lightning.")

Men were beaten — and sent to hospital ("Happens in Vancouver all the time.")

And tires were slashed — by the scores. ("I thought Alcan would have to buy out Uniroyal there for a while.")

Four months after the most bitter labor dispute in B.C. in years, the violence has calmed and given way to a more subtle form of harassment.

The "people who preferred to work," as the company calls them, have become work force lepers, forced to live and work with a large number of people who want only to drive them away.

Says one veteran of the Anderson Creek Road blockade, who like the others wished to remain anonymous:

"We don't eat with them at work, we don't talk to them anywhere, we've got no use for them and they know it."

Outcasts are shunned in various ways:

—When one of them entered a pub not too long ago, beer was poured over his head. The victim was thrown out of the pub.

Nuclear Blackmail Easy—Experts

LONDON (UPI) — A commission of 16 distinguished scientists appointed by the British government warned today that terrorists could easily seize nuclear material from power stations and face governments with "nuclear blackmail" by threatening to explode it.

In a report to Parliament, the commission said: "It is entirely credible that plutonium in the requisite amounts could be made into crude by very effective weapons that would be transportable in a small vehicle.

"The threat to explode such a weapon unless certain conditions were met would constitute nuclear blackmail and would present any government with an appalling dilemma," the report said. "We are by no means convinced that the British government has realized the full implications of this issue."

The commission is headed by Sir Brian Flowers, rector of the Imperial College of Science and Technology in London.

The report said there is no reason to doubt that "a sufficiently determined group with the necesary expertise" could construct a very crude bomb which might explode with the force of several tons of TNT.

"The amount of plutonium required could easily be carried by hand," it said.

The report said the equipment needed to make such a crude bomb would not be significantly more elaborate than that already used by criminal groups for the illicit manufacture of heroin.

The report warned also of the risk of sabotage of nuclear power plants which could release large quantities of radioactivity.

"It would certainly be difficult for terrorists or saboteurs to bring about a catastrophic failure and consequent release of radioactivity," it said. "But if they had sufficient knowledge of the plant design, the possibility of such an event cannot be ruled out and it is not beyond the bounds of credibility that a sufficiently intelligent and determined group could acquire the knowledge."

'Scabs' Driven Out

—One section chief in the smelter's pot room who was sympathetic to the strikers, is known for "working them ragged seven and a half hours straight." Others get regular breaks because of extreme heat.

The official union position, according to business agent Peter Burton, is that there should be no harassment or violence directed toward the scabs.

Burton, who with over three dozen others faces criminal charges arising from the blockade, suggests that not all of them should be blamed for their actions.

He says the intimidation has to end.

Replies another CASAW member: "Yeah, it'll end — when all the scabs are gone."

Meanwhile, judgment was expected today on a charge of obstruction against Burton.

Prosecutor Gary Abrams said 31 other persons also were charged with obstruction of a road following a confrontation in June with RCMP.

justified in roughing up a person in certain circumstances, 59 per cent said yes where the person resists arrest, 47 per cent said yes if the person is disrespectful or abusive, 34 per cent said yes if the person is a sex criminal, 33 per cent if the person is a hardened criminal, 24 per cent if the police know the person is guilty and 12 per cent if the police need to obtain information.

Few of those replying believe improper police field practices are widespread. When asked: "How many police in your area do you think there are who just enjoy pushing people around and giving them a hard time?" fewer than one per cent replied "most" while one per cent replied "many," 28 per cent "a few," 25 per cent "none" and 45 per cent did not know.

A similar question asked "how many police in your area do you think accept bribes of payoffs?" Answers were "most," less than one per cent; "many" one per cent; "a few" nine per cent; "none" 26 per cent and "don't know" 64 per cent.

When questioned about impoliteor rude treatment by police, 11 per cent of the sample said this had personally happened to them at some time, eight per cent had seen it happen to others and 27 per cent had been told that it happened.

The survey also sought opinions on whether police should have specific types of authority in day-to-day operations.

Asked if officers should have "the right to question you about a lot of things if you are asuspected of committing a crime," 66.4 per cent said yes, 24.1 per cent said it depends an 9.5 per cent said no.

But on whether a policeman should have the authority to "search you if he stops you," 14.5 per cent said yes, 46.9 per cent said it depends and 38.6 per cent said no.

As to characteristics of those answering the questions, 49.3 per cent were males and 50.7 per cent females, all with an average age of 45.

Fifteen per cent had received a traffic ticket in the previous 12 months, five per cent had been arrested for impaired driving at some time in their lives, five per cent had been arrested at some time for a crime other than a traffic offence, four per cent had served at some time on a criminal jury and 23 per cent had at some time been a witness in court, most frequently for the prosecution.

Economists Disagree With Food Price Ad

OTTAWA (CP) — Government advertising appearing only in French-language newspapers suggests the federal anti-inflation program has helped hold down prices of sugar, meat and coffee — although economists disagree.

The ad, published last Thursday, admits in small print that the program does not apply directly to farm produce and imported products, but can affect processing, packaging and other costs.

Economists, including some in government, says that the international laws of supply and demand rather than federal policy are chiefly responsible for meat, sugar and coffee prices. Coffee prices, they point out, have in fact been rising and are expected to climb further.

Strangely, retail prices for roasted coffee have risen by 80 per cent since last September due to a 132-per-cent international price increase in the price of beans. A government economist said Monday further increases will occur at the retail level.

Part of a $1.1 million advertising campaign to promote the anti-inflation program, the record straight on food prices, a government spokesman said. But a New Democratic Party spokesman said the ad was blatant misrepresentation.

LOST VD SWABS NO EASY TOUCH

The doctor operating a medical clinic at the Cool Aid centre said today he inadvertently misplaced a sealed package of swab samples he was taking to a hospital laboratory Tuesday.

Dr. Joe Haegert said the well-labelled envelope, later found by a passing pedestrian at Gladstone and Fernwood, must have fallen from his car as he was loading other items into it.

A couple who found the envelope subsequently returned it to the clinic at 1900 Fernwood but were critical of the casual way staff there joked about the incident.

They were told some of the swab samples were possibly of venereal diseases.

But Haegert said today each swab is sealed within the envelope and he and his staff exercise great care in handling them. It is the first time in nine years he has ever misplaced such an item, he said, and he is sure the clinic staff was not casual or impolite to the woman who returned the samples.

HOTEL COMPLIES WITH FIRE LAW

The Regency Shield Hotel, 724 yates, has withdrawn its county court appeal against an order of provincial Fire Marshal Henry Jenns, requiring the hotel to carry out a number of fire safety improvements.

Cancellation of the court action was confirmed Tuesday by John Hayes, spokesman for the owners, MEPC Properties Ltd., who said the firm has agreed to comply with what is essentially a "reinterpretaion" of building code regulations by the fire marshal.

Hayes said the financial impact has been modified by Jenns' approach and MEPC Properties now estimates it will cost $35,000 to $40,000 to undertake the improvements.

(Earlier estimates by the firm last June ranged as high as $70,000. The original order was issued last February.)

The hotel, built in 1908, is home for 80 people.

the weather

A ridge of high pressure still dominates the weather scene in most of B.C. However, a disturbance weakened by the ridge began to move slowly eastward across the province this morning and was expected to dissipate later today. This disturbance developed a few showers on the coast Tuesday and overnight and may trigger isolated showers or thundershowers in the interior this afternoon. Mainly sunny skies are expected in all areas except the north coast region on Thursday. Another Pacific weather system will bring rain to that section tonight and Thursday.

Panama Canal Trip Eyed for Alaska Oil

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Confronted with a possible oil surplus on the west coast, Standard Oil Co. of Ohio (Sohio) is taking steps to charter small tankers to ship North Slope crude through the Panama Canal to inland U.S. markets.

The Anchorage Daily News reported in a copyright story Monday that Sohio officials said that even this measure won't be able to prevent the anticipated surplus.

The firm owns about half Prudhoe Bay's oil reserves and is scheduled to ship 600,000 barrels of oil per day from the Valdez terminal of the Trans-Alaska pipeline next year.

Sohio also is seeking permission to build a 500,000-barrel port and pipeline system to ship its oil from Long Beach, Calif., to Midland, Tex.

However officials at Sohio's Cleveland headquarters said they believe the California project will not be approved and built until at least six months after the Trans-Alaska line begins flowing.

Meanwhile, a U.S. energy official said Tuesday in Washington the U.S. government is considering the possibility of exchanging some Alaska oil with Canada and Japan in view of the potential surplus.

"John Hill, deputy federal energy administrator, said such exchanges "may be possible and wise" until U.S. west-to-east transportation systems are developed to bring Alaska oil to midwest and eastern refineries.

Hill testified before a joint hearing of the Senate commerce and interior committees considering implications of a possible West Coast oil surplus when the Alaska oil pipeline goes into operation next year.

He said exchanges of oil with Canada are being considered in an inter-agency government study of Alaska oil transportation alternatives.

LIBERALS ATTACK TRUDEAU

OTTAWA (CP) — The executive of the Ottawa West Liberal Association has unanimously supported the decision of Lloyd Francis, Liberal MP for the riding, to quit as a parliamentary secretary because Prime Minister Trudeau did not appoint a minister from the Ottawa area during the cabinet shuffle last week.

In a letter written Monday to Trudeau, the executive also supported Francis' criticisms of some aspects of the government's bilingual policy and the moving of federal offices out of Ottawa.

The letter, signed by Carol Lenardon, association president, said that besides the cabinet appointment issue, area residents think consultation by the government on issues concerning Ottawa and eastern Ontario has been unsatisfactory.

The president said she regretted that the executive found it necessary to release copies of the letter to the news media Monday, "but unfortunately there is concern that this is the only manner in which to evoke a response" from government.

In his letter of resignation as a parliamentary secretary, Francis told Trudeau the lack of cabinet representation has hurt local Liberal MPs "very badly."

Electrical Companies Appeal Order to Obey CLRA Lockout

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four out of five electrical firms have appealed a B.C. Supreme Court order Monday to stop work and abide by the Construction Labor Relations Association's province-wide lockout.

Bill Woodill, president of C.H.E. Williams, one of the four, said the appeal is based on various documents introduced as evidence in Monday's court hearing.

He said there are up to 16 electrical firms within the CLRA that are continuing their operations and the same is true of numerous other firms in other trades within the CLRA.

Woodill said he is at a loss to understand why the five were chosen for court action.

The others appealing are Ross Morrison Electric, ALM Electric and ICR Electric, he said. The fifth firm ordered to abide by the lockout, United Power, has declined to appeal.

The Supreme Court injunction ordered the firms to live up to the covenants and directives of the CLRA bargaining council. It noted CLRA bargains with the construction unions on behalf of all companies, including the electrical firms which have signed over their bargaining rights to the association.

ICR Electric president Don Topp said there appears to be no satisfactory explanation why the CLRA took action against the five firms while not doing so against others.

"It's a disgusting situation," he said. "It appears to me they picked on a select few for these court injunctions. I would say it's definite discrimination."

Topp refused to name the firms he said were not being bothered by the CLRA but said they included "some large firms."

He said his firm has lost some clients last summer because of the construction industry stoppage in the contract dispute with the unions involved.

"The same thing could happen again if this situation is prolonged for any length of time," he said. "There is no total lockout throughout the province."

Ernest Almerling, ALM Electric president, said he disregarded the lockout because he feared it could be declared illegal and saddle him with damages to pay to clients.

But he said the injunction stipulated that the CLRA would be responsible for any damages incurred and this satisfied his main objection to the lockout.

Almerling said he has the suspicion that "someone is after us" but added he cannot substantiate this feeling.

POSTIES UPSET

MONTREAL (CP) — Country-wide postal disruptions are being considered to protest breaches of technological change clauses in the Canadian Union of Postal Workers' current contract, a senior union official said Tuesday.

"Our members are very upset these days and we are finalizing a strategy to counteract management violations of the agreement," said CUPW vice-president Jean-Claude Parrot.

He would not comment on the proposed strategy in an interview during a break in meetings on the dispute between union and post office officials, but hinted disruptions could begin as early as this week.

The post office department has publicly rejected union charges that it is not living up to its commitment to give the union prior notice of changes.

Serviceman Denies Naval Supply Thefts

Accused serviceman Robert A. Ganner, 32, pleaded not guilty Monday to 24 charges against him in a court-martial under the National Defence Act.

Ganner was charged as a result of an investigation into funds missing from the junior ranks mess when he was president of the mess committee.

His trial before a judge advocate and five officers of Pacific Maritime Command is being held in the Chief Petty Officer's Mess on Esquimalt Road.

The charges against Ganner range from stealing and conspiracy to commiting an offence under the code of service discipline, to committing fraudulent acts and conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline.

They cover the period from Oct. 1, 1973 to Mar. 23, 1976.

Dates have been set for two more courts martial involving two other servicemen and a former member of the service still subject to military discipline.

M-Cpl. Michael Joseph Sylvio Dalrymple will be tried on about a dozen similar charges Sept. 28, and M-Cpl. Adolph Gustav Plewa and former M-Cpl. Craig Campbell will be appearing Oct. 19 on similar but unspecified charges.

Prosecuting officer Maj. William A. Reed, of Edmonton, produced a large number of exhibits ranging from receipts to military equipment which he asked to have entered as evidence.

But defending officer Maj. Brian Murphy, of Camp Petawawa, objected on the grounds that there was no svidence linking them to the accused.

Recitation of the charges and listing the exhibits took up most of the day to about 3 p.m., when Maj. Reed asked for a voir dire — a closed hearing to determine admissibility of evidence — and the court was cleared.

Judge advocate Lt.-Col. J. B. Fay, of Halifax, will determine whether the evidence will be heard by the panel presided over by Capt. R. D. Okros, Maritime staff Pacific.

Other officers of the court martial are Cmdr. P. G. Bissell, Fleet School, Esquimalt; Cmdr. H. B. Kieren, HMCS Yukon; Lt.-Cmdr. D. H. Alderson, Maritime staff Pacific, and Lieut. D. K. J. Baltes, HMCS Thunder.

It was expected the voir dire will not be completed until about midday Wednesday.

First witness for the prosecution was military police Sgt. Harold Hart, who said he conducted an investigation into Club 44, the junior ranks club, and on Mar. 18 he ordered Ganner's arrest.

He said he searched the mess office and seized receipts and bar cards produced as exhibits.

He said he got further material of a similar kind July 7 from bar manager Ken Stauber. Various amounts of up to $105 were indicated on each item.

On July 22, Hart said, he went to the fleet diving unit at Colwood and seized a document from the office of Lt.-Cmdr. LaFontaine, which was entered as a list of material issued temporarily to personnel.

The witness said on Mar. 23 he went with a master warrant officer, the accused and two Saanich police detectives to the home of Myrtle Ganner, 4639 Cordova Bay Road, and conducted a search of the house and outbuilding.

He identified items produced by the prosecutor as those he siezed from the premises, including a desk electronic calculator, a diver's compass, a set of jeweller's screwdrivers, a U.S. diver's lamp, eight snap shackles, two arctic sleeping bags, three metal tool boxes, a jerry can, three lifejackets and five SCUBA tank valves.

Later the same day, Hart said, he went with Ganner and three military police men to the fleet diving unit to a pickup truck owned by Ganner and to lockers in an administration building, in which he found a fragmentation grenade bearing live markings but found to contain no igniter or explosive.

Woodward's Records Loss

VANCOUVER (CP) — Woodward Stores Limited reports a net loss of $164,250 or three cents a share before an extraordinary item for the six months ended July 31. After the extraordinary item, the company showed a net profit of $282,857 or four cents a share for the period.

This compares with net profits of $2.6 million of 40 cents a share for the period last year.

The extraordinary item this year was a gain on the disposal of properties and equipment.

For the period, the company showed an operating loss of $633,914 on operating revenue of $296.2 million. This compares with an operating profit of $4.8 million on operating revenue of $251.5 million for the period last year.

Escalating costs combined with a very competitive market environment in a slow-moving economy were the major causes of the operating loss for the first half of this fiscal year, the company said.

"In addition, operating losses (including amortization of pre-opening expenses) incurred by new stores contributed $2.8 million to these poor results," C. N. Woodward, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the company, reported to shareholders.

South Africa

"Canadian newspaper editors and other commentators with few exceptions label it as 'South Africa's policy of racial discrimination' or its policy of 'racial segregation.' Hardly a week passes in Canada without the publication in the media or elsewhere, of a condemnation of what is often termed 'the' vile system of apartheid'."

Paul Coetzee, information counsellor of the South African embassy in Ottawa, who started one speech with those words last week in Victoria, is worth every penny of his salary..

His job of defending the outcast of enlightened world opinion is mostly a rearguard action. Still, he tries. But it isn't very hard to pick holes in the curtain of euphemisms and half-truths erected to explain the sad and bitter facts of black life under a white Afrikaner government.

We are informed that apartheid does not exist. South Africa's policies towards other races now are defined under the general term of "multinational development" according to the latest pronouncement of Prime Minister John Vorster. And before that it was "self-development," which replaced the term apartheid around 1960. (The propaganda value of a term which is pronounced apart-hate is understandably minimal.) Soon the South Africans will have us believe that apartheid is almost the same as Canada's bilingualism and biculturalism policies. The truth is, of course, as the Manchester Guardian noted nearly two decades ago, whatever word is used — it's a synonym for repression.

Quibbles over definitions and mere words aside, we outside South Africa are taken to task by Coetzee for our superficial scrutiny and lack of serious perspective on South African affairs. Perhaps, he is right. Few foreigners can travel there and see for themselves. So we rely on the reports of others. But why then would South Africa expel journalists who come only to observe and draw their own conclusions? This summer it kicked out Barry Callaghan, a respected Canadian academic and sometime journalist with a background in television. With a film crew he had been interviewing people throughout South African society for a CBC documentary. After two weeks in the country he was arrested, clapped in a cell and released only when he signed a form promising that he would leave in 24 hours.

Coetzee also proclaimed that the white South Africans believed in and were "prepared to make great sacrifices for" the noble concept of the western democratic model, the parliamentary democracy which South African whites have practised for years. He was disappointed that no western newspapers had noticed a recent sensational (his word) development in his country — the government's statement indicating it will appoint a team of constitutional experts to study the possibility of replacing its present British-style government with something "more compatible with the realities of the multinational and ethnically pure society in South Africa."

Western newspapers may be excused for not splashing this announcement over their front pages. Since when has South Africa been a parliamentary democracy, except in style and trappings? Can any government which establishes such infamous laws as the Suppression of Communism Act, the pass laws, the statute by which a person may be "banned" — that is, may not meet with more than one other person at a time and may not be quoted in the press — decently claim to be a democracy? How can a state which denies the franchise to the majority be described as a democracy?

There was more strange reasoning in Coetzee's chat with the ladies of the Royal Commonwealth Society. The riots in which several hundred persons have been killed and more than 5,000 arrested were the work of "chiefly some of the students, youth gangs, radical agitators, petty criminals and the like." Let us consider a parallel, the urban riots in the U.S. in the mid-1960s. They were touched off in the summer, often by an insignificant incident. They degenerated into orgies of looting and burning and petty terrorism. Yet who can deny that the basic cause was rooted in race — the massive unemployment among blacks, miserable slum housing, the degradation and feeling of despair arising out of the recognition that the color of your skin is to blame?

Like the South African riots, they involved arson and firebombing and killing but they were symptoms of a general malaise, something much deeper than mere criminal acts. Forest fires don't break out unless there's a lot of dry wood and combustible tinder lying around.

The white South African's problem is to quench the fires without getting burned up himself. If Coetzee is typical of his countrymen, then the prospects for success do not seem very good. He seems determined to treat the symptoms with palliatives and preserve the disease itself.

A Plan to Revive Britain

LLANDUDNO, Wales — It has taken only one short summer for Canadian millionaire George de Chabris to bring into serious contention for a place in Liberal party policy his unusual idea for solving Britain's economic problems at a stroke.

With almost none of them having the faintest idea what it means, delegates to this year's annual Liberal party conference have voted to have a serious study made of a plan to abolish all income and corporate taxes.

Millionaire Behind It

In its place would be a progressive sales tax, a wealth tax and a 22-per-cent payroll tax, paid by the employer.

This, it is claimed, would cause "an electrifying revival in the British economy." It would also reverse the brain drain, slash administrative costs and "fire the imagination of millions of working people throughout the country."

The conference ordered the party's standing committee to prepare for the 1977 conference a complete plan for general tax reforms, including the abolition idea.

It was done with the name of de Chabris being mentioned only once, in passing, but he supplied the driving force.

Discussions with delegates showed that the idea was incomprehensible to most, attractively easy to some and passed mainly because it got the backing of the party's best-known MPs.

But only a handful knew anything about the Canadian who started the ball rolling earlier this year.

George de Chabris is 60, says he was born in Hamilton, Ont., and raised in Montreal, and came to prominence this year because he stepped in to pay the losses of the National Liberal Club in London with his own money.

He is pouring more money into redecoration and rebuilding the premises and personally ordered the party to move its headquarters into the club building.

The party obeyed, after minor grumbling, because he made his financial support of the club contingent on the move and also put up the money for the move.

He has formed a Tax Reform League to push his idea of income and corporate tax abolition and has said there would be generous financial support for anyone helping the campaign.

But nobody paid much attention to his idea until the day before the conference opened here, when the all-day commissions were studying specific topics in a fashion based directly on the Canadian Liberal party at its conventions.

In the commission discussing tax reform, someone mentioned the abolition idea and someone else suggested that there was no time to be wasted on such crazy schemes.

Then up stood John Pardoe, MP for Cornwall North, recently defeated candidate for the party leadership and Liberal economic spokesman in the House of Commons. He was there, he announced, to speak in favor of abolishing income and corporation taxes.

He is the man who spent a summer reading John Maynard Keynes in 1974 and transformed himself from a self-confessed economic know-nothing into an ardent Keynesian, firmly favoring public spending.

His forceful rhetoric convinced the commission to put the idea into its general tax reform resolution. Similar rhetoric, suitably simplified, convinced the delegates to send it to the standing committee, of which John Pardoe has been chairman since 1970.

Remarkable Achievement

Opposing speakers lacked his fire. Supporting speakers harped on the Pardoe theme that examination of the idea did not mean a committment. One referred to an advertisement in the party newspaper, placed by de Chabris and supporting the scheme, the only time the real author got any credit.

The scheme may never become party policy, but it has a powerful patron in Pardoe. Even if it did become policy, it would be unlikely to become government policy because the Liberals are unlikely ever to form a government.

But is is a remarkable achievement that an idea with minimal general support or interest in the party should have travelled so far.

It would be surprising if Liberals did not begin to ask in coming months for more information about the Canadian millionaire and self-styled, "independent economist" who is having quiet, but growing, influence on party affairs.

Silly Trips to Meach Lake

OTTAWA — When the cabinet travelled up to its rustic meeting ground beside Meach Lake at the end of last week its general task was to seek ways of restoring some of the government's lost public support.

A year earlier, the cabinet made a similar excursion and worked on a fairly detailed blueprint for the programs to be put forward during the rest of its current term. The intervening year was largely filled with unpleasant surprises and the plans which had been drawn up to maintain the government's position failed in their over-all purpose, which was to preserve the government's popularity, already eroding rapidly.

Among the results that flowed from the last session at Meach Lake was a proposed program of government activity to cover the period from the autumn of this year until the spring of next. Some of this is now quite well known because the list contained such unavoidable legislative work as the impending Bank Act revisions and the well-advertised second phase of the competition legislation. Beyond that, however, labor relations were to be a major feature and the government at that time was thinking in terms of either amendments to both the Labor Relations Act and the Public Service Staff Relations Act or, alternatively, a combined new act which would replace both of the old ones.

Labor Relations

Labor relations are still a major issue in the country which, at the moment, have two major thrusts. One is the Canadian Labor Congress's decision to launch a general strike on Oct. 14 to protest the government's anti-inflation program with the prospect now that there will be a second day of protest later on. On the other hand there are the conversations which have gone on dealing with ways in which there might be greater consultation between government, labor and business. The general strike will certainly not achieve its proclaimed purpose which is to force the government to dump the price and wage controls. It is doubtful that much will come from the talks dealing with tripartism.

In the first place, it is not possible for organized labor to call a general strike without creating waves of suspicion and resentment. In the second, the proposals which the CLC put before the cabinet back in mid-July were so radical that they have no hope whatever of gaining national support. In the third, it is doubtful whether a government which has lost so much of its popular support is in a position to try restructuring important aspects of the country's socio-economic life.

The CLC, for instance, wants a new and powerful institution to be set up by legislation on which labor, government and industry would be represented. It proposed that this should be called the Council for Social and Economic Planning with, below it and responsible for it, various boards and agencies with considerable power. A labor market board, for instance, would have authority for forecasting short and long-term changes in the labor market, training and retraining workers, mobility grants to workers, regulation of immigration and unemployment insurance.

"In order to fulfill its role of administering, overseeing and pursuing a full-employment policy the board must have the power and authority to channel investment funds, both public and private, or to hold back on proposed projects so that cyclical and regional unemployment can be evened out," says the position paper the CLC prepared for the July meeting.

PRIME MINISTER TRUDEAU
... at Meach Lake

Obviously, proposals of this sort would be completely unacceptable to much of the community and few more costly deterrents to private investment could be imagined. The government did not take this proposition very seriously and it would, of course, be anathema to the industrial and financial communities. That would be the position even if relations between the big unions, government and industry were not about to be soured by the general strike.

The cost of a general strike, however, will be so high that this alone guarantees that it will bring a legacy of bitterness and resentments which is bound to color far more modest proposals for co-operative discussions between labor, industry and government. Not even big unions can rush off in two directions at once.

This sort of thing illustrates the difficulties governments necessarily face when they attempt to compose detailed blueprints for the future. The world does not remain static, or even reasonable, in the interim.

Other matters which it was decided as a result of the last Meach Lake undertaking would fill the legislative program for this winter and next spring were "non-food price rigidities and supply bottlenecks", action on land speculation, cartels and guilds, more law reform including an amendment to the divorce act and so on.

Much of this will no doubt emerge more or less on schedule, presumably polished and furbished up as a result of last week's trip to Meach Lake. Some of it will be perfectly acceptable legislation. It raises the question, however, whether anything at all is gained by these safaris to the hills.

Nothing Harmful

Last year, for instance, a good deal of paper was prepared for the meeting on the subject of information in government and the proposals in the papers were in general sensible and public spirited. The government, however, would look a long way before it found a journalist in Ottawa who believes that the intervening year has brought about any loosening of the restrictions this regime places on information about government. It is intensely secretive in theory and, with a few admirable exceptions, almost as bad in practice. There is no reasonable need for nine-tenths of the documents labelled "confidential" to be restricted.

In practice, any middle level or upward civil servant can stamp a document confidential without having to justify his action to anyone else. There will probably be more studies of government information but experience proves that it will not be this administration that opens the unnecessary dams.

There is nothing harmful about the cabinet's annual trip to the lake. The only problem is that to anyone else it looks silly.

Heartwarming

Thank you so much for the heartwarming story of Terrance, A Little Boy Finds Strength. Anybody who missed this article should try to find it on page 5 of the Sept. 17 Times. Among all the depressing, fear-causing, obscene and hateful news we get dished out daily the strength, love and common sense of these two and their adopted son show us that the world would be so much better if we only had some of their compassion and would quit screaming for higher wages, bigger houses, more spare time, more earthly goods and more weapons to protect this all. I feel that this story does more than all the sermons of the "religious" moneymakers we can see on television. Please give us more of this news and less of the "juicy" tidbits about government officials and their sex kittens. — A Thankful Reader.

Unity Needed

Methinks your correspondent Campbell Thomson (Times, Sept. 18) doth protest too much.

He surely cannot fail to understand that the only reason the BNA Act has not been patriated is due entirely to our own failure to do just that. Certainly Westminster (presumably the cause of all our miseries) has no wish to resist such a move and equally certainly those such villains, the English, regard Canada as a totally independent nation and in no way subservient to England. If Mr. Thomson does not realize that then he completely misunderstands the English, but then he's not alone in this.

As for Scotland, if separatism is what the good Scots want, then that is what they should have. I am certain however that many many Scots and the Englishmen generally regard the move as a retrograde step endangering old ties and friendships — and for what?

In this blind drive in the name of nationalism — because it certainly is not patriotism — we'll soon find ourselves back to the tribal stage, when presumably in Scotland, the McGregors, Stewarts, McNabs etc. etc. will resume their "fussin and feudin" and we here in Canada will attach ourselves to the various native Indian tribes (if they'll have us!).

One of the things we need in this chaotic world is unity. It seems to be in disfavor at all levels. — A. J. Broome, Victoria.

Unfortunate

This is a letter of complaint in connection with the Thursday, Sept. 16, page one story on the Indian prison manual (Nobody Admits Writing Dumb Indian Manual).

I feel the motives of the Canadian Press is resurrecting this manual, evidently by somewhat obscure means, are certainly suspect. But surely reporting with such a headline as this you are doing a considerable disservice to Indians as a whole.

No one would disagree that the manual itself is infamous but the continual and unnecessary repetition of derogatory remarks made by another person, in whatever context, has a very hypocritical appearance.

In these days the media seem quick to provide fuel for every unfortunate situation which attracts their attention with a lack of concern for the true welfare of the community as a whole which is little short of criminal.—E. M. Page, Victoria.

School Savings

As I stated in a letter in late July that the budget of school district 61 had enough bones in it to choke a whale and our school trustees were no more than a coffee clique seemingly was fairly accurate from the news release informing the public that over $2 million can now be saved.

Some trustees are saying that the budget figures presented to them differ from those sent to the department of education. Not startling to say the least. They and the public are told only that which the administration wishes them to know.

Our guardians of the purse strings, that elected group who supposedly represent the taxpayers, our elite body of trustees are finally waking up and some even beginning to discover who controls the switch that lights that never-ending tunnel. Miraculous!

That $2 million worth of bones now protruding from the blubber of the budget carcass forms only part of the skeleton, possibly as little as one-half to one-third of the total body.

The school board employees, members of Local 382 CUPE, have tried to relate these facts to the public through two disruptions in this school district over the last four years. But then what do we know? We are only maintenance, custodial and janitorial personnel — the people who see the everyday workings of the district. We realize our wages along with those of the teachers and the other CUPE local are a large part of the budget, but we are tired of being the scapegoats every time a school tax increase is needed.

I think the public will slowly but surely get a full picture of this school district's expenditures and faux pas. — Bob Cunningham, Victoria.

No Tears for Giants As We Slip Into Age of Caretakers

russell baker

With the death of Mao Tse-tung the age of giants is closed at last. To mourn it would take a heart of stone, for it has been a barbarian's passage through oceans of blood and the charnel it washed on the shore makes Attilla seem in retrospect as fetching as Peck's bad boy.

The giants who led it, or perhaps only made the trip first-cabin, were flamboyant egocentrics whose passion for power fulfilled their age's hunger for new societies organized on the principle of industrial efficiency. This carried most of them toward centralized government constructed around political godheads with mythic or divine characteristics being attributed to the leader, whether he was called Der Fuhrer, Il Duce, the Generalissimo, the Chairman, El Caudillo or the President.

The characteristic political creation of the age of giants was dictatorship, and the characteristic political philosophy, which still survives it in such vestigial artifacts as the CIA and KGB, was that the end justifies the means. Not surprisingly, the citizenry for whom the giants labored became an inhuman abstaction — the masses or the people. Persons who made a todo about their individuality became nuisances, eccentrics or menaces. The attitude varied from giant to giant, but on balance it was not a good time to be at odds with the will of the people, to be a person. The age gave us no persons' republics.

An exception should be made for Winston Churchill, the one giant of the age who was, in fact, not of the age at all, but a creature of Edwardian England who was still able to sentimentalize war and visualize a future in which the masses would not insist on pressing their power too rudely. Britain rejected him as an antique as soon as the Nazis surrendered.

Time magazine once hailed Churchill as the man of the century. The accolade now seems as amusing as calling World War I the war to end wars. In the age of giants, Churchill was not even a very big giant.

From Lenin, who opened the age in 1917, to Mao, whose death closes it three generations later, there were giant giants, middle-sized giants, mini-giants, midget giants and false giants. The classic specimen of the last category was Chiang Kai-shek, who was inflated so alarmingly by Roosevelt and Churchill that it took Americans a generation to perceive that the castle housed only a mouse.

Francisco Franco was, to a degree, the similar creation of Hitler and Mussolini. DeGaulle sought the gift of inflation from Roosevelt and Churchill, was rejected, went away angry and came back years later to earn the seven-league boots for himself by restoring a France at the edge of breakdown.

Hitler and Stalin, the purest specimens of the age's giant breed, were almost certainly political geniuses, which leaves little more to be said about politics in the 20th century. Lunacy harnessed to industrialism in the cause of mass uplift. Dreams of perfecting humanity with the bullet in the back of the head and the gas oven. Nasty stuff, but infectious to sanity. Twenty years later Americans were destroying Vietnam to save it.

The age of giants, of course, has actually been over for a long time now, and we are slipping into the age of caretakers. The giants were great biographies and good copy, the caretakers are mostly a yawn. Witness Ford and Carter trying to persuade us that they are up to something vital. Witness Brezhnev the committee chairman in Moscow. Name quickly the prime minister of Italy, Britain, Japan and Israel. Who is the president of France?

There is scarcely a biography in the bunch. Carter and Ford between them are hardly interesting enough to sustain a magazine article. And isn't it splendid? With no giants strutting around shaking the earth, something vaguely resembling peace has become palpable. Vietnam may have been the last gasp of the age of giants in America. A case can be argued that it was Kennedy's, Johnson's and Nixon's insistence on trying to preserve gianthood in the presidency that accounted for the Asian fiasco, that they were men reluctant to accept the death of the age of giants, or too slow to perceive that it was over and that giants were no longer possible.

There is a glimpse of sunshine in this conjecture. If the giants, from Lenin to Mao, were not really giants, but only expressions of an historic global impulse toward cataclysmic change, then it may be that the rise of the caretakers reflects the arrival of a new epoch in which we want consolidation and stability and, yes, societies that will give us the opportunity to use such gains as the bloodletting netted us to search for our lost individualism.

China After Mao: Still the 'Moral Community'

By MICHAEL OKSENBERG

(Oksenberg teaches Chinese politics at the Centre for Chinese Studies at the University of Michigan. He wrote this article for the Washington Post.)

Young Chinese girls mourn Mao during memorial services in Peking Saturday.

What will China be like without Mao Tse-tung? So towering was his presence that it is hard to imagine China in his absence. To assess his legacy four question might be asked:

What of Mao was idisoyncratic?

What did he share with his generation which might be bequeathed to the next generation, though in modified form?

In what ways was he in keeping with the mainstream of Chinese tradition?

And which of his policies were particularly suited to China's condition?

Answers to these questions will yield a sense of China without Mao — of the prospects of Maoism without Mao.

Fitness Stressed

Most leaders sponsor pet programs. Mao was no exception. From an early age, one of his objectives was to foster a more robust, vigorous nation. In one of his earliest known essays — on physical education — written when he was still in his 20s, he noted that the aggregate weakness of the nation could be attributed in part to the individual weakness of the people. More than that, the Confucian ideal of the "chun-tzu" — the educated scholar-official — had no room for physical exertion and assertiveness. Mao saw the ideal producing cowardly, effete, sometimes suicidal intellectuals misleading a nation wracked by disease and malnutrition.

At the time, Mao's essay was not particularly innovative, for the theme appeared in many articles. But Mao's lifelong, intense commitment to physical education and to public health was unique among his Communist colleagues. All his colleagues were committed to the spiritual transformation of the Chinese people. But Mao alone, time after time, sought to make his entire people physically tough — to teach them to swim and dare the elements.

Another distinctive quality of Mao was the intensity of his commitment to the rural areas and to the peasantry. Mao saw the revolutionary potential of the peasants relatively early. And with the passage of time — whether accurately or not — he came to believe that he embodied the interests of well over 68 per cent of China's population: the rural poor. He was their spokesman in the higher councils of the Chinese Communist Party. Woe to anyone who dared challenge this claim, as Marshal Peng Teh-huai did in 1959 in condemning Mao's sponsorship of the rural communes and the Great Leap policies in agriculture.

His forceful advocacy of policies that spread the benefits of China's economic development more evenly enabled him rightfully to take credit for providing a minimum floor of economic security to a peasantry previously victims of total human degradation.

Mao deeply distrusted China's intellectuals. Although there was an ambivalence about his distrust — in a sense Mao was an intellectual himself and he counted many intellectuals among his friends — nonetheless he continually railed against their ignorance, their arrogance, their alleged concern for personal status, and their lack of social conscience and Mao distrusted over-specialization and feared that a refined division of labor in society might inevitably produce class differences between the skilled and the unskilled. Technical proficiency counted less to him than political awareness and commitment.

Artists Humiliated

But particularly he pursued policies that humiliated China's humanists and artists. Only once, during the "Hundred Flowers" campaign of 1956-57, did he offer an olive branch to the intelligentsia. But having been buffeted by Mao's stern treatment of them in the early '50s, they, in effect, spurned the offer, to Mao's chagrin. And ever after he counted them — particularly the older, distinguished faculties at China's prestigious universities — among his enemies. It reminds one of Lyndon Johnson's view of Harvard.

Mao certainly recognized the importance of organization. After all he helped build one of the largest organizations in the world — the 28-million-member Chinese Communist Party. But he was keenly aware of the dangers of bureaucracy in the pejorative sense of the world — sluggishness, unresponsiveness, oppressiveness, lack of imagination. Throughout his rule he seemed to consider the bureaucracy as an always latent and sometimes manifest foe.

Given his distrust of bureaucracy and of routine, Mao sought other means of implementing his policies. None appealed to him more than campaigns. He sought to harness the energies and emotions of the people in ad hoc, temporary fashion to achieve short-term, identifiable objectives. Examples abound of such campaigns: Land reform, the Great Leap forward, the cultural Revolution.

"Involve the masses, trust the masses," was Mao's injunction to colleagues and bureaucrats alike. He sought to build a political system in perpetual ferment, where grievances were not suppressed or controlled in a hierarchical, bureaucratic society, but were openly expressed and utilized in dynamic fashion. He deliberately alternated between emphasizing unity and struggle. The eras of struggle saw Mao heighten social tensions and manipulate them for his benefit.

And so Mao boldly introduced a distinctive pattern of rule in China. In fact, the hallmark of his era was less his quests for economic development and social change than the processes he developed for obtaining them.

He wanted the Party to make a maximum effort to involve the Chinese people in the transformation of the society; the changes were not to be bestowed benevolently. For the very process of mass involvement would secure their commitment to the objectives, and their achievements would earn them confidence and dignity.

Many of Mao's associates grew disenchanted with campaigns and the periodic disruptions they caused. They were not popular. They produced excesses and were divisive in their arousal of anger and emotions. Their goals often were not met. But Mao persisted to the end. History will record his last major political act as launching a campaign against that defender of routine and skeptic of campaigns Teng Hsiao-P'ing. Mao died seeking to maintain pressure on the bureaucrats, to prevent them from acquiring a secure position of privilege, and to upset their routine.

From the late 1950s on, Mao increasingly felt that a major threat to his vision came from the Soviet brand of socialism. If China did not avoid the Soviet path of development, he concluded, the Chinese Communist revolution would have only perpetrated the rule of a privileged, aggressive bureaucratic class. But as Mao waged the Sino-Soviet dispute, personal animus and personal power stakes became attached to the issue. To an extent, the intensity of the dispute reflected Mao's own vituperative involvement in it. It remains quite possible that the absence of Mao will therefore see a diminution in the tensions between the two giants.

His interest in public health and women's emancipation, his strong commitment to the rural poor, his distrust of intellectuals and bureaucrats, his willingness to experiment with the campaign mode of policy implementation and his unyielding anti-Soviet stance all were the distinctive elements of his reign. To be sure, others shared his view. But he brought a passion and intensity of commitment that his successors may not share.

In Mainstream

Nationalism formed another major ingredient of Mao's outlook. But is was not a xenophobic or revanchist form of nationalism. Rather, Mao's nationalism for the most part was enlightened, with a flavor of cosmopolitanism perhaps provided by his long-time chief foreign policy adviser, Chou En-lai. Mao's brand of nationalism was not unique to him, for on this issue he was totally in the mainstream of his generation.

That age group sought to secure for China a position of greatness in world affairs. They wished to build a wealthy, strong and independent country. Under their aegis, China was never to be humiliated again as it had been at the Council of Versailles following the Second World War, which made a mockery of China's desire for self-determination. They succeeded.

But the Mao generation of nationalists was of a particular kind. A response to the West, nonetheless it was directly shaped by the West and formulated by men versed in and admiring of many Western traditions and ideas. Yet, as the Harvard historian John Fairbank has long stressed, Mao's nationalism also drew upon the traditional Chinese world view — more culture-centric than ethnocentric, more stay-at-home than expansionist.

Mao's nationalism, then, can be seen as a transitional form. Tragically, it took the United States 20 years to realize its supple and relatively benign nature — particularly benign because Mao lacked the military capability to project anything other than ideological appeals beyond the periphery.

Unmistakably, the next generation will be equally nationalistic. The assertion of China's greatness is a core commitment which Mao has transferred. But the next generation both lacks extensive contact with the west and immersion in China's past. What brand of nationalism will enhance military strength, will it continue to eschew virulent nationalism? Or will it seize upon Mao's goal of restructuring international relations and of fosering revolution to support a more active stance abroad? Can one envision China acting as a protector of the rights of the overseas Chinese? In sum, now that Mao and his generation achieved what they had intended—how will the next generation use that legacy? Use it, they will, as Mao would have wished, but whether it will be employed in keeping with his spirit of flexibility and accommodation remains open to question.

Mao's well-known concerns with education, with culture, with creating a moral community, and with fostering collectivist values fall so totally within Chinese tradition that they are unlikely to change.

Unlike Locke or Hobbes, who perceived the role of the state as an artifact to protect men from one another, in the Chinese tradition the purpose of governance was to create a moral community. Key realms of government involved education and culture, and the task of the ruler was to maintain and protect the state ideology.

According to this tradition, what gives meaning to life is not discovery of the "inner self" or "self fulfillment" but the proper performance of one's social roles. Mao has tried to change the definition of these roles by encouraging people to attach primacy to their public roles as citizens of the nation and of the community rather than their private roles as family members. But the underlying intent is the same—to derive satisfaction from the accomplishment of one's group, not from individual consumption and creativity.

Same Tradition

China, then, is a nation blessed without the presence of lawyers or psychiatrists. Directives are intended not to regulate but to educate. People are to ask, "What's my duty?" rather than "What's my ego problem?" These striking aspects of China are erroneously attributed to Mao. Instead, they reveal the essence of Chinese society, and any leader will be guided by the same tradition.

Yet, as founding father, Mao commanded a moral force that his successors will lack. Although the successors will be in the same mold, they probably will not possess the same authority to create ideology and redefine virtue. They will work within the broad ideological confines he has left. Behind that, lacking the same monopoly claims on virtue, the successors may be compelled to be more coercive and to make wider use of material incentives.

Above all, to a considerable extent, Mao's policies responded to the objective situation he faced. His emphasis on agricultural areas stems from the fact that 80 per cent of the populace lived there and that output had to increase 2 per cent per annum to keep pace with population increase. His concern with China's youth and his search for ways to satisfy their aspirations was a response to China's changing demographic profile and the monumental problems and opportunities presented by the expanding numbers of better educated, better fed youths.

The concern for the urban-rural gap arose from a realistic assessment of the social tensions that would be generated should that gap widen. His fight against bureaucratism stemmed from his realistic recognition that organizations so large as to encompass a nation of China's size were prone to slothfulness and unresponsiveness. His concern with Soviet expansionism flows from an objective look at the record — Moscow's repeated efforts to affect Chinese domestic affairs and to encircle China militarily.

Embodied Tensions

A look at the record, then, suggests that no matter who rules China, assuming the succession problems are surmounted, their range of choice will be limited and the policies labelled "Maoist" can evolve only gradually. For the most part, Mao did not determine the agenda of issues which he addressed nor the resources available to him. Those were determined by China's condition. And they will change, but slowly.

But Mao's departure does leave a gaping hole. For Mao embodied within him, in a unique way, most of the tensions and ambivalence within his own society. In a sense, he did mirror his people in their desire for both spontaneity and control, in their combined disdain and pride in their cultural heritage, and in their desire to join the world and remain aloof from it. As a huge and developing country, China contains many contradictions. Mao understood this. He also never committed himself to any side of a contradiction, but, through a process of struggle, sought over a protracted period to achieve a unifying synthesis of the disparate elements.

To be sure, he played a highly provocative role in moving his nation forward. But within China's revolutionary political spectrum, Mao was a centrist, tilting in the direction of his more militant fundamentalists for a while and then tilting more in the direction of the economic modernizers. His views embraced them both. He provided intellectual coherence to modern China's diverse experience. His was a virtuoso performance. China will remain unified, but without Mao the way it is unified will certainly be altered. And China will appear very different as a result.

Schreyer Shuffles Cabinet

WINNIPEG (CP) — The most extensive shuffling of ministerial duties since the 1969 general election that brought the NDP to power in Manitoba was announced Tuesday by Premier Ed Schreyer.

Although there were no additions to the 17-man cabinet roster and no resignations, eight ministers had their responsibilities changed and the premier divested himself of his portfolio as finance minister.

In the realignment, Schreyer chose one of his most experienced colleagues and a relative newcomer to politics for major new assignments.

The premier yielded up his second job as finance minister to Saul Miller, a veteran politician who has held several major cabinet posts since 1969. Miller assumes prime responsibility for crucial fiscal negotiations with Ottawa this fall while retaining his urban affairs portfolio.

Ian Turnbull, first appointed to cabinet three years ago, takes over as education minister from Ben Hanuschak on the eve of what could be sweeping changes in government assistance programs for public schools.

Turnbull was formerly minister of consumer, corporate and internal services and minister responsible for the Manitoba telephone system. His first major cabinet assignment came earlier this year when he piloted the government's rent-control legislation through the house.

Co-operatives Minister Rene Toupin gets Turnbill's old duties and gives up his job as minister of tourism, recreation and cultural affairs to Hanuschak.

Hanuschak remains as the minister responsible for higher education in a restructured department to be known as continuing education and manpower.

Bill Uruski replaces Howard Pawley as minister of municipal affairs and gives up responsibility for the Manitoba Public Insurance Corp. to Highways Minister Peter Burtniak.

The changes were announced in a press release, and the premier was not available for comment.

RCs Quit Church Over Language

MONTREAL (CP)—Parents of about 2,500 Catholic children have renounced their religion in order to get their children into English-speaking Protestant schools, seven Montreal-area priests charged in a letter.

The seven, all from parishes in the city's northeast region where many Italian immigrants live, said in a letter sent to Montreal archbishops Paul Gregoire Monday that the province's official language legislation has encouraged an exodus from the ranks of the church.

The priests said parents were forced to defy the legislation because of the "absurdity of the law and the injustices implicit in its aplication."

The law requires that children whose mother tongue is not English must pass language-proficiency tests in order to qualify for admission to English schools. Those who fail or refuse to take the tests must attend French schools.

The Protestant school boards have opposed the language legislation, commonly known as Bill 22, and have loosely applied the law, accepting in their schools many of those who have failed the test.

"From the moment of its Bill 22 inception we had the premonition that we were dealing with a law that was discriminatory, oppressive and anti-Christian," the priests said.

A spokesman for the priests said "approximately 2,500 children, of which 460 are of Italian descent, have been registered in Protestant schools: their parents have signed a formula of abjuration from the Catholic Church."

The priests' letter said the parents are "saddled with a law that threatens their faith, undermines their family unity and compromises, perhaps forever, their peaceful integration in the province of Quebec."

They said that many immigrant parents had opted for English schools, not because of any hatred or ill-feeling toward French-Canadians, but because they wanted their children to be bilingual."

Meanwhile, a sit-in by about 800 immigrant children at English-Catholic schools continued today in defiance of Bill 22.

Conservation Matched To Subsidies—Trudeau

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

CHARLOTTETOWN — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau declared Tuesday that his government no longer will provide subsidies merely to save moneyfor consumers in different parts of Canada.

From now on, he stated, energy subsidies will be tied to programs for energy conservation.

Trudeau was speaking at a press conference at the end of the second day of his visit to Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick.

In his meetings with farmers, businessmen, and provincial leaders, the prime minister was urged repeatedly to provide more federal money to offset high electricity costs in P.E.I. The cost of 1,000 kilowatt hours in Charlottetown, he was told, is $43.60 — about double the cost in Halifax or Moncton — and some residents of the Island complained of electricity bills as high as $700 a month.

However, the prime minister noted during the press conference that Ottawa already provides subsidies to Eastern Canada to keep petroleum prices down and provides further grants and loans to subsidize the power cable now being constructed between the Island and New Brunswick.

Trudeau also refused to commit himself on other requests of Islanders during his meetings here.

When fishermen urged him to recreate a separate ministry of fisheries — Romeo LeBlanc is now minister of both fisheries and the environment — he replied that the two portfolios will be held by one minister for the time being.

He argued that the two departments are interdependent especially while Canada is extending its jurisdiction unilaterally to the 200-mile limit and because pollution control also benefits fisheries.

Neither did Trudeau say much to ease Islanders' fears of the "user-pay" policy proposed by Transport Minister Otto Lang. P.E.I. businessmen and farmers expressed concern that forcing users of transportation facilities to pay for them unfairly discriminates against the Island because of its isolated position.

MUNRO SUES PAPER FOR ALLEGED LIBEL

HAMILTON (CP) — Federal Labor Minister John Munro isssued a writ of summons in Ontario Supreme Court on Tuesday as a result of articles in The Spectator Sept. 16.

John Bowlby, Munro's lawyer, said in an interview the suit is for damages for libel.

Named as defendants in the suit are Southam Press Ltd.; John D. Muir, Spectator publisher; John Doherty, executive editor; and reporter James Travers.

The articles were about a low-income housing project.

On Monday, The Spectator published an apology for a headline published Sept. 16 referring to the labor minister.

Bowlby said in a statement: "The apology printed Monday by The Spectator only attempts to reduce the defamatory effect on Munro's reputation as contained in the headline on page 1."

Munro: Don't Fire Workers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal Labor Minister John Munro said Tuesday he hopes employers won't fire workers who stay off the job Oct. 14 in a Canadian Labor Congress-sponsored protest against the government's wage controls.

He said he doesn't condone violations of collective agreements, but firings might "unnecessarily polarize the situation," and harden attitudes to where the government would be unable to get labor's co-operation in finding solutions after the protest.

Munro would not comment, however, on other forms of disciplinary action employers could take, saying "I won't tell employers what to do."

He made the comments in answering questions following a speech to a service club.

To participate in a legal protest is one thing, he said, but employees should not take part in "activities that would rebound to their own discredit."

In his speech, the minister said that Canadians are better off under the federal anti-inflation program that they were a year ago.

Munro recalled that a year ago double digit inflation was "causing havoc and despair," consumers were complaining to their members of Parliament and fear of still higher prices was causing unions to ask for increases of 20 to 25 per cent a year. He was speaking to a service club.

"Double digit inflation was also affecting the effectiveness of government," said Munro. "Inflation was undermining the capability of the economy to grow and to create jobs for our growing labor force."

Free Cons, Civil Group Urges

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Civil Liberties and Human Rights Associations called Tuesday for the release of all prisoners jailed for non-violent crimes against property or the public order.

In a news release, the federation also called for governments to immediately stop building large prisons, cease "all punitive, unexplained or unjustified" transfers of prisoners and allow citizen groups investigating prisons to have access at all times to all prisons.

The federation said it was pledging itself to bringing about those goals in the light that Canadian prisons have never achieved their stated aims concerning punishment and rehabilitation of prisoners.

The group quoted the Law Reform Commission of Canada as saying almost one half of the 4,000 persons sent to federal penitentiaries each year are jailed for committing non-violent offences against property or the public order.

Steps should be taken immediately to bring about the release of such prisoners, the federation said. This would eliminate the need for more and larger prisons.

Unjustified and unexplained transfers of prisoners should stop because they make the organizing of effective prisoner rights associations difficult, the group said.

The group pledged to work for the replacement of current corrections policies with pretrial diversion programs and altrenatives to jail terms.

FORCES JOKE

TORONTO (CP) — The president of the Royal Canadian Armored Corps Association says that from a military standpoint Canada is the laughing stock of the world because of the federal government's lack of military planning and policy.

In an interview, Lt.-Col. Michael Stevenson, an officer in the reserve army, said headquarter socrces have told him there is not a mobilization plan on paper.

AIR CANADA ALMOST FLEW IN THE BLACK

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada would have posted its first profit in three years had it not been for the nine-day pilots' strike in June, the carrier's vice-president of finance said Tuesday.

Michael Cochrane told a service club luncheon the strike had cost $22.5 million, but added that the airline would nevertheless post a deficit below that amount in 1976.

"From a profit standpoint, Air Canada has turned around," he said.

His projection for 1977 calls for a profit if there are no further long work stoppages, even though the dispute over the use of French in air communications remains unresolved.

When asked during an interview what the consequences would be if the airline lost its appeal against a recent judgment ordering the company to allow the use of French on its flight decks, Cochrane said: "I hate to think of it."

He said there were not contingency plans for further work stoppages involving pilots or controllers other than layoffs after the sixth day.

"There is nothing we can do if the pilots refuse to fly," he said. The work of any other employee group can be done by others, he added.

The airlines' deficit for the year was $14.5 millon before taxes by the end of August, down from $47.4 million at the end of June, Cochrane told the meeting. Air Canada made $33 million during the summer season, he said.

The $47.4 million is $17 million greater than the airline's deficit for the first six months in 1975.

Profits will increase when amendments to the Air Canada Act, to be introduced in the House of Commons this fall, are passed, he said.

The amendments will allow Air Canada to undertake a refinancing program, by which its financing will be 50 per cent equity and 50 per cent debt. Under the current arrangement 98 per cent of the airline's financing is in bonds.

The move will reduce interest payments to $30 million from $60 million at present. Mr. Cochrane said the company "would have never had a loss year in its history" if the new financing structure had been in effect.

Law Hits Indians: Allmand

YELLOWKNIFE (CP) — Canadian law discriminates against Indian people, says Warren Allmand, the new minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

Allmand, in Yellowknife as part of a week-long swing through northern and western Canada, said that in his old cabinet post as solicitor-general he was "pretty shocked" at the way the criminal justice system treated native Canadians.

That was why he started various initiatives — such as last year's special criminal justice conference in Edmonton — to make the system more sensitive toward native people.

Indians often came in for unwarranted suspician of lawbreaking and Allmand noted that while talking with Indian people, he himself had been followed by suspicious police patrols.

Europe Hostile: Clark

LONDON (CP) — European businessmen remain worried about Canada's controls on foreign investment and tend to look to the United States first as a result, says Joe Clark.

One of the major impressions left with the Progressive Conservative leader from his 17-day, five-country European tour is this hostility to the Foreign Investment Review Act.

Another impression is that Europe has some useful lessons, worthy of consideration in Canada, in the field of social co-operation as a help to greater prosperity.

On foreign investment, he found that while there was concern about specific applications of the FIRA, investors "are uneasy about the atmosphere which has given rise to these policies in Canada and they think there is an atmosphere that is not as welcoming to investors as other countries."

Some of the businessmen to whom he talked were prepared to be even more specific than that.

"In Germany and France we were given very strong and explicit indications by potential investors that their inclination now is to look first to the United States rather than us. We are being perceived less positively by potential investors than we were three or four years ago."

The same businessmen, however, did not take issue with Canada's determination to use its natural resources to build secondary industry.

Family Firm Reaping Expansion Benefits

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Four years ago, Schneider Corp., the meat processor, decided to expand its operations across Canada.

It was a bold move for a firm that still is controlled and largely run by the same family that founded it in 1890.

Slowly but surely, the move into national markets is continuing although Schneider's remains a one-plant company oprating in the same city where it was founded.

"When we made up our mind to go national, we didn't realize what a job it was," said Herbert Schneider, vice-president.

"We still think there's more potential there and it will still take us the next half dozen yeards to reach equilibrium in terms of market share."

His colleague, F. P. Schneider, is chairman and one of a third generation of Schneiders to run the company which employs 2,400 workers.

In the seven fiscal years between 1968 and 1976, Schneider multiplied sales by 3.5 times — to more than $217 million. It increased profit three times, to about $3 million from $1 million.

Profits still were moving upwards in the first half of this year.

Although progress has been gradual, Kenneth Murray, company president, said the decision to go national "was the right decision for us."

"Our efforts have met with a fair degree of success. The market was underdeveloped with respect to Schneider products."

Schneider is eyeing the Alberta and British Columbia markets.

The firm is convinced that it is better to operate one main plant than a series of branch facilities across the country.

Chairman Schneider said the company has been able to modernize the plant to achieve economies that have produced lower production costs.

This central processing has enabled the firm to maintain better control of product quality, vital if markets are to be served over long distances.

A major plant renovation was done in 1972 resulting in a 50 per cent increase in capacity.

"The level of optimum scale production goes up every year," the chairman said. "We need greater market areas to support a business."

Herbert Schneider said the plant is as efficient as any in the United States "but in order to be viable and efficient our retail market must be in Canada."

Murray said another major advantage is the plant's location in the centre of Ontario's hog industry.

He said the company also fits in well with the current trends in the industry toward more convenience foods and more food served away from home.

"Sliced luncheon meats are the original convenience food," he said.

As well, the company is well suited to prepare meats for use by institutional, hotel and restaurant trade.

In fact, last year sales to these markets accounted for 22 per cent of Schneider's business.

Boom Time for Bonds As Stock Market Limps

By AL FORREST
Times-Business Editor

With the stock market limping along, bonds are becoming more attractive than ever for the investor looking for the best deal for his money.

Bonds loack excitement but they provide a measure of security. This safety is particularly attractive at this time because the gamblers are not making very much.

Speculative stocks are trending down and the blue chips are rising by only small amounts.

Meanwhile, bond interest is ranging from 9.5 to 11 per cent.

Next to cash in the bank, bonds are the most attractive investment at this time.

The best one is Canada Savings Bonds because it is as good as money in the bank. The bonds are cashable at full value at any time.

First-year interest is a little disappointing at only 8.5 per cent but it improves to 9.25 per cent for the remaining eight years for a net yield of 9.13 per cent.

No more than $15,000 worth of Canada Savings Bonds can be purchased by each investor. But then, only about $10,000 should be put into this type of investment because of tax regulations. Anything more than $1,000 in interest income per year is taxed as regular income.

Other bond issues which have proved popular include the follwing:

Ontario Hydro 10 per cent bonds due May 18, 2001, yielding 9.89 per cent and selling at $101;

Government of Canada 9.5 per cent bonds due June 15, 1994, yielding 9.5 per cent and selling at $100;

Quebec 9.38 per cent bonds due March 1, 2001, yielding 9.3 per cent and selling at $100.75.

High-yielding corporate bonds and debentures include:

Chrysler Credit 11 per cent bonds due Aug. 15, 1991, yielding 10.76 per cent and selling at $101.75. These are retractable to 1983;

B.C. Tel 10.25 per cent bonds due April 1, 1995, yielding 10.25 per cent and selling at $100;

Eaton Centre 10.5 per cent bonds due June 30, 2000, yielding 10.33 per cent and selling at $101.50;

Imperial Oil 9.75 per cent bonds due Feb. 15, 1995, yielding 9.9 per cent and selling at $98.75;

RoyNat 10 per cent bonds due Sept 15, 1981, yielding 9.81 per cent and selling at $100.75.

Investment counsellors expect the bond market to remain strong as long as the stock market continues to perform poorly. When the market resumes its upward surge, many investors will sell their bonds and move into stocks. This sell-off of bonds will lower the cash value of some of the less popular issues, although the interest rate is secure. The sell-off will not disturb those investors who are interested mainly in a steady, safe income.

Gold Miners Seek Cheap Financing

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — Canada's gold mining industry might be able to survive without government subsidy if the companies "were provided with money at a cheap borrowing rate in order to stockpile gold themselves," the president of Pamour Porcupine Mines Ltd. says.

D. E. Schmitt said at a news conference that low interest loans from the federal government would enable the gold mines to stockpile production until the price of gold returns to higher levels.

This would allow the gold mines to survive over a period when the price of gold is depressed because of International Monetary Fund IMF auctions.

Schmitt also is senior vice-president in charge of mining for Noranda Mines Ltd. of Toronto. Pamour operates five mine sites in the Timmins area.

A company such as Pamour does not have the financial resources for stockpiling, Schmitt said.

His proposal would circumvent arguments by federal officials that the government cannot stockpile gold because of its agreements with the IMF.

Schmitt said there are a variety of possible solutions to the problems facing the gold industry in Canada and his company and the Mining Association of Canada MAC will be pursuing these with federal officials.

The gold committee of the association is meeting a federal government inter-departmental committee this week to discuss the gold crisis.

Kitimat-Edmonton No 'Pipe Dream'

EDMONTON (CP) — The people behind a proposed crude oil pipeline from Kitimat, B.C., to Edmonton see their project as a key addition to Canada's oil transportation system.

The 760-mile pipeline and a companion deepwater terminal development at Kitimat would cost an estimated $500 million.

Its immediate purpose would be to transport crude oil from Alaska from the British Columbia coast to Edmonton, where it will be fed into existing pipeline system for shipment to the northern United States.

"The terminal and pipeline system would complete another leg of Canada's total oil transportation system" said Bill Pearce, co-ordinator of an engineering design committee working on the project.

Pearce is assistant manager of engineering with Interprovincial Pipe Line Ltd., one of 10 partners in the project. The others are Trans Mountain Pipe Line Co. Ltd., Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas Co. Ltd., Ashland Oil Inc., Koch Oil Co., Continental Oil Co., Farmers' Union Central Exchange Inc., Murphy Oil Corp., Husky Oil Co. of Delaware and Marathon Oil Corp.

Pearce said the pipeline would provide an alternate method of bringing imported oil to central Canada from Indonesia, China, Russia and even the Middle East.

"Saudi Arabia is closer to Kitimat than it is to Portland, Maine," he said, suggesting that crude oil from the Middle East may eventually be flowing into the Ontario market to supplement declining domestic production.

The pipeline would keep existing Canadian oil pipelines operating at capacity and earn foreign exchange for Canada on the shipment of Alaskan oil to American destinations in the early 1980s when Alberta production is well below pipeline capacity.

The interprovincial line, which runs from Edmonton to Montreal and serves the U.S. Midwest, is already operating below capacity and Trans Mountain, the driving force behind the Kitimat-Edmonton idea, is in an even more difficult situation.

Trans Mountain, which runs from Edmonton to Vancouver, was expanded in the late 1960s to carry Alberta oil to the U.S. Pacific Northwest. But export restrictions imposed during the last two years have left the line operating well below its capacity.

The Kitimat-Edmonton proposal calls for the use of a Mountain system between Jasper and Edmonton. The section was built beside Trans Mountain's main line to expand its capacity but is no longer required.

The Kitimat-Edmonton line would also connect with the Trans Mountain line at Tete Jaune Cache west of Jasper and may be used to transport Alaskan oil into Seattle.

Pearce said oil transmission lines within Alberta, which bring oil from southern areas of the province to the main pipeline terminals in Edmonton, will not be needed when production from Alberta fields is depleted.

The Alberta pipelines could eventually be reversed and used to transport Alaskan or offshore oil into Montana if the Kitimat-Edmonton line is built.

Alyeska Working Through Winter

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Although the work force is expected to take a major drop, Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. plans to keep at least five Trans-Alaska pipeline camps open this winter.

A memo written by Frank R. Fisher, manager of environmental protection for the consortium building the pipeline, said camps would remain open at Five Mile, Dietrich, Galbraith, Happy Valley and Franklin Bluffs. His Aug. 15 memo also indicated Chandalar camp could remain staffed throughout the frigid winter months.

All but Five Mile camp are located in Section 5, the northernmost portion of the pipeline route. Work in Section 5 is trailing behind schedule. The pipeline portion of the oil project originally was scheduled to be completed this fall. Alyeska says it expects to pump oil through the 800-mile tube next summer.

Alyeska has said it expects to keep pump stations and the Valdez terminal fully staffed as workers push to complete those facilities before the July 1977 deadline.

According to a July 19 memo, the Valdez terminal work force is expected to experience a slow reduction from its October peak of 3,482 to 1,022 next June. By next July, the work force is expected to be trimmed to 200.

B.C. TEL ISSUES BONDS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Directors of British Columbia Telephone Co. have approved the issuing of first mortgage bonds totalling $60 million.

The issue will be offered at par and will bear an interest coupon of 10¼ per cent. The 25 year bonds will be dated October 15, 1976, the company said in a news release.

Subject to approval of securities commissions and similar bodies in all provinces, the bonds will be offered in Canada by a group headed by Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and company.

Proceeds of the issue will be used to retire temporary short term loans incurred for the extension and improvement of the company's plant facilities. Sale of these bonds will complete the company's external financing requirements for the year.

CONSENT FORM RULE SNAGS POLIO SHOTS

ATLANTA (UPI) — A U.S.-wide shortage of polio vaccine has developed because a drug company is demanding recipients be warned of the drug's possible side effects, according to the National Centre for Disease Control.

The CDC said Tuesday that health departments across the U.S. are running out of the vaccine just when mass immunization programs for schoolchildren are reaching their peak.

It attributed the shortage to the insistence of Lederle Laboratories that all persons receiving the vaccine in public health programs sign informed consent forms which warn of possible harmful side effects.

Lederle wants the federal government to insure by contract that parents or guardians of children receiving the vaccine sign the forms, according to John Williams, who handles drug contracts for the CDC.

The CDC said the situation in South Carolina is so critical that the state's health department has temporarily suspended enforcement of a law which requires children to be vaccinated against polio before entering the first grade.

South Carolina reported a supply of only 50 doses, compared to an estimated need of 68,000. Pennsylvania had 1,000 against a need of 50,000.

U.S. Navy Tug Begins Undersea Side-Scan

NEW LIFE-SAVER device for shocking a coronary victim's failing heart back to a normal beat is demonstrated by Dallas, Tex., fire department team. The miniature IPCO/Partridge defibrillator was shown at a hospital convention.

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. navy tug Shakori left the Scottish port of Glasgow Tuesday to start searching for the F-14 Tomcat fighter plane that rolled off the carrier John F. Kennedy on Sept. 14.

The, Shakori is carrying with her a torpedo-shaped device—six inches in diameter and 30 inches long — to drag back and forth across the bottom in hopes of finding the $14 million plane.

The device — nicknamed a "fish" but formally called side-scan sonar — sends out sound waves from both sides of its body as it is trolled about 40 feet off the ocean bottom. The F-14 sank in 1,890 feet of water about 75 miles northwest of Scapa Flow, Scotland.

The sound waves — which travel about 300 meters through the water from both sides of the fish — transmit to the ship a profile of objects on the ocean bottom. Specialists on the Shakori expect to see the side-scan sonar sketch for them on paper a profile of these objects in enough detail to identify the lost plane.

How soon — if at all — the fish finds the plane will depend heavily on how accurate the Navy was in giving a fix on where the F-14 sank, specialists said. Another unknown is how far the plane was carried by currents before coming to rest on the North Atlantic sea bottom.

Ford Rehearses For TV

By The Associated Press

On the eve of the first debate between the U.S. presidential candidates, President Ford was holding dress rehearsals today at the White House while Jimmy Carter was studying issues after offering his first detailed suggestion for reorganizing the government.

Their first televised debate, on economic and domestic issues, will be held in Philadelphia on Thursday night. Two more Ford-Carter debates, on other issues, will follow.

Carter's aides said the Democrate nominee planned no special preparations for the debate other than to rest and read briefing books designed to keep him abreast of the issues.

As Carter relaxed at home in Plains, Ga., his campaign organization issued the first details of what the Democratic nominee has promised would be an overhaul of the federal bureaucracy.

In a statement, Carter said he would abolish four existing agencies, that now deal with energy questions, replacing them with a cabinet-level department.

Such a move, he said, would eliminate "the overlap, duplication and inconsistency of the present structure."

Meanwhile, Ford spokesmen brushed aside published reports that a lobbyist for U.S. Steel Corp. paid for golf outings for the president while he was a congressman and that the Watergate special prosecutor has subpoenaed records from the Republican party in Ford's home county.

About the golfing, White House spokesman Ron Nessen said Ford was twice the guest of William Whyte, the lobbyist, at the Pine Valley Golf Club near Clementon, N.J.

"If the President thought there was anything wrong, he wouldn't have done it."

At the same time, Watergate special prosecutor Charles Ruff subpoenaed records of the Kent County Republican party, headquartered in Ford's hometown of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Auto Strike May Bring Four-Day Week Closer

By ROBERT KAISER

WASHINGTON — If the United Auto Workers Union has its way the current strike against the Ford Motor Co., now a week old, will end with an historic breakthrough that could change the face of U.S. industry.

UAW officials are not talking publicly in such grand terms, but that is the privately acknowledged meaning of the union's demand for more paid time off from Ford. The UAW wants its 1976 contracts with the auto industry to mark a long step forward toward the four-day work week or the six-hour day.

The union's leadership does not regard the four-day week as an idle dream for some distant future. Privately, some of them speculate that it could be standard within a decade, perhaps as soon as 1982.

The UAW has established many precedents for working conditions and benefits during the past two generations. In 1948 it won the first cost-of-living escalater in a major American industry; in 1949 the first fully-funded, non-contributory pension plan; in 1950 the first hospitalization insurance; in 1955 the first guaranteed income scheme; in 1964 the first early retirement plan; and in 1973, the first fully paid retirement for any worker who has 30 years on the job.

A radical reduction in work time is regarded inside the union as a natural next step, though the industry is not yet prepared to agree. Ford's reluctance on this point may be the principal reason for the present strike.

Negotiators for both sides met again in Ford's headquarters in Dearborn, Mich., Tuesday, but no significant progress was reported. The strike has idled more than 160,000 Ford workers in 22 states.

The UAW contends that the productivity of its members has increased so much that they have earned a shorter workweek. The union wants a shorter week to spread the available work among more people — in effect, the maximize the work force in the auto industry. The union also believes that the best form of compensation it can get for its members, apart from high wages and good fringe benefits, is more time to themselves.

"Factory work is lousy," in the words of Melvin Glasser, director of ther UAW's social security department. "Its very bad work."

Since 1973, the UAW's senior members have, in effect, voted with their feet to prove the same point. According to Glasser, when the Chrysler Corp. agreed in 1973 to allow anyone with 30 years experience (25 years in a foundry) to retire, Chrysler estimated that nine per cent of those eligible would take advantage of this option. The union disagreed; it predicted that three per cent would take the early retirement. In fact, since 1973, a third of the experienced workers at Chrysler have decided to retire.

So the union is now convinced that its members want to work less than they now do.

A more pressing argument for more paid time off, however, is to share the work. This became an urgent issue during the 1975 depression in the auto industry, when hundreds of thousands of auto workers suffered layoffs. The industry is now poised for a new boom, but its work-force has not grown back to pre-depression levels, a signal to the union that automation and increased productivity continue to eat away at the number of auto-making jobs.

U.S. VETOES LONGER DST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. House, by one vote defeated a move to add another month to the current half-year of daylight saving time.

The measure would have started daylight saving time on the third Sunday in March, effective in 1977, and ended it on the third Sunday in October. Daylight time now starts on the last Sunday in April and ends on the last Sunday in October.

Maryland Gov. 'Not Bought'

BALTIMORE (WP) — Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel "was not bought" and "cannot be bought," Arnold Weiner, the governor's defence attorney, said Tuesday in response to prosecutors' charges Monday that nearly $200,000 worth of gifts from three friends to the governor was exchanged for government benefits.

"If someone was out to buy Marvin Mandel, they just didn't let him in on the secret," Wiener said in his opening agrument. Prosecutor Barnet Skilnik had charged that co-defendants W. Dale Hess, Harry Rodgers III and Will Rodgers—three businessmen and close friends of Mandel — had "bought" the governor with favors and business interest.

"It is no crime for a governor to enter into business trasactions with his friends," Winer said. "It is no crime to do favors for a friend if he is the governor. It is only a crime if it was a bribe."

BIG GM MODELS GOING UP 4.9%

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors car buyers will pay more money for less car under price increases announced by the No. 1 automaker on its 1977 full-sized and luxury models.

GM said Tuesday it has raised prices an average 4.9 per cent for the top-of-the-line Buicks, Pontiacs, Oldsmobiles, Chevrolets and Cadillacs — nearly a percentage point less than the company's fleet average increase for all of its new cars.

Now that GM's announcement has been made, Ford and Chrysler are expected to post their figures later this week. Prices for smaller GM models were announced earlier.

In announcing prices on all but its full-sized models last month, GM said its 1977 line will be up an average of $269, or 5.8 per cent, on the base models and that the prices of the full-sized models were factored into that figure. A company spokesman said the dollar figure represented by the average boost for the full-sized car is not yet available.

For all models, GM base sticker prices with normal options will be $339 more than last year. Big cars for the 1977 model year will be smaller than last year's model because GM has decreased the exterior size to improve fuel economy.

Options are increasing another $69, or an average 6.2 per cent, GM said.

Cherry Dye Banned in U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government today banned the red dye used to color maraschino cherries, despite claims the action will cause economic disaster in the industry which produces them.

It also banned a black dye used in eyebrow pencils and mascara and once used to color licorice, gumdrops and other candy.

The bans, effective immediately, are necessary because of unanswered safety questions, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration said in a statement.

In the case of the cherry dye, red No. 4, the ban is needed because of a possible "association between the color and urinary bladder polyps (tumors) and atrophy of the adrenals (glands) in dogs" tested, the FDA said.

Under the order, red 4 may no longer be used in any food or ingested drug but it may be used in externally applied medicines, such as mercurochrome.

The other day, carbon black, is banned because there are no test methods available to detect possible cancer causing agents that may exist in it, the agency said. It may no longer be used in food, drugs or cosmetics.

The only approved food use for red 4 was in maraschino cherries, of which American consumers buy $100 million every year.

The maraschino cherry association contends there is no adequate substitute for red 4 and the ban will result in cherries that are an unappetizing dirty orange color.

It foresees a ruined market for the 18,000 to 20,000 cherry growers — mostly in Michigan, California, Oregon, Washington and New York — whose entire crops wind up in cakes, cookies and other confections, or in the bottom of whiskeyy sour and manhattan glasses.

The carbon black ban will have less impact. The cosmetic, toiletry and fragrance association, which represents 90 per cent of that industry, said "many of our members have already switched to iron oxide" because of a "supply problem" with carbon black.

An FDA spokesman, however, said the color is still being used in cosmetics and is "very important" to the industry, although he could not estimate the actual usage.

The U.S. National Confectioners Association has said the black color was once used for candy but substitutes have been found.

The bans are the second major FDA attack on food colors this year. In February, after a decade of controversy, the agency banned red No. 2, once the most widely used food coloring in the U.S., because of safety questions including its possible role as a cancer causer.

WHO CARES? Welder Billy Corbett shows shattered results of a karate demonstration in which he cracked both wrists while breaking 5,800 bricks in Anchorage, Alaska. Trying to raise money for muscular dystrophy, Corbett flailed away for an hour and 45 minutes to break Guinness Book of Records mark, but only four youths showed up to watch.

Top Drug Suspects In U.S. Tax Probe

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. Internal Revenue Service is checking the tax returns of 375 persons believed to be among the country's top-ranking traffickers in illicit narcotics, IRS commissioner Donald Alexander said Tuesday.

Alexander disclosed this information in an interview in which he discussed the IRS's new efforts to assist the Drug Enforcement Administration's war against the $10 billion annual traffic in heroin and other illegal drugs.

In response to a directive from Persident Gerald Ford, Alexander and DEA administrator Peter Bensinger signed an agreement on July 27 calling for intensified co-operation between the two agencies.

The pact gives IRS responsibility for pursuing high-level drug dealers who violate federal tax laws by failing to report and pay taxes on profits earned through illegal narcotics dealings.

"DEA has already given us the names and some details as to 375 individuals," Alexander said, "and we're well into the process of pulling the tax returns of these individuals and seeing what they show.

"As a result of what we've found, some already have been put under tax-evasion investigations and we expect that, as we complete checking their returns, others will be, too."

Neither Alexander nor DEA officials would reveal the names of those persons being probed. However, Alexander said, all 375 fall into the category of what DEA calls "Class I violators" — persons suspected of being the leaders or financiers of large-scale narcotics rings with dealings running into millions of dollars.

IRS's enlistment in the drug war is an extension of its long-time involvement in combatting organized crime. Ever sence the successful 1930 prosecution of Al Capone on tax charges, the federal tax laws have provided an effective weapon for putting leading rackets figures in prison.

This is done by making a "net worth case" — laboriously piecing together a picture of a target individual's financial status by tracking down his holdings and expenditures and then comparing this net worth with the person's reported income.

Teens in U.S. Can't Read A Newspaper Index—Study

United Press International

A U.S. wide test of reading skills shows a newspaper index befuddles 60 per cent of the 13-year-olds and 41 per cent of youths 17.

The assessment of reading also included nine-year-olds, not tested on the paper index question.

The nine-year-olds go to the head of the class. Their reading skills ,compared to the little or no improvement among 13- and 17-year-olds, went up 1.2 percentage points — compared to scores by nine-year-olds four years ago.

Skills among black nine-year-olds went up the most. 4.8 percentage points. But the blacks still are 13 points below whites.

At all ages tested, girls continued to read better than boys.

The report on reading skills was put out by National Assessment of Educational Progress, a project of the Education Commission of the States in Denver, Colo.

The newspaper index question was included in tests adminisetred to 13- and 17-year-olds. Four years ago, 42 per cent of the 13-year-olds were successful in this category. Forty per cent were successful this time around.

Among 17-year-olds, 63 per cent succeeded in the newspaper index test question in 1971. This last time, 59 per cent were successful.

Subjects were asked which pages to check for television schedule, weather, stock averages, beauty hints. They also were asked if the paper carried a bridge column.

Vibrant, Warm, Human Kind Of Town

'Big T', You're So Exciting!

Ever since I came to Canada eight years ago people have been telling me I wouldn't like "Hog Town."

Toronto, they said emphatically, was a terrible place, a concrete jungle, a cold, impersonal dog-eat-dog kind of town.

Finally, I decided to see for myself. With a friend I shall call John because that's his name, I set off to drive across this great country to Toronto and back with a few days to spare in between to wander the streets and feel the mood of the Big T.

And now, for those who have never been there and for the benefit of ex-Torontonians who for years have had to listen to people here downgrade their old home city, I must say I found it an exciting place.

It is a vibrant city that has not retired from life. It throbs with the surging movement of people on the subway, in the stores and on the streets. And yet it can be a warm, human place . . . if you take time to see the people.

Like many of the world's great cities — London, Paris, Rome, Singapore — Toronto is a cosmopolitan wonderland. People of all nationalities mingle on the sidewalk. Along exciting Bloor Street, the store names and the wares they sell might be in Greek, Italian, Hungarian, Chinese and even English.

Like a scene from France or Belgium, young people sit chatting over a beer or a coffee at quaint little roadside tables sheltered from the hot September sun by gaily-colored umbrellas.

At Christie Pits Park on Bloor Street, four marvellous old Sicilian men, their swarthy skin and dark clothes making them look like part of the cast for the Godfather, sit at a picnic table nattering away in their native tongue and playing cards.

And along fascinating Yonge Street, the explicit pictures and signs inviting you in to strip shows and body-rub parlors stand next to names like McDonalds.

Not everyone, of course, is happy with the new look the once-quiet city known before the Second World War as "Toronto the Good" has taken on.

'We Can Do Without It'

"It's a fascination we can do without," the wife of retired Metropolitan Police detective superintendent Adolphus Payne told me, referring to the strip joints.

But somehow, like the multilingual signs and the men selling fruit and vegetables on the sidewalk in the European way, it all adds spice to the mixture that is Toronto today. Well, I mean to say, little old Victoria, with all those British immigrants and not much else is a bit on the stuffy side, what chaps?

And another illusion that was shattered for me was that, despite what our premier's father used to have us believe, we in Beautiful B.C. don't have the market cornered on beauty.

Because I have a passion for trees, I found the Prairies rather desolate but loved the gentle rolling country in northern Ontario where the hundreds of tiny lakes sparkled in the sunlight and the leaves were just starting to turn those gorgeous shades of red and gold.

Unfortunately our trip, combining pleasure with research work for a book, was rushed. John and I set some crazy kind of record, not stopping along the way but alternating the driving with turns at snoozing in the back of the van and covering the 2,800 miles to Toronto in three days, and the return journey in three days, too.

It was pretty tiring but it was pretty cheap, also. We took enough food to manage with en route or fasted and didn't spend anything on motels. In Toronto, we stayed with John's brother so our only expense was the B.C. ferry fares and just over $100 each way for gas.

Of course, for some vehicles the gas bill could be a lot higher. My economical VW camper managed 25 miles to the gallon despite some high-speed travel on the Prairies. And the cross-country gas prices were a bit of a shock, ranging from 72 cents a gallon in Calgary to $1.01 in one Ontario town.

Despite the hurried nature of the trip, it was a most memorable experience. And I shall do it again — with the family and a little slower next time.

In fact, it surprises me that more Canadians living in the west don't take the opportunity to see all of their own great country before embarking on those exotic and more expensive holidays south of the border.

Max Low photos.

LEAVE WELL ENOUGH ALONE, CITY TOLD

'Improvements' Harm Park

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

So-called "improvements" to Beacon Hill Park in recent years have alienated some sections of the park from public use, subjected others to unduly heavy wear and detracted from the park's original esthetic appeal.

These and other criticisms of park planning — or rather, the lack of it — are aired in a detailed brief which will be submitted to the city parks committee Thursday by the Beacon Hill Park Association.

The brief repeats the association's request to council earlier this summer, for a freeze on all further development in Beacon Hill Park until a comprehensive policy has been established for all city parks.

It claims there is a limit to the number of "improvements" the park can continue to accept without eroding its value as a major natural park, and warns that even without current development threats from new roads or buildings Beacon Hill Park is in danger.

"It is endangered by the lack of a coherent plan. It is endangered by 'improvements' and a park policy which does not recognize the validity of the motto 'Leave well enough alone,' " the brief states.

Association vice-president Terry Reksten, who wrote and researched the 19-page document approved by the BHPA executive last week, says in the introduction that "citizen activism" to preserve the park from misuse and encroachment spans more than a century.

In 1859, for example, only a year after the park reserve had been established by Governor James Douglas, "it was discovered that individuals had been permitted to buy lots within the park boundary and were busily clearing the land for houses."

This loss rankled for many years, and in 1882 there was another scare when the Agricultural Association was granted 20 acres of the park to build exhibition buildings.

The attempt was thwarted, however, when a private citizen obtained a court injunction restraining the city from setting aside the land for the buildings.

Against this background of past mistakes and threatened erosion, Reksten says it's reasonable to assume that an awareness of the park's natural qualities would increase with the growing urbanization of the surrounding municipalities.

REKSTEN
. . . calls for freeze

"But this has not been the case. The park is all too often regarded as a city-owned vacant lot, as a conveniently inexpensive site for public buildings and public roads."

The brief, which illustrates its arguments with a number of color photographs, contrasts a plan of the present park with the plan drawn up in 1889 by Scottish landscape architect John Blair.

The latter, it claims, embodies principles of park design still valid today, whereas the present layout "demonstrates only too clearly the results of 'ad hoc' decisons made in response to pressures of the moment."

Blair's balanced plan attempted to disperse the various attractions widely throughout the park, to avoid congestion and over-use. But today almost all Beacon Hill's major attractions are crammed into a small area representing less than 15 per cent of the total acreage, while other areas with the potential to attract visitors "have become alienated from general use."

For example, the eastern edge of the park adjacent to Cook Street attracts few visitors as "it has been given over to the use of private sports clubs and has become the location of the parks maintenance yard."

Yet, when it was already apparent that the central area of the park was "overburdened with attractions," more items were added or extended in recent years — including the children's playground, miniature golf course and Garry Oak Farm (animal enclosure).

Among the brief's specific objections and criticisms:

—Some older play equipment still remains imbedded in asphalt, although an adjacent "adventure" playground is sensibly set in sand to diminish the possibility of serious accidents.

—The park's two centres of attraction for children are the playground and the animal enclosure, yet to get from one to the other children have to cross two park roadways. There's an additional hazard because cars have to back out from the Garry Oak Farm parking area.

—The many rock-faced planters added to the park recently are both "ugly and unnecessary," and add to maintenance costs.

—The city's long-range plan to phase out automobile traffic during hours of peak pedestrian use appears to have been shelved, after the implementation of earlier stages.

—Not enough attention is given to esthetics. The chain link fencing used for the animal enclosure is "neither park-like nor farm-like," and the design of some buildings such as washrooms and shower facilities does not blend with the park's natural setting.

Rec Centre: With or Without

A $750,000 recreation centre in Central Saanich will go ahead right away — with or without a government grant — if a majority of voters approve it in a referendum Saturday.

Mayor Jean Butler said today she is hopeful the province will contribute a one-third grant next year but nothing has been promised and council is not counting on it.

The former provincial government gave such grants to approved recreation projects but Recreation Minister Grace McCarthy has said recently there is no more money available this year.

Main feature of the proposed centre is a 25-metre swimming pool but there will also be a sauna, whirlpool, activity rooms, kitchen and offices. It would be built on municipal land on Wallace Drive north of Centennial Park.

Cost of borrowing to build the centre combined with operating costs would add about 6 per cent to property tax bills in Central Saanich. This would be trimmed to about 5 per cent if the province does provide a one-third grant.

The referendum requires just a simple majority of over 50 per cent for approval. There are about 3,500 eligible voters.

Voting hours Saturday are 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at three polling stations, the municipal hall, Brentwood elementary and Keating elementary schools.

There will be advance polls Thursday and Friday at the municipal hall, from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Sewerage Costs Snag City-B.C. Land Deal

The city of Victoria and the provincial government appear to have buried their differences over alleged "profiteering" by the government on a piece of property which the city sold for housing purposes.

But one big snag — the question of sewerage costs — remains to be cleared away before the provincial housing department can proceed with plans for a 61-unit development on the 4.5-acre Mount Stephen site near Hillside Avenue.

The matter was discussed by city council at an in-camera session Tuesday, and Mayor Mike Young said today council's main concern is that a development of the density proposed will place an added strain on what is already an inadequate sewer system in that area.

He said council wants to reach an agreement with the province whereby the government will cover the city's off-site costs incurred in extending and improving the sewer services.

That money could come from the sum the government receives when it sells the site to a developer, he suggested.

The province bought the land from Victoria for $200,000 and was proposing last June to offer it for sale to developers at $600,000. The move produced accusations that the government was a "ripoff developer."

Young said today, however, that the city now agrees the property should be sold at market price.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Can you tell me, please, if "tube lights" burn less power than ordinary bulbs of the same power? A.J.

A. The big difference between fluorescent (tube lights) fixtures and incandescent bulbs is the output of light, the fluorescent lighting producing twice the light for the same wattage. This, then, means they burn less power for the light produced.

Helmcken . . . 'a love of history'

City Archivist Named Citizen of the Year

City archivist Ainslie Helmcken today was named citizen of the year at the annual meeting of Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce at The Empress.

Ald. Helen Beirnes, in announcing the award on behalf of the chamber, said it was a fitting tribute after a lifetime of "seeking out, recording and preserving the history of the City of Victoria." Beirnes is a former president of the chamber.

Helmcken, 75, has long been interested in history, she said, and became official archivist in 1966.

He is the grandson of Dr. J. D. Helmcken, Hudson's Bay Co. doctor who came to Victoria in 1850. His father, Dr. James Douglas Helmcken, was also a physician, who practised in Victoria.

"With this medical background, Ainslie Helmcken was vaccinated with a love of history at an early age," Beirnes said.

His father was born in Victoria in 1858 and his mother, Ethel Mouat, was born here in 1865. Ethel Mouat's father had first arrived in Victoria in 1842 in a sailing ship.

During the years, Helmcken has collected or become custodian of 50,000 old photographs and line drawings depicting various chapters in the history of British Columbia, particularly the Victoria area.

He has also collected thousands of letters, paintings and other items of historical interest.

He will turn 76 next Tuesday.

In presenting him with the award, including a silver bowl, Beirnes said the history of Victoria is richer, fuller and more colorful because of the efforts of Ainslie Helmcken and his family.

The citizen of the year award is presented annually by the chamber for outstanding service to the community by a local man or woman.

Last year's winner was Margaret McClung. Winner is selected by the chamber's executive committee from among names nominated by the general public.

Police Taped Penthouse Visit

VANCOUVER (CP) — County court heard a police tape recording containing discussions of the New Democratic Party, masochistic sex, Mincome, Premier Bill Bennett and sexual fantasies.

The tape was recorded by Constable Bruce Ballantyne, an undercover vice squad officer, who testified Monday at the trial of Joe Philliponi, Ross, Domenick, Rose Filippone, Jan Sedlak and Minerva Kelly, all charged with conspiring to live off the avails of prostitution and with conspiring to corrupt public morals.

Ballantyne said he wore a concealed body-pack, and electronic device enabling him to record conversation at the Penthouse, a downtown nightclub, and transmit it to an unmarked police vehicle outside.

The tape begins with the constable introducing himself to a woman named Judy. He tells her that he is an automotive parts salesman from New Westminster and : "If you need a headlight, come and see me."

The tape, made on Dec. 11, date of the last B.C. election, includes a discussion of provincial politics.

Judy says the NDP is involved somehow in a phone tapping operation conducted by the Co-ordinated Law Enforcement Unit.

After a political discussion, Ballantyne and Judy are heard discussing an arrangement which will cost $60 for a short time and $100 for an hour.

Judy tells Ballantyne that he can get a cash advance on his credit card but it will cost him a 20-per cent surcharge.

Later on the tape, the constable is heard introducing himself to a man, identified in court as Joe Philliponi, and explaining he just met a girl upstairs.

The man and the police constable make an arrangement in which $72 is charged on the card to give Ballantyne $60.

Toward the end of the conversation with the man, a radio commentator is heard on the tape discusing the election and suggesting that Bill Bennett ran a lousy campaign.

Kidnap Response 'Comedy'

SURREY (CP) — An RCMP spokesman says police response to the Sept. 7 kidnapping of two-week-old Cameron Green was "a comedy of errors."

The baby was recovered two days later in San Francisco following a combined RCMP-Federal Bureau of Investigation hunt.

Inspector Jim Stewart, assistant-officer-in-charge of the Surrey detachment, said RCMP civilian dispatchers thought the reported kidnapping was a family dispute and didn't assign it an emergency priority.

The kidnapping started at 11 a.m. Sept. 7 when a woman masquerading as a university researcher tied up Gayle Green and kidnapped her son Cameron in a brown paper bag.

Mrs. Green, who was left tied up in a bedroom, managed to escape from some of her bonds and staggered to neighbor Tom MacDonald's house.

MacDonald said he was talking to a friend on the phone when the hysterical Mrs. Green appeared at his door.

He untied her, he said, and told his friend to call the police.

MacDonald says his notes show police were alerted at 12:06 and when he returned to the house at 12:38 after a fruitless search of the neighborhood they still hadn't arrived.

MacDonald was told police called at 12:18, while he was out of the house, to see if the original call had been a hoax.

MacDonald then placed a second call and the police arrived at 12:43, 37 minutes after Mrs. Green arrived, sobbing hysterically, at his door.

Inspector Stewart said soon after the first call on the Green kidnapping police recived a call on a man who had taken his son hostage and was threatening to shoot anyone who came near.

"This was given first priority and we sent a car around to this disturbance first," Inspector Stewart said. "As it happened the woman who phoned us was exaggerating and the incident wasn't as serious as first thought."

After police finished with the hostage report a car was dispatched to what RCMP still thought was a "family disturbance" at the Green residence.

Inspector Stewart said there were reports that other policemen were in the vicinity of the Green kidnapping but he doubted that the baby could have been recovered any more quickly.

Sanitation Lack Blamed for High Indian TB

VANDERHOOF (CP) — Poor sanitation and crowded conditions on the reserve north central B.C. have created a large incidence of tuberculosis, according to Sophie Thomas, a Stoney Creek band elder.

Mrs. Thomas, president of the Indian Homemakers Association, said in a telephone interview Monday band members fear disease is on the increase.

There are at least 10 reported cases of tuberculosis on the reserve with a population of about 400. That's about 20 times as high as the rate among the general population.

Mrs. Thomas said 12 to 16 persons can be found living in a small two-bedroom house lacking proper sanitation.

"An old woman must crawl on all fours in the winter to get to the outside washroom because she is sick and there are no facilities for her inside.

"There is very poor sanitation in places, no sewers and a great fear disease will spread," she said.

Mrs. Thomas said medical health nurses are doing the best job possible on the reserve but are hampered by the number of patients to see and lack of funding.

The federal medical services division confirmed six new and four relapsed cases of tuberculosis were reported on the Stoney Creak reserve in the first five months of this year.

Dr. G. C. Butler, regional director for the federal medical services division, said in a telephone interview from Vancouver that no new cases have been found since May but a medical specialist will be on the reserve in October.

Dr. Butler termed the incidence of tuberculosis on the Stoney Creek Indian Reserve "a very high rate for that population."

Dr. Butler said the cases of tuberculosis seem to be under control and most victims are being treated in their home.

Dr. Butler said the incidence of tuberculosis is much higher among native Indians that whites and cited overcrowding, lack of proper nutrition and alcohol as factors contributing to its spread.

A report prepared by Dr. Butler also shows alcohol abuse to be the major health problem among Indians in B.C. and one which contributes directly to many deaths.

"Forty per cent of Indian deaths are due to accidents and violence and excessive use of alcohol is associated with most of these deaths," he said.

Dr. Butler said $15 million has been budgeted by the federal government for controlling alcohol abuse in Indians.

Japan Unites Whalers

VANCOUVER (CP) The Japan Whaling Association has announced reorganization of the Japanese whaling industry into a single, joint enterprise which will cut the country's whaling force in half and observe International Whaling Commission restrictions.

Greenpeace Foundation president Bob Hunter of Vancouver said Monday, "recent announcements by the Japanese whaling industry that they are consolidating their six whaling companies into one joint company points out what we have known all along the whaling industry is gearing down their operations to coincide with the extinction of the whales."

The Japan Whaling Association news release said the new company, the Japan Joint Whaling Company, has been capitalized at $10 million and owns three mother ships and 20 catcher boats.

The release said the new company will send one fleet to the North Pacific and two to the Antarctic instead of the three fleets which have been sent to each location in the past.

Hunter said Greenpeace is planning another expedition for next summer to track the Russian and Japanese whalers and "harass their operation to the limits of our capability.

Computer Crime Wave Starting, Says RCMP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Computer frauds and corporate bribery cases likely will become more prevalent in Canada, delegates at the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants conference were told Tuesday.

"We are convinced it is just a matter of time before we have to investigate a computer fraud," said Sgt. Rupert Bullock of the RCMP commercial crime section in Vancouver.

"We are certain computer frauds must be occurring, and we encourage you as accountants dealing with computerized information systems to advise us of any frauds you suspect may be occurring."

He said known cases indicate that individuals involved in such frauds move from company to company without any action being taken other than dismissal.

A major problem in white-collar crime is management's refusal to prosecute or even report it, said Robert St. Jacques, a former member of the Quebec Provincial Police and now with Pinkerton's of Canada in Montreal.

"It is estimated that 15 per cent of crimes involving computers are ever reported," he said. "Often the employees responsible are simply fired, move on to other jobs and begin again."

He said that many employers refuse to believe irregularities can occur in their companies, and cited a case where a manufacturer whose inventory accounts were in order had a general investigation and discovered several employees had stolen $2 million worth of merchandise during several years. Using the company's own trucks, the employees had sold the merchandise, without arousing any suspicion.

"Accountants can play a major role in prevention," said Sgt. Bullock. "Auditors must remember that they are employed by the shareholders, not by management."

He said the practice of auditors resigning when they run into problems relating to management activities is just avoiding the issue.

200 Expected At Inquest

VANDERHOOF (CP) — More than 200 people are expected to attend the inquest Saturday into the death of Coreen Thomas.

Thomas was struck by a car and killed July 3 as she walked home to the Stoney Creek Reserve. Indians in Vanderhoof claim whites deliberately try to run down Indians.

Kitty Bell, field worker for the B.C. Indian Homemakers Association, said Monday a caravan of Indians from Vancouver is coming to the inquest, scheduled for 9 a.m. in the Vanderhoof Elementary School.

Indian spokesmen throughout the region have also indicated many members of their bands will attend the inquest.

More than 35 witnesses will be called into the incident and the inquest is expected to last at least four days.

Harry Rankin of Vancouver will represent the Thomas family.

B.C. supervising coroner Glen MacDonald will preside at the inquest.

High Rent May Hush Youth Band

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The North Vancouver Youth Band may have to pack its instruments and move as a result of the district council's decision not to subsidize community use of schools.

The band had been charged $500 a year to use a school for band practice, the rent being waived the last two years.

The school board increased the rent to $5,000 this year, Alderman Don Bell told a council committee Monday.

Bell said the increase could force the band to cut back or even shut down.

Union Improves Seamen's Lot

VANCOUVER (CP) — A local union official has obtained $14,400 in back pay, improved living conditions and $400-a-month pay increases for 17 crew members of 18,000-ton Greek-owned M. V. Astyanax.

Tom McGrath, business agent for the Seamen's Local 400 of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers, won the increases for 16 East Indian seamen and a Jordanian.

The 17 seamen on the Astyanax complained of being illegally underpaid and of having to put up with unsanitary conditions.

They said they received only about $100 a month each in wages, $400 a month below the minimum International Transportation Workers' Federation wage for an able-bodied seaman.

They said the Greek seamen on the Astyanax had a much better rate of pay.

A reporter who toured the ship said rust chewed away at the vessel's paint job, cockroaches skittered over fruit and fish left uncovered in cupboards and the Astyanax was full of flies.

He said he toured the ship posing as a member of the seamen's union and found that the ship had only one working refrigerator and the washrooms smelled like stables.

Reds Five For Seven In Titles

By The Associated Press

It was champagne time in Cincinnati, a chance for the Reds to cavort in the clubhouse and let loose after a long summer of hotel rooms and plane rides.

Rookie pitcher Pat Zachry, whose eight-hit, 9-1 victory over San Diego Padres clinched the National League West title for the Reds, capered in a Groucho Marx rubber mask, flicking an imaginary cigar at anyone who wandered within range.

Catcher Johnny Bench chided club president Bob Howsam over the executive's inability to uncork a stubborn bottle of bubbly.

But manager Sparky Anderson, standing aside from the celebration, kept matters in focus.

"We know this was the easy part," said the silver-haired Cincinnati skipper, whose troops have won five West crowns in the past seven years. "It's been 54 years since a National League team has won back-to-back world championships—and that's our goal."

In Thursday's other National League games, Los Angeles Dodgers edged San Francisco Giants 3-2, Pittsburgh Pirates split a doubleheader with Chicago Cubs, winning the opener 4-3 and then losing 2-1 in 13 innings, Philadelphia Phillies beat St. Louis Cardinals 5-1, Montreal Expos shut out New York Mets 4-0 and Atlanta Braves topped Houston Astros 6-2.

The Reds had a relatively easy road to the West title, staying within three games of first place through the early going and taking the lead to stay on May 29.

Dick Allen hit a home run and two doubles and Mike Schmidt hit his 36th homer for the Phillies, who extended their lead in the East to five games over Pittsburgh. The Phillies have 13 games remaining, the Pirates just 11.

The Pirates won the opener on Rennie Stennett's two-run single with two out in the ninth, but the Cubs took the nightcap in 13 innings when Jerry Morales doubled and came home on Manny Trillo's two-out single, barely beating the throw home by Pirates right fielder Dave Parker.

Spies in the Oakland Bullpen

By The Associated Press

Spies in the bullpen . . . brush-back pitches from the mound . . . shouts of anger in the infield. It's nitty-gritty time in baseball's American League West.

Kansas City Royals and Oakland A's got down to cases Tuesday night in their long-awaited confrontation that may ultimately settle the Western Division race.

Before the game was over, Kansas City manager Whitey Herzog charged the A's with stealing signs from the bullpen wih binoculars, Kansas City batters were knocked down and out with pitches and players almost came to blows.

The Royals endured through it all, winning 3-1 to knock Oakland down a peg.

"I'd love to beat them two more and put them nine back," snapped Herzog. "Then they would really be desperate."

The A's are desperate enough now. They are seven games behind the division-leaders, with 11 games to go.

In the American League East, Baltimore Orioles denied New York a chance to clinch a tie for the title by beating the Yankees 11-8 in 10 innings.

In Tuesday's other American League games, California Angels nipped Texas Rangers 2-1, Minnesota Twins routed Chicago White Sox 13-6, Detroit Tigers defeated Cleveland Indians 5-3 and Boston Red Sox tripped Milwaukee Brewers 7-1 in the first game of a doubleheader before losing a 3-1 decision in the second game.

At Kansas City, the pressure was evident right away Tuesday night when Oakland pitcher Stan Bahnsen hit Amos Otis with a pitch and brushed back Hal McRae. Otis was carried from the game on a stretcher, but x-rays later indicated no serious injury.

After McRae was brushed back, he and on-deck batter John Mayberry stalked the mound, but were restrained by Herzog and the umpires.

Later, Herzog led the entire umpiring crew out to the A's bullpen, where binoculars were uncovered under a towel. Herzog insisted they be removed but the umpires rejected that request.

FLYING LOW. Frank Tavares of Pittsburgh Pirates is called safe at plate by umpire Ed Sudol as Chicago Cubs' catcher George Mitterwald is late with tag during first inning of National League baseball doubleheader opener Tuesday in Chicago. Tavares scored from second on infield hit and error. Pittsburgh took this game 4-3 but Chicago bounced back to take the second 2-1 in 13 innings to lose ground to Philadelphia in National League pennant race. See story. (AP Wirephoto)

A's In Cup Final

George Pakos collected a cross from Charlie Fisher and scored an overtime goal from about 12 yards out Tuesday to give Victoria Athletics a 2-1 victory over Gorge United and into the Vancouver Island Soccer League's McGavin Cup final.

Athletics, who held the edge in play throughout the match at Royal Athletic Park, were tested to the limit by the scrappy Gorge players, who never gave up trying.

Centre-back Dan Hood took a penalty kick after Tom Jones was called for hands and gave Athletics a 1-0 lead at the 50-minute mark.

Shortly after the goal, Athletics lost goalkeeper Grant Darley, who was injured in a collision.

Ted Van Waes, the replacement, was a little screened when striker Gene Thorne punched in the tying goal for United with a lob shot.

Athletics could have ended the match seven minutes into the first of two 15-minute overtime sessions but Hood sliced the ball wide on a penalty attempt.

Pakos finally connected for the winner five minutes into the second session.

Athletics now meet the winner of next Tuesday's semi-final between University of Victoria Vikings and Victoria West in the final Oct. 5.

Vets Make The Difference

By The Canadian Press

Top draft picks did their share for Pittsburh Penguins and Houston Aeros on Tuesday night, but veterans made the difference for the Penguins in a 5-1 win.

The veteran scorers for the Penguins were Rick Kehoe, who had two goals, Ron Stackhouse and Stan Gilbertson. The rookie scorers were Blair Chapman of the Penguins and Morris Lukowich of the Aeros.

Chapman, the Penguins' No. 1 pick, led Saskatoon Blades to two division titles in the last three years in the Western Canada Hockey League. Last season he scored 71 goals and had 86 assists in 69 league games, then scored a record 24 goals in 20 playoff games.

Lukowich, Houston's top pick, was also on Pittsburgh's draft list. Last year he had 65 goals and 77 assists for Medicine Hat Tigers of the WCHL.

Conspicuously absent from the Houston lineup was Gordie Howe. The 48-year-old Aeros president isn't expected to decide whether he'll play again for at least another week.

In Tuesday's other exhibitions, Birmingham Bulls upset Atlanta Flames 7-6, Philadelphia Flyers nipped Boston Bruins 4-3, Buffalo Sabres dropped Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2, New York Islanders tied Kansas City Scouts 2-2 and Phoenix Roadrunners tied the Finnish all-stars 2-2.

A crowd of 8,868 watched the first professional game ever played in Birmingham, won by the WHA's Bulls over the NHL's Flames on an overtime goal by Mark Napier.

Rookie Dave Hynek scored Philadelphia's winner on a rebound midway in the third period after Boston's Peter McNab tied the game earlier in the same period of the NHL exhibition.

Brian Spencer scored two goals and Fred Stanfield and Craig Ramsey one each for Buffalo. Some of the 16,481 fans at Maple Leaf Gardens had to unfurl umbrellas to protect themselves from a leaky roof.

Gary Howatt tapped in the tying goal three minutes, three seconds into the final period to earn the Islanders their tie in a meeting of NHL rivals.

Meanwhile, Rick Blight won the annual Vancouver Canucks' golf tournament at Victoria's Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club with a 78 Tuesday.

Coach Phil Maloney skipped the tournament but thought the golf competition was a "good break for the boys."

Following the official intra-squad game Thursday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Arena, the camp will be split into two groups. Players picked for the Canucks will stay in Victoria a few days and the others will head for Tulsa to attend the Tulsa Oilers' training camp.

WCHL STARTS TONIGHT

New Look All Over

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The Western Canada Hockey League's action word is "go" but Victoria Cougar manager-coach Pat Ginnell prefers "patience."

The 12-team major junior league gets away to its earliest start in history when Brandon Wheat Kings play Winnipeg Monarchs in Winnipeg this evening.

The Cougars, with four down but one game still to go on their exhibition schedule, won't start regular-season activity until Saturday when they entertain Portland Winter Hawks at Memorial Arena.

The new season starts with new looks here and there.

Portland, for example, is a prominent change. The American city got into the Western Canada act when owners of the Edmonton Oil Kings transferred their franchise to the Rose City.

Winnipeg hasn't moved but looks new with a change of name — the club's third in five years. Originally the Jets, they have operated as the Clubs for the past two years and this year will try their luck with Monarchs.

Also new, and inspired by the transfer shift to Portland, is a three-division makeup.

Victoria, Portland, New Westminster Bruins and Kamloops Chiefs will operate in a Western Division; Calgary Centennials, Winnipeg, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat Tigers make up the Central Division, while Brandon, Regina Pats, Saskatoon Blades and Flin Flon Bombers form the Eastern Division.

The playoff format also is different. Three top finishers in each division qualify for the playoffs. They will play a three-team, round-robin semi-final followed by a best-of-seven final to declare divisional champions.

The three divisional winners will use the same format (a round-robin semi-final and a best-of-seven final) to decide the 1976-77 champions.

Naturally, Ginnell expects the Cougars to participate in the playoffs.

Despite Tuesday's 4-2 loss to the Bruins at Memorial Arena — Victoria's second in as many nights — Ginnell expressed pleasure with the pre-season progress of his team.

"We came out flat," he felt. "It was our poorest game of the four we have played, but that's how it goes with a young team. They went well in Courtenay on Monday night but didn't play as well tonight.

"I'll just have to persevere with them.

"After all, 14 of the players on hand will be back the following year."

Now with a 2-2, won-lost record and the final exhibition game scheduled Thursday in New Westminster, the Cougars have shown more strength than inadequacies after four games.

An obvious plus in goal. Holdover Murray Bannerman and newcomers Steve Amiss and John McKarrow have been solid in the pre-season workouts and games. Ginell's main problem is to decide between Amiss and McKarrow as the backup to Bannerman.

The "loser" goes to Nanaimo, Cougars' affiliate in the B.C. Junior League, with a promise to be recalled later if there's a performance change in Victoria.

There is a promising look, too, on attack. The Cougars have out-shot Bruins, a team expected to have one of the strongest defences in the league, in all three meetings.

While they may lack the size that Ginnell prefers, the forwards, generally, are agile, quick and seemingly with good puck sense

The question mark is on defence.

Victoria's only holdovers are Greg Tebbutt and Rick Hendricks. Rookies Leroy Heck, Grant Shmyr and George Phillipoff will have to prove themselves in WCHL company.

The Cougars out-shot Westminster 45-33 Tuesday but goaltender Carey Walker's strong display backstopped the Bruins' fourth victory in five games.

Walker was especially brilliant in the second period when Victoria enjoyed a 19-9 edge in shooting.

Randy Betty, Mark Lofthouse, Brad Maxwell and Doug Derkson scored for the Bruins while Archie Henderson and Dennis Fenske replied for the Cougars.

The Cougars played without Lorne Schmidt, a husky rookie winger who suffered a leg injury earlier in the series.

Also missing was Tom Legge, a winger from Winnipeg who showed up last week and requested a tryout. Legge scored a goal in Victoria's first pre-season game and showed signs of promise but decided to return to Winnipeg.

NO POLITICAL BANS AT MOSCOW GAMES

MOSCOW (Reuter) — The Soviet Union has pledged not to ban any country from the 1980 Moscow Olympics for political reasons, West German Olympic chief Willi Daume said Tuesday.

Sergei Pavlov, chairman of the Soviet Sports Committee, said during talks Monday that Moscow will honor a promise to the International Olympic Committee not to exclude states on political grounds, Daume said.

UBC Scores Third Win In Japan

TOKYO (AP) — The University of British Columbia rugby team came from behind Wednesday to defeat an all-Japan industrial fifteen 29-10 for its third straight victory in a six-game exhibition tour of Japan.

The halftime score was 10-7 for the undefeated Canadians.

A crowd of 3,000 watched as scrum half-kicker Preston Wiley scored 17 points on one try, three penalty goals and two goal kicks on a wet field at the Tokyo Olympic Stadium.

Larry Chung and Doug Harvey also contributed to the UBC's victory with two tries and one try respectively.

The Japanese jumped to a 3-0 lead after seven minutes and added another four points on a try at 27 minutes.

PARKING LOT, FANS' COVER IMPROVED

Sandown Preened for 16-Day Fall Meet

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Yes, they are!

That's the answer most horsey fans want to hear when the subject of Sandown's second thoroughbred season under the auspices of the Capital City Turf Club pops up.

Yes, they are fixing up the parking lot and spending $15,000 in the process.

The work is already under way and coincides with a total outlay of $50,000 at the track for improving facilities for this year's 16-day meeting.

The racing fan is No. 1.

For besides gravel roads and improved drainage in the parking area, there are other innovations at the park which should help alleviate problems that may be encountered with the weather. Such as last year.

A new shelter for patrons who frequent the cashiers' windows, will extend almost to the fence, while there is 35 per cent more roofage in the walking area from the grandstand to the paddock as well.

In addition portable bleachers will be installed on the clubhouse turn to accomodate the faithful and hopefully the overflow from the grandstand.

There rarely has been any problem with the racing surface and it is in good shape, Aubrey Davies reported at a media luncheon Tuesday.

Davies is returning as director of racing and racing secretary for the second season and he will be assisted by commission steward Donnie Dunn, and associaton steward Scotty Hughes. Another steward is yet to be named and it is expected it will be Joe Horton who was here last year, as were the others.

Starter again will be Lou Fortin, clerk of the scales, Tom Aqueline; paddock and patrol judge Clarence "Specs" Simpson, and publicity director, Harry Filon.

Jack Short will call the races (how could they keep him away?) and Doug Mitten will again be in charge of the mutuel department.

But one familiar figure will be noticed by his absence.

Craggy-faced Massie White, program manager, morning-line setter, handicapper, you name it, and dean of track workers, will be off to Hawaii earlier than ever this fall. His place as program chief is expected to be filled by John McCray.

For Massie, it will be the first time he has missed a meeting since 1911 when he galloped horses at the Brighouse track, now known as Minoru Park.

But he'll be here for a visit before he goes and will decorate a winner.

And ah yes, horses! A necessary commodity. Well, last year at this time, Sandown and the CCTC were assured of about 140 horses, with others promised if things looked good.

They all came, things got better and all sorts of records were broken for mutuel play and fan response and in spite of some horrible weather.

So this year there already is a guarantee of more and better stock and stall space has been requested for 300 horses. And, if they all come, and run, the ponies won't be running back as often as they were at the close last season.

To date, too, 16 jockeys have indicated their willingness to ride and that list is topped by Jim Arnold, who currently is No. 2 in the jockey standings at Ex-Park. Garth Carter, Sandown's leading rider last year, Randy Dailey, son of Jim Dailey, Sr., Mike Chabara, Herb Olive from the prairie circuit, Sandy Schleiffers and Alan Cuthbertson are some of the others.

Otherwise, some of the betting windows have been moved, toilet facilities have been improved and starting times have been changed. Post time on Saturdays and holidays will be 12:30 p.m. and on weekdays, 1 p.m.

Feature events begin with the Times Handicap on opening day, Oct. 16, to be followed by the Red Feather Handicap Oct. 22; The Colonist Handicap, Oct. 23; The Sandown Derby, Oct. 30; the Yellow Ribbon Futurity for two-year olds, Nov. 6; the Speed Championship, Nov. 11, and the Vancouer Island Championship and Au Revoir Handicap, Nov. 13.

So everything is set for three weeks from Saturday.

LeBlanc Won't Tolerate Bureaucratic Padding

(Last of Two Parts)

Environment Minister Romeo LeBlanc, who will have the final say in how a salt-water fishing licence will be set up in British Columbia, has gone on record stating that any funds over the administrative cost will be funnelled straight back into enhancement of sports salmon fishing stocks.

And, he's added a little qualifier that any padding of the bureaucratic structure used to administer the licence will not be tolerated.

I disussed the prime reason for having a salt-water fishing licence implemented as soon as possible last Friday and will now outline the honed-down licensing proposal and some of the other pertinent points raised at a meeting of sports fishermen and Ken Lucas, senior assistant deputy minister of federal fisheries, in Victoria last week.

Lucas said the basic licensing package now being considered is a $5 fee for Canadians between the ages of 16 and 64 "angling for all species in salt water." Fishermen aged 65 or over would pay $1 and non-Canadians could purchase either a seasonal licence for $15 or a three-day licence for $6.

In addition, to prevent the wholesale canning of salmon by non-residents that is so evident in many west coast areas now, the package would include a $10 salmon punchcard — over and above the fee to fish in tidal waters for other species — to impose a seasonal limit on the number of salmon caught by foreign visitors.

A total of about $2 out of the licence fees would cover the cost of administering the scheme and the rest would be channelled back into improving sports fishing stocks under the joint federal-provincial salmonid enhancement program.

Right now the licensing proposal is in the public involvement stage and input is being funnelled though to LeBlanc from organized groups such as the B.C. Wildlife Federation and Amalgamated Conservation Society.

Non-organized sportsmen are asked to submit their thoughts on the proposal through one of the three Greater Victoria delegates to the Sports Fishing Advisory Committee: Howard English, 6470 Rey Road (Pat Bay Highway), Victoria, B.C. V8Y 1V2; Al Playfair, 1660 Sheridan Avenue, Victoria, B.C. or Bob Wright, C-O Oak Bay Marina, 1327 Beach Drive, Victoria, B.C.

Speed in this process is vital.

Once the public input is in LeBlanc's hands his next step will be to conduct his own private consultation with both government and opposition members of the B.C. legislature. He will also meet with provincial MPs to get their opinions.

"My personal view is that this being done — Mr. LeBlanc is a very decisive man — he'll make a decision come fall and he'll then take whatever steps are required to bring it out into the open and the full public arena," said Lucas.

Federal fisheries would like the licensing scheme off the ground by March 1977 when the enhancement program is due to come into full swing.

Some of the other points brought out at the meeting were:

—A separate arm of the federal fisheries office in Vancouver would be set up to cater to the needs of sports fishermen — Lucas pointed out that there was already a recreational fishing branch in Ottawa.

—Tourist industry on Vancouver Island, already hurting as a result of provincial ferry policies implemented, ironically, by former fisheries minister Jack Davis, could be hit harder as a result of the licence fee for non-Canadians.

—Federal fisheries will have a hard time convincing treasury board officials and the ministers responsible that there is justification for spending money to enhance west coast salmon stocks without a licence scheme.

—There will also have to be some type of flow-back into the Canadian economy from commercial fishermen to enhance the stocks, they concentrate most of their efforts on — sockeye, pinks, chums and coho.

—Federal fisheries is prepared for a public accounting on the manner in which any extra funds (i.e. $3 per licence for Canadian residents) is spent on sports stocks such as chinooks and coho.

—The federal sports fishing branch (or whatever other label may be applied to it) will be responsible for all facets of recreational fisheries, up to and including supplying information on commercial net fishery openings and closures as well as regulating areas where there is an overcrowding problem.

—Revision of the Fisheries Act, expected to come before the House this fall, will tighten controls over such things as stream diversion, pollution, siltation and industrial and logging impact on salmon habitat.

Things are beginning to look up!

At long last, federal fisheries is starting to take sports fishermen seriously.

So let's live up to the responsibility.

NL Expansion Inevitable—Kuhn

WASHINGTON (AP) — Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn told Congress Tuesday that the National League will expand because "it is inevitable." M. Donald Grant, president of New York Mets, agreed.

Kuhn and Grant appeared before the select house committee on professional sports and urged that Congress allow baseball to retain its special exemption from anti-trust laws.

"We have demonstrated that baseball is acting in a highly responsible fashion under the present law," Kuhn said in a prepared statement. He added that if problems exist, they would not be solved by removing the exemption. Rather, he said, it would be "counter-productive and detrimental to the public interest."

However, Rep. Frank Horton, R-NY, vice-chairman of the committee, said he did not believe baseball acted responsibly last spring when the National League refused to expand after the American League voted to place teams in Seattle and Toronto in 1977.

Nor, he said, could he see how they could act responsibly when approval of all 12 NL owners is necessary for expansion.

"At this point, the National League has not made a decision that it is not going to expand," said Kuhn. "They are still looking at it. It is true that one or two clubs can block it. I think it will change. I will forecast to you that the National League will expand. It is inevitable."

Later, National League president Chub Feeney, accompanied by American League counterpart Lee MacPhail, told the committee he also has been opposed to the unanimous vote rule both when he was with San Francisco Giants and in his current position.

"At the end of the discussion on expansion last spring, even those owners who voted against it seemed to want to have the rule changed," Feeney said. "I will make every effort to work with Don on changing the rule."

Horton then said that baseball's failure to change the rule could result in Congress removing the anti-trust restriction.

Later, Grant urged the committee to permit baseball to keep its special legal status, which the other sports do not have, and predicted that the NL will vote expansion even if some owners have to go to court to convince others.

"Given a little time, we believe that we can persuade those few who have been 'anti' to see the light of day," said Grant. "I am hopeful we can convince those few to change the rule. If we can, we can get the votes to expand."

Bays Jump Panthers, Tyees Upset Mt. Doug

Oak Bay Bays, who finished fourth over-all last season but went on to capture the playoff championship, came up with a 5-1 victory over visiting Parkland Panthers in one of five matches Tuesday that opened play in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League.

In other matches, Victoria Tyees downed visiting Mt. Douglas 1-0, Claremont Spartans posted a 4-2 win over host St. Michael's University School, Spectrum blanked Esquimalt Dockers 3-0 at Esquimalt and defending league-champion Reynolds Roadrunners nipped Belmont Braves 2-1 at Reynolds.

Bays utilized some close checking to bottle up the Panthers and took a 5-0 lead by half time.

Mike Farrell, who scored only one goal all last season, fired three to spark the Oak Bay attack. Bill Taafe opened scoring at about three minutes with a long looping shot from midfield and Joe Mandonca made it 2-0 on a 20-foot shot at the eight-minute mark.

Daryl Stubbs scored the lone Parkland goal.

Tyees, who won only four matches last season, received some standout goaltending from Clarence Duits to post the shutout over Mt. Doug, who lost only once last season.

Dave McCaig punched in a penalty shot in the opening half to supply the Titan goal.

St. Michael's winless last season, surprised Spartans by taking an early lead on a goal by Geoff Smith but the Claremont side came back to take a 2-1 half-time lead on goals by Gord Lee and Dave Spoor.

Roland Mickart put Claremont ahead 3-1 but Grant Jones got one back for St. Michael's by heading in a rebound.

Spoor's second goal, on a header, tucked the win away.

Gord Reading posted the shutout for Spectrum while Mike Collis scored twice and Pat Going chipped in a single.

Braves, who only won two matches last season, also served up a scare by taking a 1-0 half-time lead on a goal by Gerry Sylvester. Roadrunners, however, came back with goals by Ed Van Dyk and Clayton Booth to collect the victory.

Next games are at 3:30 p.m. Friday with Claremont at Mt. Douglas, Reynolds at Spectrum, Esquimalt at St. Michael's and Victoria at Oak Bay.

Parkland plays Belmont in the feature match at 8 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

These early matches are a single-round robin competition to break the league into two divisions. The top five squads enter Divison I and the bottom five form Division II for further round-robin play.

Warrants Issued For Four Flyers

TORONTO (CP) — Bench warrants, to be exercised with discretion, were issued in provincial court Tuesday for four Philadelphia Flyers.

Defence lawyer Austin Cooper agreed with Crown prosecutors to have the case adjourned to Oct. 5. The warrants were issued after defenceman Joe Watson and forwards Don Saleski, Mel Bridgman and Bob Kelly did not appear in court.

The four had been remanded Aug. 5 until Tuesday to have a trial date set.

Watson, Saleski and Bridgman face a total of nine charges in incidents during a National Hockey League game against Toronto Maple Leafs on April 16. Kelly was charged following a game April 22.

Watson was charged with two counts of common assault and two of assaulting a policeman and one charge of possession of an offensive weapon a hockey stick.

Saleski faces two charges of common assault and one charge of possession of an offensive weapon. Bridgman is charged with assault causing bodily harm.

The charges against Watson and Saleski were laid after a policeman assigned to maintain order around the penalty box, was struck by a stick. Bridgman was charged after a fight with Leaf defenceman Borje Salming.

Kelly was charged with assault causing bodily harm after usherette Jan Brown, wife of NHL linesman John Brown, was hit in the face with a hockey glove thrown during a scuffle near the penalty box.

A bench warrant issued for an accused failing to appear in court authorizes police to arrest the individual. But a warrant to be exercised with discretion means an arrest is not necessary.

Cooper said outside the courtroom that the accused and Leaf players who will be Crown witnesses are playing "in different parts of the world" and it is difficult to get everybody together for the trial.

He said he hoped that on Oct. 5 a special court may be arranged for Jan. 12-14 for trial.

ODDS FAVOR THE CHAMP

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — Heavy betting on Muhammad Ali has improved the odds on challenger Ken Norton for their Sept. 28 heavyweight boxing title fight, bookmakers said Tuesday.

The Sahara Tahoe Race and Sports Book said odds on Ali, set earlier at 1 to 2, were now 5 to 11, meaning a bet of $11 would win the original bet plus $5.

Odds on Norton, previously 17 to 10, now are 9 to 5, meaning a $5 bet would win the bet plus $9.

A spokesman said the change is an effort to provoke more betting on Norton.

Jake Scott Fits Allen Playbook

WASHINGTON (CP) — It didn't really need it, but coach George Allen's reputation as a shrewd trader is being enhanced by the performance of an eight-year veteran who got his start in the livery of British Columbia Lions.

Allen, head coach of Washington Redskins of the National Football League and a man who likes his players to have a little age on them, got 31-year-old Jake Scott—plus a draft choice—from Miami Dolphins.

He gave up Bryant Salter, like Scott a safety and a good one. Allen had been after Scott ever since the league meeting last June.

Salter, in his two years as a Redskin, had a total of two interceptions. Scott, after two games as a Redskin, has three interceptions and a fumble recovery.

Scott broke in as a wide receiver with British Columbia in 1969. He ran back seven kickoffs for 224 yards and a 32-yard average. He was second to Jim Young in pass receptions—35 for 586 yards and a 17-yard average.

He scored three touchdowns and ran twice from scrimmage for 11 yards.

All this happened in a year during which he missed five games with injuries.

Those were to be the last regular season games Scott was to sit out. Miami got him in 1970 and put him in the defensive backfield and he played every game for six years.

In his first year with the Dolphins, he suffered a separated shoulder but had it strapped and continued to play. The following year, in the famous 80-minute playoff game against Kansas City Chiefs, Scott played the whole way with a broken hand.

For those six years, he averaged six interceptions a year.

Ironically, Scott's problems with Shula came to a head over his desire to rest an ailing shoulder by sitting out a pre-season game.

"I'm sure happier to be here than in Miami," Scott says. "Here everybody pulls together.

"The coaches don't get on you. I'm much more comfortable. They recognize here that they've got some intelligent human beings out on the field."

In Miami, he says, "It was more of a robot-type system."

Gray Keeps Up

LONDON (Reuter) — Andy Gray, leading scorer in English football this season, scored two more goals Tuesday night in a 2-1 victory for Aston Villa over Norwich City in the third round of the Football League Cup.

Gray now has scored 11 goals in nine matches this season.

Arsenal, third in the league's First Division, was given some anxious moments on a visit to Second Division club Blackpool before the match ended in a 1-1 draw.

George Armstrong gave Arsenal the lead in the 17th minute, but goalkeeper Jimmy Rimmer had to make two superb saves to enable them to survive after Dick Walsh had equalized in the 58th minute.

The biggest crowd of the night, 32,989, watched injury-hit West Ham United snatch a 1-0 win over Charlton Athletic. The goal was poached by Alan Taylor seven minutes from the end after Charlton had dominated most of the play.

OUR WORLD IS CHANGING

Running out of fuel. Running out of resources.
So for 1977, our new full-size cars are designed to help conserve our natural resources.
And while they're the newest in years they stem from decades of automotive know-how.
We have made a massive commitment-for this year and the near future...to build automobiles designed and engineered for a changing world.
On the next two pages we'd like you to see a preview of GM's new, full-size cars for 1977.
And explain why and how we build them.

CHEVROLET. PONTIAC. OLDSMOBILE. BUICK. CADILLAC.

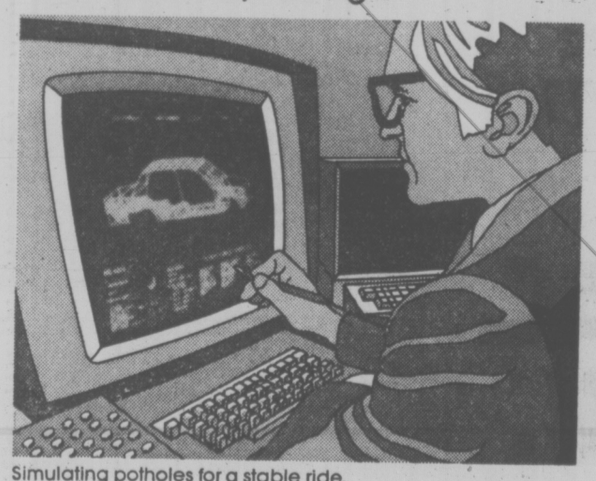
GM'S 1977 DESIGNED AND ENGINEERED

We started with the structure. It had to be strong and secure, so we refined it by computer.

The basic structure of our 1977 full-size cars is made up of the frame and the body. By "frame" we mean that steel, girder-like object that supports the body, suspension and powertrain components. And by "body", we mean the portion that houses the passengers and luggage.

Since the frame is the underpinning for the car, it has to be strong. And since the body is what surrounds you, it has to be secure. How do we design these qualities into a car? Through a variety of techniques that include building prototypes of the frame and body practically by hand, physically testing them and then re-engineering them until we're sure they are right.



Simulating potholes for a stable ride.

In addition, for 1977 the frame and body of our full-size cars had the design and testing help of computers — a science we've spent a long time perfecting.

For example, if we want to simulate how the frame and body of a car might respond when it runs over a pothole, we can read engineering drawings into a computer and then mathematically "drive" the car over the pothole to evaluate frame and body response resulting from impact. The computer then plays this back on a television screen in slow motion so we can better analyze the vibration characteristics. So in hours rather than months we can learn such things as which shape and section size to use, how strong it should be, even what thickness of metal is called for.

Now this is not to suggest that we have forgotten our many time-proven testing procedures. A battery of grueling tests, including proving ground evaluations, goes into every new prototype. And the end result is that GM's 1977 full-size cars are strong smooth-riding automobiles designed to give you a sense of security as you drive.

Then came body designs. We wanted less drag, so we tuned them in the wind tunnel.

In the study of aerodynamics, "drag" is the force that resists the forward motion of an object moving through the air. A "clean" automobile, then — one with careful attention to local details to reduce drag — is inherently more efficient and needs less power to drive.

So for 1977 we tested our body designs in the wind tunnel at the General Motors Technical Centre and at other facilities. Working from quarter-and full-scale models, we softened leading edges and modified our designs to help reduce drag. We smoothed out the windshield pillars to lessen wind resistance. And on some models, we added air deflectors under the front bumper to divert air from drag-inducing areas beneath the car. Result — a more efficient design, and that's the name of today's game.

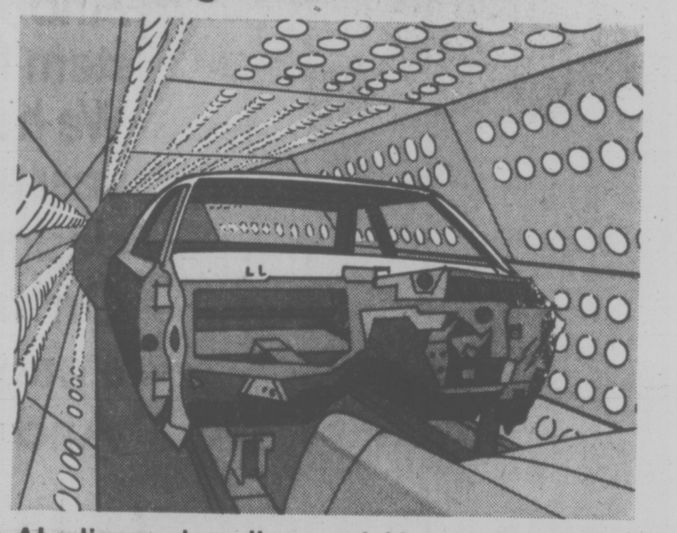
From a styling standpoint, we naturally wanted our new full-size cars to look great as well as be fuel-efficient. We think that when you see them you'll agree they are some of the most handsome cars to come along in years. At the same time, we believe you'll be impressed with the attention to detail, as exemplified by the tight-fitting doors, windows, trunks and hoods. And when you drive our new '77s, we know you'll experience a new feeling of comfort, solidity and security.

Full-framed door glass all around. For 1977 you get a tight fit to reduce wind noise.

Protecting the body. Body by Fisher construction and new corrosion-resisting treatments help make our '77s tough and durable.



At a time when the world is running out of natural resources, we believe that cars should be designed to last. And for 1977 we have paid particular attention to corrosion protection for our full-size cars.

There is extensive use of galvanized steel, zinc iron alloys and Zincrometal — a coated steel for outer door panels, rear quarter panels and other areas.

We are using permanently flexible, aluminized anti-rust materials and hot-melt coatings to help protect body joints and seams.

And all our full-size cars for '77 have inner front fender panels to help guard the outer fenders from kicked-up stones and salt.

Further, every 1977 full-size car receives particular attention to assure that the final finish will be both durable and good-looking. All exposed surfaces go through a multi-step cleaning, rinsing and phosphating process before getting two coats of primer (with additional coats at corrosion-sensitive areas). Then comes the final finish of GM's Magic-Mirror acrylic lacquer, which is baked to a gleaming, long-lasting finish.

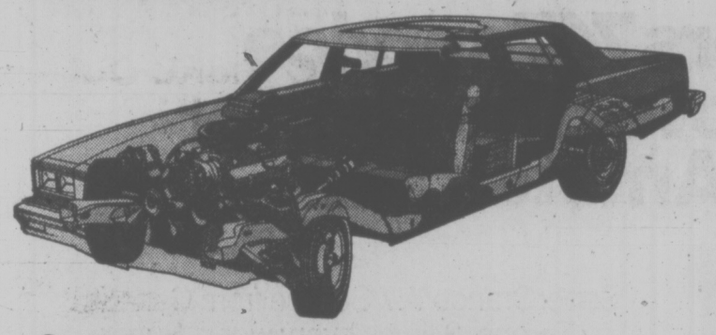
In total, GM's full-size cars for '77 represent a number of important advances to help make them last and look great over the years. They also represent a significant investment on the part of GM to bring you automobiles designed and engineered for a changing world.

Better utilization of space gives full 6-passenger roominess. New acoustical engineering techniques help provide a quiet, luxurious ride.

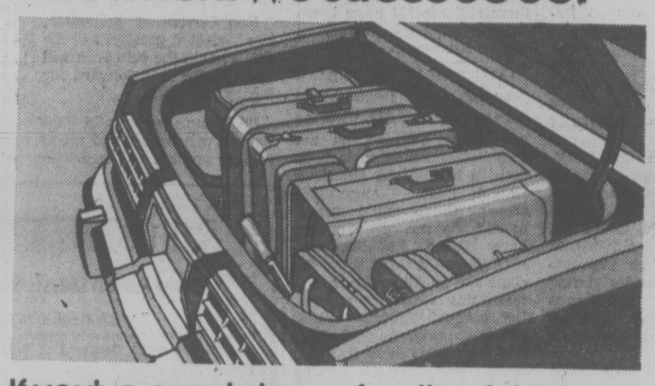


Our interior designers had two objectives, when they went to work on the '77 full-size cars. To retain the feeling of interior spaciousness and comfort GM owners are used to. And to provide a quiet ride.

They began with the design of what we call the "greenhouse" – the window portion of the passenger compartment. A new roof and more vertical side pillars and doors were designed to maintain much of the same perceived openness of the '76s. And the rear seat kneeroom and legroom are even better on the new models, especially the coupes. In addition, our new door designs permit easier entry and exit – the best, in fact, in years.

As for quiet, our acoustics specialists began by "engineering out" squeaks and rattles. Effecting a cure, if you will, before the problem starts. Then they turned their attention to sealing out noises, and a whole new family of seals was developed. Finally, they employed new noise-suppression techniques, such as one-piece, foam-backed, acoustical headliners and one-piece carpets with more efficient floor-insulating materials. Take a demonstration drive and you'll see – and feel – just how quiet they are to drive.

Our goal was plenty of trunk space for families and salesmen. We succeeded.



If you've ever taken a family of six on a week-long campout, you know how vital a large trunk is. Same for salesmen who have to lug around samples or stacks of literature. Well, for 1977, GM's full-size cars hold as much as last year's in nearly every instance. There's not a small trunk in the lot; in fact, in most cases they are even bigger than in 1976.

This was accomplished in a number of ways, such as design changes in the rear compartment floor, spare tire placement and trunk height. At the same time, a redesigned trunk lid and new, improved weather seals are designed to keep out even high-pressure drenchings at the car wash.

Quite simply, our '77s are designed to save you time and trouble.

There are a number of improvements this year to help get you out of the service area faster. Like dashboard instruments that can be serviced from the front – say, for changing a bulb.

There's a new electrical fuse system that cuts replacement time to less than one minute without special tools.

Heater and air conditioner repairs have been simplified.

And the front door glass in our '77's can be aligned through an access panel under the armrest rather than taking off the whole interior door panel.

Small things, yes, but they add up. What's more, the Delco Freedom battery (available on some of our models) is an advanced design that frees the owner from any concern with battery maintenance.

The Freedom battery never needs water, is highly resistant to heat and vibration, holds a charge longer than ordinary batteries, has special terminals to seal out corrosion and requires no periodic checking or cleaning. Just close the hood and forget it.

The payoff. Read these gas mileage estimates for our new full-size cars.

You've read about our extensive efficiency improvements for 1977. But let's face it. They're just talk unless they can pay off for you in more miles per gallon of gas. So take a look at the chart and see how some of our new models rate.

Model	Engine	Axle Ratio	Estimates MPG City	Estimates MPG Highway
Chevrolet Impala Sedan	305 cu. in. V-8, 2-bbl.	2.56	20	28
Pontiac Parisienne	305 cu. in. V-8, 2-bbl.	2.56	20	28

Punt-Return Rule Works

TORONTO (CP) — The rule allowing blocking on punt returns, employed for the first time in the Canadian Football League last season, has fulfilled its intended purpose.

The move was to liven up the game.

In 1974 only five punts were returned 25 yards or more.

Last season there were 84 punts returned 25 yards or more — an average of 1.17 a game.

This year, after 44 league games, the average is 1.20 times a game punt return teams have returned the ball 25-plus yards.

Of 53 punts returned to date in that category, record-holder Johnny Rodgers of Montreal Alouettes has contributed six. Last year he had 11.

Ottawa Rough Riders' Moody Jackson also has six, four of them in one game, while Jimmy Edwards, the al purpose running back with Hamilton Tiger-Cats, is tied at five 25-plus yard returns with Dennis Meyer of Calgary Stampeders and Rocky Long of British Columbia Lions.

And whereas in 1974, there was only one punt return of 50 yards or more, there have been 11 to date in 1976, including one of 108 yards for a touchdown by Paul Williams of Saskatchewan Roughriders.

Rider team-mate Tom Campana has returned another punt 80 yards for a major score and Long sprinted 71 yards for another TD.

No player in the Eastern Conference has returned a punt for a touchdown this year.

Judge George N. Lwighton of United States district court set sentencing for Oct. 4.

Menas, 43, of Fond Du Lac, Wis., and 13 harness racing drivers, owners and trainers were indicted last January on charges of fixing three races at Sportsman's Park, Washington Park and Maywood Park in 1971 and 1972.

FOOTBALL CROWDS ON THE UPSWING

SHAWNEE MISSION, Kansas (AP) — Major college football attendance, led by Michigan's second straight 100,000-plus crowd, is running two per cent ahead of last season's all-time record pace, the National Collegiate Athletic Association announced on Tuesday.

The Wolverines, ranked No. 1 in the nation by The Associated Press, drew 103,741 fans to their 51-0 wipeout of Stanford. The big crowd helped the major colleges draw 2,286,584 last week, a higher total than during any week of the 1975 season.

The total NCAA Division I attendance thus far is 4,760,062, up 30,120, and the average attendance is 31,734, as compared to 31,118 at this stage of 1975.

Baseball Fans Flock to Park

NEW YOR K(AP) — Despite the absence of a heated pennant race in any of the four divisions for a long stretch of the season, major leage baseball fans have been pouring into ballparks at a record rate this year.

And sometime this week, the major league single-season attendance record of 30,108,926, set in 1973, will be broken. Through games of Sunday, a total of 29,804,008 fans had paid their way into major league games during 1976, according to figures compiled by the office of baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuh.

Thus, when 309,919 more fans pay to see games—and there still are 139 more home dates remaining — the record will be shattered.

Compared to this time a year ago, major league attendance is up 1,393,878, with the New York Yankees, on the brink of clinching their first division title — the American League East — since 1964 showing the biggest increase, 636,612. So far, the Yankees have drawn 1,924,660, and need less than 76,000 to become the fourth major league team this season to surpass the coveted 2,000,000 mark. Never in major league history had there been more than two clubs over 2,000,000 in the same season.

Tebbutt Indictment

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatchewan attorney-general Roy Roanow says he has signed a direct indictment against Greg Tebbutt of the Victoria Cougars hockey club on an assault charge.

Tebbutt and two other players were charged following a violent incident Feb. 20 at the Saskatoon arena during a Western Canada Hockey League game between the Cougars and Saskatoon Blades. Tebbutt was discharged due to lack of evidence at a preliminary hearing June 22.

T. D. Caldwell, the attorney-general's Saskatoon agent, said the direct indictment would open the way to bring Tebbutt directly to trial should the crown decide there is sufficient evidence. But he stressed that no decision on whether Tebbutt will actually stand trial has been made.

Canadian Pro Boxing Gets Uniformity of Standards

HALIFAX (CP) —The Canadian Professional Boxing Federation (CPBF) will compile a national rule book to provide Canadian boxing commissions with a uniform set of rules and medical standards.

The federation's annual meeting decided that secretary treasurer Frank Allnutt of Toronto, will prepare a brief on a national rule book for presentation to a federation meeting next spring.

The national rule book will be compiled from the various rule books of the existing Canadian commissions and a variety of proposed rules which have not yet been approved.

Ron Hayter of Edmonton, newly-elected president of the CPBF, said the rule book will be a major step forward for boxing in Canada.

"A boxer who lives in Vancouver will be able to go to Halifax and not be faced with rules foreign to him," Hayter said. "It's a benefit to the boxer and assistance to the commissions."

The federation also decided to continue working toward gaining approval of the Canadian Amateur Boxing Association to permit amateur fighters to participate on professional cards.

The CPBF approved an Oct. 5 title fight in Quebec City between Canadian middleweight boxing champion Fernand Marcotte and Gary Broughton of Brantford, Ont., the No. 1 challenger.

The federation also decided to order lightweight champion Barry Sponagle of Stellarton, N.S., to defend his title against Johnny Summerhays of Brantford, whom Sponagle defeated for the title earlier this year on a controversial decision. No date was set.

Hayter said the Sponagle defence was approved because of the controversy following the first match.

"In all fairness Summerhays should get the first crack at Sponagle," he said.

Elected to the new executive were: Don Kerr, Halifax, first vice-president; Tyrone Gardiner, Sydney, N.S., second vice-president; Olivier Routhier, Sherbrooke, Que., third vice-president; Dave Brown, Vancouver, fourth vice-president; Sam Erman, Moncton, N.B., fifth vice-president.

Pre-Teen Arsonist Not Charged

CHEMAINUS, (CP) — RCMP said Tuesday no charges are contemplated against a pre-teen-ager they say was involved in two cases of arson on the weekend.

Two elementary rooms of St. Joseph's School were set on fire, causing about $1,500 worth of damage. Newspapers and matches were found at the scene. Later the same day the carport of the church rectory was burned.

A car and a school bus valued at $35,000 were destroyed. The rectory had minor damage, police said.

A police spokesman said: "What do you do to a child who isn't even a teen-ager."

Accident Caught On Film

VANCOUVER (CP) — Walter Joseph Pfesterer, 36, of North Vancouver, was charged with criminal negligence and failing to remain at the scent of an accident Tuesday after a woman was hit by a car and dragged more than 100 feet on a street near the Pacific National exhibition.

Police said witnesses told them the driver of a car stopped after the vehicle hit Eileen Ruth Astrom, 56, of Burnaby, then fled at high speed.

An Exhibition Park race track film patrol cameraman turned his camera on the accident scene after hearing the squeal of brakes. His film was turned over to police.

Report Wanted

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The McGregor action group is asking for immediate release of the federal fisheries report on effects of the proposed McGregor diversion by B.C. Hydro 60 miles east of here. The report, completed about two months ago, details the effect of the project on salmon populations in the Fraser River.

Guard Charged

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Ronald Cole, a guard at Prince George Regional Correctional Centre, has been charged with common assault on a prisoner in the institution.

Prisoner Timothy Edward Engen testified that he was hit Aug. 16 as he was being removed to the maximum security section of the centre.

Study Grant Offer

The provincial government will offer the city of Revelstoke a $10,000 grant to cover its research and legal costs on the proposed Revelstoke-Hat Creek power development.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said Tuesday the government allotted the grant because it "believes all facets of the development and its effect on the community should be well studied before any decisions are made."

New City Manager

VANCOUVER (CP) —Retiring alderman Fritz Bowers will become city manager Jan. 1 at a salary of about $51,000 a year. Council appointed Bowers to succeed Lorne Ryan at a closed meeting Tuesday.

City Overlooked

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Council was told Monday the latest provincial government tourist map shows all lower mainland municipalities except New Westminster. Mayor Muni Evers said provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy has already apologized and promised future maps would show the city.

Load Limit Widened

Provincial transport regulations have been changed to allow the movement of overwidth loads up to 14 feet, six inches on B.C. highways, Transport Minister Jack Davis announced Tuesday.

The previous limit was 12 feet, six inches.

Davis said the new policy will allow access to a greater range of mobile homes which have to be transported along the highways to their destination.

The minister said his department is inviting written submissions of recommendations on how to move overwidth loads with the least possible disruption to other highway traffic.

$17,000 Earmarked for Victoria's Gifted Students

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Does the exceptionally bright child surge ahead within the school system, or is he held at the level of his peers? Or worse still, does he get so discouraged he drops out altogether?

There are likely between 1,000 and 1,250 such students in the Greater Victoria school district.

And they are something of an enigma for educators and administrators.

One school suggests their potential will develop without special help, while another says every opportunity and resource should be available to gifted children since they may become tomorrow's leaders in government, industry or the arts.

This year for the first time, School District 61 is spending money about $17,000 to develop programs for gifted children.

It was not a unanimous decision by trustees, although the amount is tiny compared to what will be spent on children with learning disabilities.

Three of nine trustees voted against the expenditure including Trustee Roy Temple.

Temple said in his experience, bright pupils who remain at the "average" level are there because they want to be.

He said bright children are highly motivated and will enrich their lives outside the classroom by doing extra reading and learning on their own — a sort of self-educating process.

He said he voted against the $17,000 expenditure because "what money we have is better spent on the disadvantaged."

"Most schools worth their salt today are doing something for the gifted child now anyway," he added.

His argumens are strongly supported by some educators, but hotly contested by others more inclined to agree with the adage: "The gifted child who is not developed to his potential is as retarded as the slow learner who is not developed to his potential."

One such supporter of this tack is Dr. Harold Lyon, head of the U.S. federal education department's Office for the Gifted and Talented — an organization with no Canadian counterpart.

"The notion that the gifted are going to make it on their own is a false one," Lyon said in Washington, D.C. recently. "Almost 30 per cent of the dropouts are gifted and talented youth who are turned off and bored by the traditional lock-step system."

Lyon calls gifted and talented children a nation's most valuable but neglected natural resource.

A broader curriculum and a place for them to spend a few hours a day with each other are necessary, Lyon says, so they learn they are not oddballs. They are often lonely because they think they don't have any peers, he said.

Assistant Victoria superintendent of schools John Wiens feels the 30 per cent drop-out figure is high for Victoria, but said "there is no doubt some gifted children do drop out."

But Wiens said this happens a lot less frequenly now than a few years ago. There is much broader curriculum today offering more variety and more challenging courses to the student.

Saanich district counsellor Jean Stewart said with the wide option of courses, the brighter students have the option of choosing tougher classes.

She said the old lock-step system no longer applies. In Saanich, for example, she said Grade 6, 7 and 8 pupils have a choice of 52 options, and there are even more in upper grades.

The demand for individualized instruction is there, ind the teachers are providing it, Stewart said, although it means more work for the teachers.

Sooke district supervisor of primary education Janis Cleugh said brighter pupils often fall by the wayside more quickly.

The slow learners are more tenacious as they plod along, she said, but bright children need stimulation.

"Once the bright child loses interest and his attitude becomes poor, it is very difficult to get it back," she said.

Cleugh said the Sooke district has not yet embarked on any specific programs for the gifted, and said she was pleased to learn about the program being developed in Greater Victoria.

Under the guidance of creator Vic Thomson, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of curriculum for District 61, the $17,000 is being spent to develop learning kits to challenge the bright child's mind after he has finished his regular lessons and is waiting for the rest of his classmates.

Groups of teachers in different learning areas are working together to create the kits. While they are being put together, substitutes are taking over the teachers' classes, and that's where the expenditure comes in.

Thomson said he hopes the first kits will be ready by October.

Although grants are available for almost every other type of special education, nothing is done by either the provincial of federal governments for the gifted child.

Maybe Canada could learn from other countries that are leading in this field.

The U.S. OGT is spending $1.1 million to develop grograms for the gifted. The U.S.S.R. has "pioneer palaces" where gifted children are selected and their skills developed at an early age. Iran is spending $10 million in the next six months to nourish its talented children.

A World Council for Gifted and Talented Children is being set up as a sort of intellectual Olympics with chess tournaments, math and science fairs and a showcase for artistic and musical talents.

Youngsters will be on Olympic teams from all over the world playing new games never before played.

Will Canada be ready? Will we win a Gold medal in this Olympics?

Quiet Life of Exile Ends in Fiery Blast

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — During most of his two years of exile here following his release from imprisonment on an austere island near the southern tip of Chile, Orlando Letelier lived a quiet life in the Maryland suburbs, studying how the world's wealth could be more equitably distributed and writing a memoir of his year's imprisonment.

He was killed Tuesday morning when a bomb exploded beneath his car as he drove two colleagues to work at the Institute for Policy Studies where he ran a foreign affairs program.

Tuesday night, sources close to the investigation said that the explosion appeared to have been caused by an expertly designed plastic bomb, shaped to concentrate the main force of its blast upward into the driver's seat.

Also killed was Ronni Karpen Moffitt, 25, a staff member at the institute who was riding in the front seat. She died after being pulled from the car by her husband, Michael, who was riding in the back seat and was not seriously injured.

LETELIER

Friends who had known Letelier before he was confined by the military junta that overthrew the government of the late Salvadore Allende, which Letelier has served in several high offices, said he had returned to Washington diminished by his imprisonment.

For reasons that may have been connected to the murky circumstances surrounding his release from confinement into exile in the United States, Letelier had been publicly silent about the new regime in Chile for well over a year.

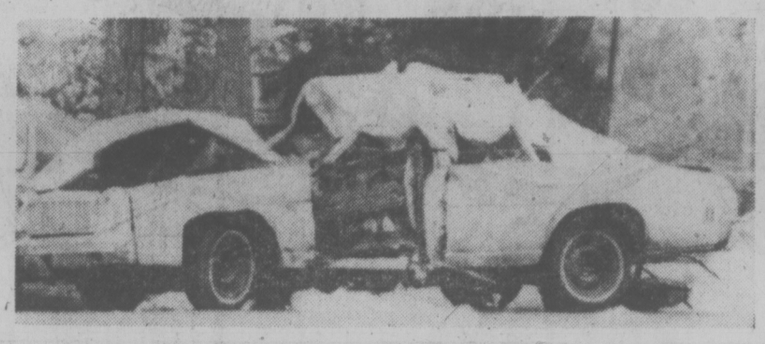
It was only the past few weeks that Letelier's name began reappearing in headlines as he began to catch attention as a symbol of "Free Chile" — a Chile in exile, opposed to the stridently anti-Marxist regime of the present Chilean president, Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

Early in September, the Pinochet government decreed that Letelier's Chilean citizenship had been taken away "for (his) interfering with normal financial support to Chile."

Letelier had worked with the Institute for Policy Studies here and served as the director of the institute's Trans-National Institute. Trans-National also operates in the Netherlands, where the Dutch government recently refused to underwrite a $63 million Dutch mining investment planned for Chile.



Car in which ex-Chilean ambassador was killed

On Sept. 11, the third anniversary of Allende's overthrow by Pinochet's military forces, Letelier spoke at a benefit concert by Joan Baez in Madison Square Garden in New York City, where he strongly attacked the Chilean government for lifting his citizenship. He also spoke of killings and terrorism in Chile and abroad, and of the risks he said so many were taking.

The benefit was for Chile Human Rights Committee, which is led by Letelier's wife, Isabel, and is one of scores of Chilean exile groups throughout the world.

Less than two weeks ago, Letelier met with leaders of both sides of the Chilean exile community here — seeking to unify the entire exile community in efforts to overthrow the Pinochet government.

"Orlando didn't align himself with one faction or the other," a close associate said. "He was a rallying point for the whole anti-junta movement here in Washington, someone that everybody truste."

Isabel Letelier called her husband "a great man whose death will not be in vain. Everything that he tried to do was for the good of his people . . . one day we will all rest in that good land he loved."

The Letelier family has lived for the past year and a half in a split-level red brick house in an upper middle area where most homes are valued at around $125,000.

Letelier first came to the United States in 1960 as an economist for the Inter-American Development Bank, where he stayed for 10 years and became a director of development projects in South America. His four sons, Christian, 19, Jose, 17, Francisco, 16 and Juan Pablo, 15 — have spent perhaps more time in the United States than in their own country.

During the Allende years, Ambassador Letelier returned frequently for consultation in Chile

In 1973, when the Allende government was crumbling, Letelier was called back to Santiago to serve first as foreign minister, than as minister of the interior, and finally as minister of defence. He told intimate frineds in Washington that he saw little hope the government would survive.

Letelier was arrested Sept. 11, 1973, the day of the Pinochet coup and just 12 days after he had been appointed Allende's minister of defence. He was taken to several military camps before finally being transferred to Dawson Island, an icy, windblown encampment just above Antarctica in the Straits of Magellan. No charges ever were brought against him.

Four to Serve Three Years As Aldermen

Successful candidates for four aldermanic vacancies on Victoria city council this November will find themselves having to serve three years instead of the standard two-year term.

The extended stint will be in preparation for the city's change-over to a system of holding civic elections every two years, which was endorsed by council's caucus meeting Tuesday.

Victoria has traditionally followed the pattern of most other B.C. municipalities in holding annual elections, with the two-year terms overlapping so that half the council comes up for election each year.

Under the new policy, however, the entire council — mayor and eight aldermen — will have to be elected in one slate every two years, a method which council believes will heighten voter interest and allow for more efficient registration of voters.

After much arguing Tuesday on the best method of adopting the change, council scrapped a proposal which would have seen the four aldermen elected this November serving only a one-year term.

Instead, it was agreed that they should serve three years and that next year's successful contingent of mayor and four aldermen should be elected for two.

Thus, the first election of a new council en masse would not be until November, 1979.

Three of the four aldermen who face re-election this year — Ald. Murray Glazier, Ald. Bob Ellis and Ald. John Hayes — oposed both the principle of biennial elections and the suggested method of adopting it.

Hayes wanted the issue put to the voters in a referendum, but that comment received a groaning response from Mayor Mike Young: "Aw, to heck with that."

Among those joining Young in support of the change was Ald. Hellen Beirnes, who said biennial elections would be a real "shot in the arm" for civic politics.

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers was instructed to confirm through the department of municipal affairs that there would be no objection to extending the terms of the four aldermen elected this fall.

Stalled Centre Offers Options

The president of the Greater Victoria Activity Centre for the Handicapped said today he is submitting three options to the provincial government to get the project built and operating.

Floyd Fairclough said he will propose first that the provincial secretary's department contribute a $300,000 grant to see the centre on Darwin in Saanich finished. It is about 70 per cent built now and work was stopped last week for lack of funds.

Fairclough said his brief, approved at a board meeting Tuesday night, will suggest that if the government cannot approve all of the funds needed, it consider a lesser grant, possibly for $150,000, together with a loan of the other $150,000 needed.

The third option would be for the province to guarantee a $300,000 loan the society would make, with the understanding the society would do all it could to raise the funds and the province would make good any shortfall.

Fairclough said a report that cabinet ministers Hugh Curtis and Bill Vander Zalm had agreed to guarantee the loan was not accurate. What they did was indicate last week they would look favorably on such an application, he said, but any decision would have to be made by cabinet.

Supermarket Fined $100 For Rotten Food

TORONTO (CP — A Loblaws Ltd. supermarket, which had as much as 35 per cent decay in fresh produce sampled last winter, was fined $100 Monday — the maximum for a first offence.

James Inrig, prosecutor for the provincial agriculture department, said the charges were laid under the Ontario Farm Products Grades and Sales Act after an inspection last Feb. 19.

Produce samples examined by a provincial agriculture official at that time showed softness or decay levels ranging from 10 to 35 per cent.

Defence lawyer Daniel Ferguson, after pleading guilty to the four charges on behalf of Loblaws, asked for and was granted two weeks for the supermarket to pay the fine.

THEY HOPE TO MAKE VIEWS CRYSTAL CLEAR

Victoria's Crystal Pool has lost its glitter as far as some regular users are concerned, but a veteran swimming enthusiats hopes to change all that.

J. L. Brereton said Tuesday he has set up a meeting at the pool at 8:30 p.m. Thursday so that all patrons, including swim clubs and other organized groups, can air their views on the pool's shortcomings and, perhaps, form a group called the Crystal Pool Users' Association.

Probably the most important aspects to be discussed are the question of fair usage allocation and rates for organized groups, he said.

The meeting has the support of Ald. Ron McKenzie, chairman of the city's parks and recreation committee.

Among groups invited are the Victoria Swimming Club, the Crystalettes and the Chinatown Lions Club, which runs a Sunday swim-training program.

Major Saanich Habitat Study Complete

It cost $15,000 and took more than three months hard work but an environmental study of the landscape and natural habitat of Saanich municipality is now completed.

The study, incorporated in a 137-page report and a giant 40-page atlas was delivered to council's lands, planning and housing committee Tuesday.

Committee members received the report with thanks but gave no indication what they intend to do with it.

UVic doctoral student Phil Dearden, one of four researchers involved in the study told the committee the survey indentifies areas of the municipality that should be preserved.

The survey sets out an inventory of plants, soils and animals, evaluates conservation, recreation and development potentials, and points out areas that are "ecologically fragile," Deanden said.

The fragile areas include mountain tops, lakefronts and waterway systems, he said. Two critical locations were Rithet's Bog near Royal Oak and the area southwest of Prospect Lake.

The report makes 22 proposals. Some are general and philosophical such as the need to have a diversity of plant and animal life. Others are more specific, such as a blanket condemnation of motorcycle hill climbers.

In other matters the committee rejected an application from Mrs. J. Oldfield to allow a five-acre minimum subdivision on 295 acres of property she owns at Prospect Lake. The property is presently zoned for 10-acre subdivisions.

T. W. Loney who represented Mrs. Oldfield said many large land holders were finding it too expensive to retain land and that in order to pay increasing taxes are being forced to subdivide. However, he said, the development costs that would have to be borne by Mrs. Oldfield would preclude subdividing into parcels greater than five acres.

Municipal planner G. V. Laurenson noted that so far this year the municipality has received applications in the five- to 10-acre areas which would create 84 lots as against a total of 49 lots for the previous five years.

He said he sympahized with the owners of large properties who are faced with heavy tax burdens but added "the solution to this hardship must lie in petition to the provincial government for relief through the assessment authority."

Burnside Status Climbing

Saanich public works committee will seek a meeting with the highways department in hopes of saving the municipality $300,000.

At least that's the amount the committee feels it could get from the provincial government if the municipal road system at Burnside and Tillicum is elevated to "secondary" road status.

Such roads receive a 50 percent capital cost subsidy from the government.

There are two catches, however.

First, the government has to agree to re-designate Burnside and Tillicum as secondary roads.

Municipal Engineer Cliff Warren says there is no standard criteria although it is generally accepted that if more than 25 per cent of the persons using the roads are non residents merely travelling through, then the road has secondary status.

Warren is encouraged because a traffic survey tabled at Tuesday's committee meeting showed an average of 26 per cent of vehicle trips were "through trips."

But there's another catch. The committee has to get the highways officials to meet with them before construction work on the two roads — budgeted to cost $600,000 — is completed.

Sandy Noel, chairman of the public works committee, said results of the traffic survey have been forwarded to the highways office but so far there has been no acknowledgement.

"They have been very tardy about replying," he said. "The highways seems to be playing poker with us, hoping we'll finish the job before the reclassificaiton goes through."

He said the committe will ask for a meeting "with the minister or deputy minister . . . nothing less than that."

Sympathy, But No Help For Zoning Law Victims

A Saanich couple whose Shelbourne Street property has devaluated because of encroaching commercial development received Saanich council's sympathy, but little else Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Brian Selby of 3598 Shelbourne (at Pear) repeated an appeal to council to have their corner lot rezoned to commercial classification so it would fit in with commercial property on the other three corners.

Block Brother realtors also wrote council on the Selby's behalf saying with the traffic and noise and nearby businesses, the Selby's property was worth less as a residential property.

The Selby's said with the lower value, they could not sell the house and buy one of equivalent value in a quieter section.

Council agreed the Selby's had a point, but aldermen said they had to stick to the community plan fighting ribbon development along Shelbourne.

Ald. David Patterson said he sympathized with the Selby's "having to live with all that pollution," but he could not agree to the zoning change that might have a "domino effect" on Shelbourne.

He was supported by Ald. Fred Severson who said he had to stick with the over-all plan, but Ald. Maurice Johnson suggested council look at the 1964 plan to see if it should be revised.

Collection Cut

Municipal garbage collection in Saanich will revert Monday to every second week, Cliff Warren, municipal engineer announced Tuesday.

The collection had been on a weekly basis over the summer months.

WINTER CONCERTS

Success of the summer series of concerts sponsored jointly by Greater Victoria Art Gallery and Victoria Conservatory of Music, has resulted in a winter series being arranged under the title, Theme and Variations.

This series will open Thursday at 8 p.m. in the gallery and will have as its topic the music of early France. A quartet of musicians — James Kennedy, Peggy Palmer, Paul Palmer and Karen Smith — will be heard in a series of compositions for such rare instruments as the vihuela, lute, spinet, Krummhorn and recorder.

The program will explore musical styles of the 12th to 16th centuries, including development of early polyphonic music, popular forms, chansons and courtly love songs.

Doors will open at 7:30 p.m. and there is a charge of 50 cents for non-members of the gallery.

Convict's Birthday Dash

An inmate at William Head federal prison celebrated his 35th birthday Tuesday by skipping over the fence and dashing to freedom.

And today a Canada-wide warrant was issued for the arrest of Jack Miranda, also known as Jack William.

Colwood RCMP said Miranda went missing sometime between the 7 p.m. and 10 p.m. head counts.

He is described as five feet seven inches tall, 130 pounds, and possibly wearing either green or grey parka and grey slacks.

Miranda was serving time for a series of break-ins in New Westminster and would have been due for release November, 1977.

Easy Yeast-Dough Rolls for Beginners

Victoria Times
FOURTH SECTION
FOOD and nutrition

hilda beastall

This basic recipe is useful for beginners in yeast dough baking. Most of us start by trying a straight bread recipe and often end up in a panic because of the amount of good flours we have used with little assurance to help us towards perfect results.

While today's recipe will certainly make a very fine loaf of bread, it is more interesting to turn out three kinds of rolls.

Make other rolls to have on hand for Thanksgiving meals, frozen while fresh in the top of refrigerator freezer. And there will be samplings to enjoy while still warm from the oven.

Only one period of rising is needed, because the 3¾ cups (total) of flour makes a dough that most of us can handle — beating, in the early stage, then mixing the remainder, followed by a few kneading strokes on a pastry board or similar surface.

For your recipe file, we'll call this recipe

3-WAY-ROLL YEAST DOUGH

½ cup warm water
1 tsp. sugar
1 tblsp. or 1 pkt. granular yeast
1 cup hot milk (from skim powder)
1 tblsp. sugar
1 tsp. salt
3 tblsp. soft margarine
2 to 2¼ cups unbleached flour
½ cup soya flour
1 cup whole wheat flour

Into large warm bowl measure warm water. Stir in 1 teaspoon sugar. Sprinkle yeast over surface and let stand undisturbed for 10 minutes to "work."

Meanwhile in small basin, measure margarine, salt and 1 tablespoon sugar. Pour hot milk over these and stir to dissolve and cool.

When the two liquids are just about same temperature, mix together in the large bowl. Stir well.

Add 2 cups unbleached flour gradually, beating well with wooden spoon until smooth. Continue beating while adding soya flour and most of the whole wheat flour.

Beat and mix until ball of dough leaves side of bowl, adding whole wheat flour as needed to eliminate visible moisture.

There is still ¼ cup of unbleached flour remaining for rolling out the dough.

Flour the pastry board; drop the ball of dough from bowl to floured board. Knead with hands (oiled lightly if this suits you, or floured) a few times until dough is smoothed. Divide into 3 pieces. For Parkerhouse Rolls: Take one piece of dough. Pat and roll on floured board to about ¼-inch thickness. With 2½-inch cookie cutter (or a cup the same diameter) cut out circles. Patch pieces of dough together until all of the one portion is used.

Brush each circle lightly with very soft margarine; fold one half over the other to make a purse, pressing edges lightly together. Place 2 inches apart on greased cookie sheet. Makes 10 to 12 rolls. Larger but fewer rolls can be made by using a 3½-inch diameter cutter, a fruit nappie or a saucer for cutting out.

For Round Rolls: Take second piece of dough, pat and shape into a fat roll. Divide into 10 or 12 pieces. With floured hands, shape each piece into a round ball. Place 2 inches apart on greased cookie sheet; flatten a little with palm of hand. Makes 10 to 12 round rolls. These may be made in large greased muffit pans if the pan will fit into your oven conveniently. Just grease the pans and drop the round balls, one in each opening.

For Cloverleaf Rolls: Take last piece of dough and shape into a long narrow roll. Divide into three sections, then pinch off 10 small pieees from each section at a time. Form the small pieces into one-inch diameter balls and drop three side by side into each greased muffin pan,

Make the number of rolls to suit your muffin pans, a little larger or smaller makes no difference in method used or in baking.

The main idea is to use pans which fit into your oven to save on amount of time heat is being used for baking.

Put all pans into a warm place 30 to 35 deg. C., covered with a warm towel, to rise to double their bulk.

Rising time will be from 30 to 45 minutes according to temperature. A warming drawer beneath the oven of an oil range is perfect for the drawer may be left partly open and covered with a clean towel to keep the warmth just right. A shelf beside a hot water tank is useful. Or you must contrive some other place to suit your equipment.

Bake all these types of rolls in moderate oven 177 deg. C. for 20 minutes or until lightly brown. The rolls should sound hollow when tapped with knuckles.

Remember that if the ingredients are put together as indicated in the step-by-step procedure, the result will be edible even if not perfect for some reason.

As an introduction to working with yeast dough these rolls are sure to convince anyone that while breadmaking may be an art it is not an impossible skill when started on a small scale by making a few deliciously healthful rolls.

Fancy breads and rolls all come from simple yeast dough

Spoonbread With Bacon, Cheese

The bacon may be omitted if you like.

3 cups milk
¾ cup white hominy grits or corn meal
1 tblsp. butter or margarine
¼ lb. grated medium-fine sharp cheddar cheese
6 slices bacon, cut into 1-inch crosswise pieces and cooked until crisp
6 large eggs, separated
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt

In a medium saucepan scald the milk; gradually stir in the grits; cook gently, covered and stirring often, for about 25 minutes. Stir in well the butter, cheese and bacon. Vigorously stir in egg yolks, one at a time, then baking powder. Beat egg whites and salt to a soft-peak stage. Stir a large spoonful of the whites into the grits mixture; fold in remaining whites. Turn into an ungreased 2 to 2½-quart souffle dish. Place in a pan of hot water that comes up 1-inch high around dish. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a knife inserted in centre comes out clean — 75 minutes. Serve at once. Makes 6 servings.

Pickled Peaches Pamper Palate

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: I'm among those people who have tried for years to grow ivy successfully indoors and can count my successes on the fingers of one branch. One day not long ago I read one of your columns that recommended Grape Ivy, a member of the Cissus family, as an easier and more hassle-free plant than the common Hedera varieties of ivy. I took your advice, bought a large Grape Ivy, and lo, my thumb, which I though had a hopeless case of "poison-to-ivy," suddenly turned green and my Grape Ivy is thriving.

I had such a feeling of confidence that next time I went plant shopping I bought another, larger-leafed variety of Cissus called a Kangaroo Vine. Well, sad to say, it seems to be about ready to crinkle up and jump out of its pouch. I'm giving it good light and watering when dry, but I'm spending almost half my time cutting off drying-up leaves. Is there a difference between this plant and the Grape Ivy or did I just, if you'll pardon the expression, get a "lemon?" — C.R.

DEAR C.R.: Frankly, we don't know what to tell you. Perhaps, as you say, you did get a "lemon," or a plant with a disease that you forgot to check for when you bought it. (Red Spider can get to these plants and cause the symptoms you describe before you ever know it's happening, especially since most of the time they're hanging too high for you to make the needed daily, almost microscopic check.)

The book on the Cissus Antartica is that it's an easy-to-grow houseplant in either sun or shade, ideal for climbing up walls or cascading down. It definitely is no more difficult than the Grape Ivy, so have renewed confidence, try another one and, if you fail with that, just figure that there are too many other plants you can grow with success to bother undermining your confidence with another loser.

One of my favorite and most requested pickling recipes is tangy, spicy pickled peaches — a superb product for use as dessert hot or cold with roast pork, ham, turkey and sweet and sour meat dishes.

Please cut this column out and stick it inside a kitchen closet door right NOW, because I can't send out extra copies if you mislay it. Better still paste it into a cooking scrap book and make friends copy it rather than loan it to them.

This recipe is for a five-quart batch and here's what you'll need.

Six cinnamon sticks four-inches long; one tablespoon whole allspice; two tablespoons whole cloves; small piece ginger root; four cups cider vinegar; four cups water; ¼ teaspoon salt; eight cups sugar; six pounds medium-sized peaches — about 24 peaches if you still haven't got a set of scales; sterile cheese cloth and five sterile 32-ounce screw-top canning jars.

Make a big square of cheesecloth, put in all the spices and tie into a bag with a length of string and boil it up in the mix of the vinegar, water, salt and sugar. Simmer tightly covered while preparing the fruit.

Using a big water bath at a rolling boil, lower in the peaches in a big cheesecloth bag and poach for one minute. Cool the peaches, slip off the skins, using a short sharp kitchen knife on the tops and tails, halve them and dump the pits.

As each peach is prepared, the halves are popped into the simmering syrup-pickle, allowing a couple of minutes before lifting them out with a slotted spoon to pack into the jars.

The spice bag is now discarded, the pickle brought to a firm boil and poured to cover the fruit. Screw on the tops and store in a cool dark area.

Since this is a PICKLING procedure that perfectly preserves the fruit, it does away with all the messy business of boiling water baths associated with canning. This not only makes my recipe quicker and easier to do, but produces a far more versatile product than the plain canning of soft fruit.

The pickle firms up the peaches, they are sweet and yet have a delicious spicy, tangy flavor that goes equally well with some meat dishes as with a scoop of ice cream.

One jar of these peaches together with the syrup can give you a peach-glazed baked ham to make you drool. And drained, chilled and sliced, these peaches make a great accompaniment to cold cuts. At Thanksgiving I poach a jar in their own syrup and serve them with the roast turkey instead of cranberries.

Another fine recipe will end a good meal in the old English fashion.

After drainining the peach halves, I chilled them, put them in a bowl and sprinkled over one tablespoon of cognac and served with fine old Cheddar cheese, English water biscuits and a bottle of port.

For this recipe the fruit must be firm and it is better to use slightly unripe fruit, rather than peachee that have reached the dessert stage of ripeness.

PEARS and CRABAPPLES are superb when prepared in the same way, with slight variations. For example it is not necessary to scald them, as one must to skin peaches.

Pears are peeled, cored and halved raw and then poached for a minute or two depending on how hard they are. Then simply follow the peach procedure.

Crabapples, usually allowed to decay on the ground, when prepared in a spiced pickle make a fine companion to main course dishes and are very pretty.

Crabapples are the easiest and cheapest fruit to spice-pickle, since they are prepared with the stalk left on. Pick them from the tree and not the ground, when just ripe, carefully wash and drain away all the water and pat dry.

To my spiced pickle mix, add drops of red food coloring until it is just tinted then put in all the crabapples — a few at a time to keep up the heat. Poach until just tender — roughly 10 minutes. Since this fruit is usually available from a nearby tree for nothing, don't hesitate to test with a fork and if necessary discard one or two pierced fruits. I usually add a few extra crabapples for this reason.

They look and taste great as garnish to many meat dishes such as roast pork, baked hams, duck and goose and are superb with all wild game from snipe to bear.

Drain a jar and serve them chilled in a bowl before the meat course comes on, they are delicious nibblers at this stage of dinner. But you had better have my recipe on hand, your guests are sure to ask for it.

Bran Flakes Daily May Not Be Enough

eating right

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK FABRY

About five years ago, Dr. Denis Burket, a British surgeon who had spent most of his career in Africa, returned to England to retire. Once home, he was struck by the differences in diet and diseases between Africa and the Western World. He noted that Europeans and North Americans are plagued with diseases like cancer of the colon, heart disease, constipation hemorrhoids and diverticulitis—diseases that are almost unknown in Africa. And he quickly reached the conclusion that we in the Western World don't have enough fibre or roughage in our diets, and that lack is causing us a lot of problems.

His cries of alarm over our trend away from fibre in our diets woke up a few nutritionists. For several decades, scientists hadn't paid much attention to dietary fibre, probably because it's difficult to analyse in the laboratory. Scientists don't know exactly how much fibre there is in the food we eat. Besides that, fibre isn't digested and absorbed in the body, so nutrition scientists had long assumed that it didn't have much to do with how well nourished we are.

Now there are a lot of scientists busy investigating the role fibre plays in our diet. Nutrition scientific literature is full of the reports on this research. And we recently attended the Nutrition Society of Canada's Miles Symposium on Dietary Fibre, where some top authorities on the subject spent a day reviewing the results of current research.

They've concluded that fibre is essential to our health, and suggest that we keep in mind several facts about fibre. First, that fibre is found only in plants — vegetables, fruits, seeds, and cereals —never in animals. Don't expect to get fibre from meat, milk, cheese or eggs — it's not there.

Secondly, don't assume that bran is the only source of fibre. Vegetables and fruits are rich in fibre that's in a more beneficial form than the fibre found in bran.

Remember that the main function of fibre is to ease the movement of food bulk through your intestines, sweeping with it any debris or leftovers of undigested food or bile secretions. Bile secretions are derived from cholesterol in the blood, and are the natural means by which your body gets rid of cholesterol. If they remain in your body, in your lower intestines, they can cause you problems. They are likely to change chemically, and are thought to be responsible for the eventual development of cancer of the colon. (Of course, there's more to the development of cancer than that: we've simplified it to show the role that fibre plays.)

You can see how important fibre is to your health and well-being. It combines with the bile secretions and keeps them moving through your intestines.

But you should know that there are different kinds of fibre, some of which work better for you than others. For example, purified fibre preparations are not as effective as the fibre contained in unrefined foods. Processing changes the quality of the fibre and makes it less effective. So, it's better for you to eat unrefined foods. The fibre you'll get from eating a whole wheat cereal is more efficient that the fibre you'll consume by eating a refined cereal to which you've added bran.

If your diet is composed mainly of low-fibre, high-energy foods, such as white flour, sugar and fats, it is not enough to add just a bit of fibre. An ounce of bran each day is not going to help you. You would be better to increase the amount of high-fibre foods you eat, things like vegetables, whole grain cereals and breads, legumes and fruits; and eat less of the low-fibre, high-energy foods.

You will be healthier if you eat more unrefined foods, and cut down on refined ones; and increase your consumption of salads, vegetables and fruits. If this would be a drastic change in your eating habits, do it gradually. Serve the foods we recommend in an appetizing way, testing new recipes. We'll say again, fibre is essential to your well-being. And it's never too late to change the way you eat and improve your health.

Plain Macaroni and Cheese

Mary Moore

About 15 years ago we were holidaying in Florida. There were two other families staying in the same apartment building. We would entertain one another at dinner each evening. One morning when we were planning the current evening meal my brother heard us talking and said "Do we have to have a banquet every night Can't we have plain macaroni and cheese for once?"

Harking back to that warning on a sunny morning I have selected two of my best.

Macaroni and Cheese No. 1

1½ c. elbow macaroni
1 tsp. salt
6 c. boiling water
2 tbsp. margarine
2 tbsp. flour
2 c. hot milk
½ lb. process cheese, cut up paprika

In a large pot cook the elbow macaroni with the salt in the boiling water for 25 minutes. Drain.

In a large pot blend together the margarine and flour and stir in the hot milk and cheese until thick and smooth.

Add the drained macaroni to the cheese sauce and turn into a large baking dish. (If desired, to add extra protein content to this dish, cover top with extra slices of process cheese.) Sprinkle with paprika and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. for 20 minutes or until bubbling and golden-flecked all over top. Serves four.

Emem's Macaroni and Cheese No. 2

3 c. elbow macaroni
12 c. boiling water
1½ tbsp. salt
¾ lb. shredded Cheddar cheese (3 c. lightly packed)
3 tbsp. margarine
3 tbsp. flour
1½ c. milk
1 10-oz. carton dairy sour cream

Into a very large pot measure the water and salt, bring to boil, add macaroni elbows, stirring, and boil uncovered 15 minutes. Drain through colander and return macaroni to pot. This is a great favorite of my friendly fans.

Meanwhile make sauce by melting margarine, blend in flour then stir in milk and sour cream until thick. Reserve ½ cup of the shredded cheese for the top. Add all remaining cheese to sauce and stir in. Mix with drained macaroni and turn into casserole. Sprinkle reserved cheese all over top and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 45 minutes. Serves six.

LEMON YOGURT FREEZE

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
3 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon water
⅔ cup sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
2 containers (each 8 ounces) plain yogurt
2 egg whites

In a small saucepan sprinkle gelatin over lemon juice and water; over low heat stir constantly until gelatin dissolves — about 3 minutes. Stir in sugar, salt and lemon rind. Remove from heat. Cool slightly. Stir in yogurt. Turn into a large bowl and add egg whites; beat at high speed of electric mixer until smooth and fluffy — about 10 minutes. Return to loaf pan; freeze until firm.

Versatile Tuna Threatened

Conservationists and marine biologists warn that the world stock of tuna is dwindling, which is sad news since this tasty and relatively inexpensive fish is nutritious and also provides healthy fare for those with cholesterol or weight problems.

The International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tunas reported that the total catch for 1974 in both the Atlantic and Mediterranean had declined to 12,000 tons in 1973. Which is quite a drop when you consider the fact that they caught 40,000 tons in those same waters ten years earlier. Plenty of the fish are still caught in the Pacific, of course.

Tuna, a member of the mackerel family, is found in all but the coldest waters of the world, says a report by National Geographic Society.

It is the basis of one of the world's oldest and largest fishing industries.

The versatile fish became known in North America more than 70 years ago when the California sardine, a mainstay of many dinner tables, began to disappear from the waters off our West Coast. Searching for a replacement, one canner turned to tuna and began turning them out in quantity in his Los Angeles plant.

Served the year round, tuna is appetizing in both summer salads and cold weather casseroles and has long been a favorite sandwich filling. For a change, try this formula for a summer hearty salad.

4 scallions
⅔ cup mayonnaise
2 tsp. curry powder
½ tsp. salt
1 tbsp. vinegar
1 can (4 oz.) pimiento, diced
1 cup sliced celery
2 cans (12 oz. each) whole kernel corn, drained
2 cans (9¼ oz. each) tuna in vegetable oil

Slice scallions, white and green parts, into ¼-inch pieces. Blend together mayonnaise, curry powder, salt and vinegar. Add Scallions, pimiento, celery, and corn and tuna, both well drained. Toss to mix well. Chill and serve in a 1½-quart bowl. Garnish with salad greens if desired. Serves 6. Good with chilled chablis.

Apple Chutney Curries Favor In Varied Dishes

By TOM HOGE
Associated press

In the culinary world, India is best known perhaps for its curries, those artfully prepared, tonge-tingling mixtures of spiced-up meat, fish or fowl, tempered with rice. And no India curry is truly complete unless it is accompanied by that unique relish known as chutney.

When the Britiish held sway on the Indian subcontinent in the 18th and 19th centuries, they acquired a taste for curry and this unique, volcanic dish soon found its way to other countries.

To many Westerners, curry is a flavorful, thick, yellow cream sauce that can be poured over meats, vegetables and even eggs. Most Indian cooks would scorn a prepared curry powder such as we use because each dish must have its own distinctive seasoning.

But since curry is actually a blend of up bo 50 spices capable of a dazzling range of tastes, most of us have to settle for a good prepared powder, of wsich there are many. Suffice it to say that most curries contain a good deal of tumeric, which accounts for the golden color, and some saffron.

There is nothing to stop a cook from doctoring the curry powder with spices, fresh herbs and fruits. Chili powder or tabasco will give it more bite and grated orange or lemon rind will tone it down.

When chutney was brought to England a couple of centuries ago, many people found they could not afford the splendid chutney imported by the British East India Company founded in the 17th century by London merchants. So housewives tried to duplicate the relish, and recipes began apearing in cookbooks for lemon pickle laced with horseradish and mustard flour and for a variety of pickled vegetables.

The varieties are infinite, especially for the so-called green chutneys usually made with freshly ground coriander leaves, onions, salt and green chilies. Others feature mint, mango, mixed fruit and coconut.

Chutney is really quite easy to make and not too expensive. Here's a formula for one with a carrot and apple base.

3 cups chopped, pared carrots
3 cups chopped, pared apples
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
1 orange, thinly sliced and quartered
3 cups cider vinegar
1 pound dark brown sugar
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon Tabasco

Combine all ingredients in large kettle. Bring to boil over medium heat, stirring constantly. Reduce heat and simmer uncovered 1½ hours till liquid is syrupy. Ladle into hot sterilized jars to within ⅛ inch of rim. Screw on lids. Place jars in kettle on wire rack. Add water to cover jars by 1 inch. Bring to boil; boil 10 minutes. Remove jars and cool. Store in cool place. Makes 4 8-ounce jars.

Cocoa Sponge

⅔ cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons unsweetened coca
1¼ cups milk
2 eggs, separated

In a medium saucepan stir together ⅓ cup of the sugar, the flour, salt and cocoa. Gradually stir in milk, keeping smooth. Stir constantly over moderate heat until thickened and boiling; remove from heat. Beat egg yolks slightly; stir in a small amount of the cocoa mixture, then stir back into saucepan. Beat egg whites until stiff; gradually beat in remaining sugar. Gradually fold cocoa mixture into beaten whites until entirely blended.

Turn into a 1½-quart casserole; place in a pan of hot water; bake in a preheated 350-degree over until a knife inserted in the center comes out clean — about 1 hour. Serve warm or cold.

Makes 5 or 6 servings.

Cure Equals Age

Cheddar cheese that has a mild flavor usually is cured for two or three months while cheddar cheese with a sharp flavor needs longer curing — from eight to 12 months.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am terribly upset right now. I just asked a man whom I have admired for a long time if he was married, and when he said, "yes," I came into the house and had a good cry.

Abby, why doesn't a man wear a wedding ring if he's married? This one doesn't have the kind of job that would make wearing a ring dangerous because he is a postman.

It seems to me that a married man — especially one who is out-of-this-world handsome — would want the girls he meets to know that he is already spoken for. Don't men who go around without a wedding ring realize that they leave the impression that they aren't married?

Abby, please tell married men to wear wedding rings because I'm not the only girl who respects marriage. — SINGLE AND 27

(P.S. My mother says that the problem is with ME. I don't understand why. It's the MAN who gives the mistaken impression that he's available when he's not.)

DEAR SINGLE: Your mother is right, dear. Only a small percentage of married men wear wedding rings, so a girl shouldn't assume that the absence of a ring is an "all-clear" signal.

DEAR ABBY: I have a great idea. I think all the men who have had vasectomies should form a club (they could call it "the "V" Society — for vasectomy) and carry a membership card signed by their physicians as proof that they're sterile. That way a girl wouldn't have to worry about getting P.G. — TRUDY.

DEAR TRUDY: Right. Then, all she'd have to worry about would be getting V.D.

Dealing With Post-Natal Blues

By Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Twice I have given birth to healthy children and developed severe, depressing "Blues" that almost destroyed me. Though we want a third child, I wonder if another period of depression can be permanent. — Mrs. L.W.

Dear Mrs. W. — Severe depression, or blues, after the birth of a child occurs frequently. Sometimes the episode is mild and lasts for a short period. In other cases the depression is deep, prolonged and difficult.

These postpartam blues must be considered as another of the emotional upheavals that happen to women under special circumstances.

With any stress, a mental crisis can occur. And the birth of a baby is now considered another stressful crisis in the life-cycle of a woman.

Obstetricians, gynecologists and psychologists are combining their talent to better understand and explain why such severe mental depression occasionally occurs. There now is a tendency to believe that the excess production of some types of hormones and hormone imbalances may be responsible.

It is also felt that psychological evaluation prior to delivery may give doctors some clue as to who may be vulnerable to postpartum depression. With this in mind, some research workers are studying hormone balance in the hope that they can maintain it and prevent its recurrence.

Before entertaining the idea of a third pregnancy, these factors should be thoroughly evaluated. It would do you and all of the children a great injustice if postpartum depression destroyed family happiness.

Is it possible for a woman to become pregnant after 50? — Mrs. U.G.

Dear Mrs. G. — My nurse, who spent 15 years in the delivery room, says that she has never seen on any of the records a pregnancy after the age of 50. Actually, vital statistics show that some cases of pregnancy have occurred after 50 and even after 60. I do not know how accurate these "case reports" are.

Generally, it is accepted that the menopause, or change of life, in most instances, represents the end of a woman's reproductive life. Occasionally women continue to menstruate after the age of 50. In such cases pregnance may be possible.

Stabbing Case Defeats Jury

A rare hung jury will likely result in a new trial at a future date for 22-year-old James Bryan McWilliams.

The seven men and five women deliberated three hours and 20 minutes Tuesday before being discharged after telling county court Judge Montague Drake they were deadlocked and there didn't appear to be any purpose in further consideration.

McWilliams was accused of causing bodily harm with intent to wound by stabbing Robin Sheffield, 18, with a knife in Colwood March 25.

The alleged incident occurred, court was told, after two cars stopped on the Old Island Highway near Centennial Pool after banging against each other.

The jury retired at midmorning after hearing Judge Drake's charge. They returned once to hear the transcript of evidence from the preliminary hearing by Wayne Doerges, driver of the car in which Sheffield and another man were riding.

McWilliams was a passenger in the other car, driven by Rodney Steigenberger, and including a female passenger.

The Crown's case was presented by Gordon Macdonald, assisted by Trudi Brown. Bill McElmoyle represented McWilliams.

Passenger Dies

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — One of the men injured in a two-car collision in nearby Port Moody Sept. 17 died today in hospital. Ricky Stephen Alex, 22, of Haney was a passenger in a car that collided with another at an intersection. Two other persons remain in hospital in fair condition.

Vancouver actress Dorothy Ann Haug watches a rehearsal of La Bonza Meets Bill Bennett, the revue (?) play (?) musical (??) which will inhabit the McPherson Playhouse starting Thursday for four nights. It is rumored that Dorothy Ann is playing La Bonza and that Don Shipley, artistic director of the Belfray (which will profit from the profits of this fantastical-hysterical show) is making his stage debut in a juicy role. La Bonza is a sequal to that never-to-be-forgotten 1974 show, La Bonza Unchained and is the result of another collaboration between Greg Walsh (book and lyrics) and Charles Barber (music). Liz Gorrie, last seen in Cabaret, is directing. It is said to be firmly tongue-in-cheek and wholly irreverent.

Bilingualism National Sport

TORONTO (CP) — Senator Louis Robichaud, former Liberal premier of New Brunswick, said Tuesday that Canada has a new national sport — the fight over bilingualism.

"The argument over bilingualism has replaced hockey as the national sport," he told lawyers attending the annual Thomas More Red Mass.

He said much of the fight over bilingualism is the result of a misunderstanding that the Liberal government is "trying to force French down the throats of English-speaking Canadians."

He blamed the federal government for not giving clear and concise information about its policies, and the Quebec government for not bothering to explain Bill 22, the province's Official Language Act.

Ontario Attorney-General Roy McMurtry said at a dinner following the mass that Canada needs more lawyers to explain a legal system that is becoming too complicated and too remote.

He said there is a growing feeling that the law is becoming increasingly remote from the individual citizen.

"Fair and just laws are of little comfort to the citizen who believes he is denied reasonable access to the legal processes that should be available to every citizen."

Let Teachers Teach Basics—Wallace

Schools must return to the basic goal of educating students, instead of becoming social service centres, Tory leader Scott Wallace said Tuesday.

In a speech to the Abbotsford Rotary Club, Wallace said student problems arising from social reasons should be tackled by appropriately-trained personnel, "not by teachers whose first and foremost job is to teach, not to tackle social problems."

Teachers seem to have succumbed to the notion that in today's schools they are as much therapists as educators, he said.

"Under . . . pressure, teachers have lost sight of the fundamental purpose of education and have been coerced into emphasizing the personality growth and social happiness of the student. The primary purpose of education is to teach students the basic tools of communication and from that point onwards, to encourage the acquisition of knowledge and to foster intellectual growth."

It is "painfully obvious," Wallace said, that elementary and secondary schools are failing miserably in teaching "fundamentals."

He said one recent applicant for the position of stenographer-typist in his office — a person with a Grade 12 education and an additional clerical course from a private college — typed a letter of about 100 words which contained 22 spelling mistakes.

Wallace urged that the school curriculum be changed to place greater emphasis on reading, writing and arithmetic in elementary schools with persistent attention given to writing in secondary grades.

The curriculum committee should be composed of parents, employers and young adults, he said, instead of only teachers and members of the education department.

If specialized people are needed to handle students' social problems, these professionals should be funded by the department of human resources, he said, leaving teachers free to teach.

It's Hard to Beat Beef for Price or Flavor

September, to most people, means an end to summer holidays and a return to school or work. Getting back into the daily routine often results in lunch-box worries and hurried meals.

Whether you're a busy homemaker or a working wife and mother, you're interested in making meal preparations as simple and convenient as possible. That's where beef can help.

Several cuts of beef are ready to serve in a matter of minutes, while other simply require a little pre-planning.

Steaks of all types require little preparation or cooking time. Even blade, chuck or round steak can be quickly broiled or barbecued after marinating. Preparation of a marinade requires only a few minutes but, if you wish something easier, try a bottled dressing or a packaged marinade which works in 10-15 minutes.

Ground beef is extremely versatile and many speedy dishes can be prepared from this inexpensive form of beef. Likewise, beef liver is inexpensive as well as being nutritious.

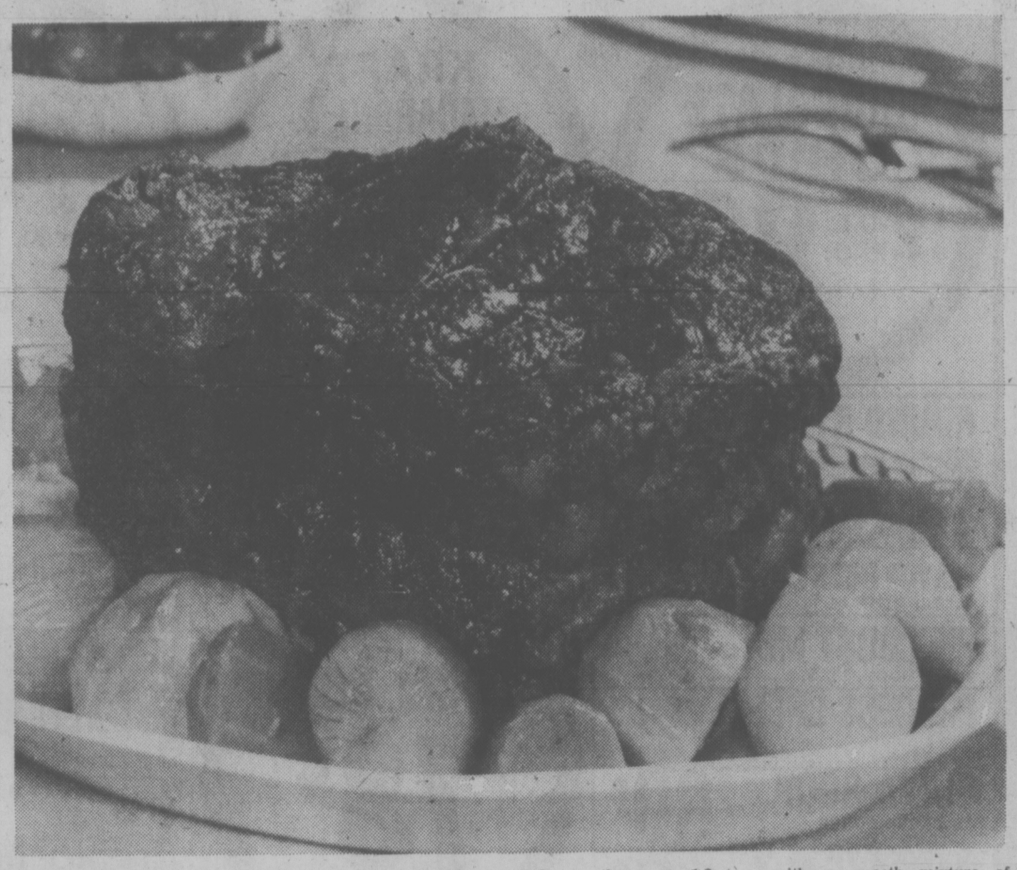
No main dish requires less preparation time than a roast of beef. It can be popped into the oven before you go to work or on that shopping spree. Set your oven-timer and you have a delicious roast of beef dinner waiting for you when you return home.

And don't waste those leftovers. Cold roast beef (especially if it is not overcooked) makes tasty sandwiches. Add a little horseradish or chili sauce to make the sandwiches extra-special. Leftovers are great for speedy meals. Convert them into hot beef sandwiches, shepherd's pie, a beef salad, or try our delicious Savoury Beef recipe.

Stews, pot roasts etc. can fit nicely into your busy schedule if you plan ahead. Prepare several pounds of stew beef at one time. It can be simmering while you do other household chores. When cooked, freeze in family-sized portions ready to finish off as Stroganoff or as your favourite stew. Casseroles and Meat Loaves can also be made ahead and frozen. Wrapped tightly, cooked beef dishes can be frozen for up to three months.

Beef lends itself to a wide variety of time-saving appliances. A pressure cooker can be used to make speedy stew beef, pot roast and short-rib dishes. The microwave oven is an exciting new appliance that can be used for tender cuts of beef from rib roasts to ground beef patties and casseroles. It is especially suited to quick warm-ups; great for heating up cooked slices of roast beef. Another popular appliance is the crock-pot or slow-cooker. It has many advantages — is relatively inexpensive, an energy-saver, is safe to leave unattended and keeps in the flavour and nutritive value of the food. It also enables you to serve the cheaper cuts of beef conveniently. Stews, pot roasts, round steak recipes and even dishes such as cabbage rolls can be tastefully cooked while your're away.

For great eating at your convenience, plan your menus around these time and energy-saving recipes:



EASY VEGETABLE BEEF SOUP

- 4 cups of beef stock
- ½ cup coarsely diced celery
- 1 small onion, coarsely diced
- 1 cup frozen mixed vegetables
- 1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- Diced cooked beef
- Season to taste

Combine all ingredients and simmer covered approximately 15 minutes. Do not overcook vegetables.

BARBECUED SHORT RIBS

- 3 lb. beef short ribs, cut into 3" pieces
- 1½ to 2 tsp. salt
- ½ cup minced onions
- ½ cup catchup
- ½ cup water
- ¼ cup wine vinegar
- 1 tbsp. brown sugar
- 1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
- 1 tsp. paprika
- 1 tsp. dry or prepared mustard

In pressure cooker, brown ribs on all sides, sprinkling with salt. Drain off most of fat. Combine onions with rest of ingredients; pour over meat. Cook at 15 lb. pressure 25 to 30 minutes as manufacturer directs. Reduce pressure immediately. Remove excess fat before serving. Makes 4 servings.

SPICEY POT ROAST

- 5 lbs. blade, chuck or small shoulder roast
- ¼ tbsp. shortening
- ½ tsp. thyme
- 2 tbsp. sugar
- 1 tbsp. vinegar
- 1 minced clove garlic or ½ tsp. garlic salt
- 2 cups tomato juice
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1 bay leaf
- 1½ tsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. pepper

Brown meat on all sides in shortening. Combine next 9 ingredients and pour over meat. Cover and simmer 3 to 3½ hours until tender. Strain gravy and thicken with flour. Serve with mashed potatoes and buttered carrots (or baked potato and French green beans).

SAVOURY BEEF WITH RICE

- 3½ cups lean cooked stewing beef or other leftover cooked beef
- 1 small onion, diced
- ½ cup shopped celery
- ½ green pepper (optional)
- ¼ tsp. garlic salt
- 2 tbsp. oil or butter
- 1-3 tsp. thyme or 1-2 tsp. curry powder
- 1 can condensed beef broth
- 3 tbsp flour

Cook stewing beef until tender or dice leftover beef. Saute vegetables in hot oil on low heat until tender. Stir in garlic and thyme. Cook 1 minute. Add meat and beef broth. Bring to a boil. Cover and simmer 5-10 minutes. Thicken with a smooth mixture of flour and water. Serve hot over Steamed White Rice. Makes 5-6 servings.

To cook stewing beef—Remove fat and grisle from meat. Coat meat with flour seasoned with salt, pepper and garlic salt. Brown quickly in hot fat. Add 1-1½ cups water. Cover and simmer until tender (approximately 1½ hours).

TANGY MEAT LOAF

This recipe good hot, but just as delicious cold. Try it!

Preheat oven to 350 deg. f.

Combine

- 1½ lbs. lean ground beef
- ½ cup grated cheddar cheese
- ¼ cup rolled oats
- 2 onion, finely chopped
- 2 tbsp. chopped parsley

Mix together and blend in

- 1-3 cup catsup
- 1 egg
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
- ½ tsp. pepper
- garlic salt (optional)

Press into a 9x5x3-inch loaf pan.

Top with 3 slices side bacon

Bake in preheated 350 deg. oven for one hour. Makes 6 servings.

BUDGETER'S BEEF STROGANOFF

- ⅓ cup flour
- 1 tsp. salt
- ½ tsp. pepper
- ½ tsp. garlic salt
- 2 lbs. chuck, shoulder or short-rib cut into 1½" cubes or stewing beef
- ¼ cup oil
- 1 medium onion chopped
- 1 cup water
- 1 bay leaf
- ½ tsp. thyme
- ½ cup sliced mushrooms
- ¾ cup dairy sour cream
- 1 tbsp. horseradish
- ¼ cup sauterne or other white wine (optional)

Dredge cubes of beef in flour which has been seasoned with the salt and pepper and garlic salt. Heat the oil in a heavy fry pan (with lid). Add floured meat and brown quickly on all sides. Add onion, water, bay leaf and thyme. Bring to boil and then reduce to simmer. Cover and cook slowly for 2 hours or until meat is tender. 5 minutes before serving, add mushrooms, sour cream, horseradish and wine. Just bring to a boil. Serve with green rice — cook long grain rice by normal method. Just before serving, stir in approx. 1 cup finely shopped parsley. Arrange rice in a ring around the outside of the platter. Fill the centre with the Stroganoff.

Carbohydrate Need

In a reducing diet the aim is to cut down on calories while maintaining the intake of necessary vitamins, minerals, protein and carbohydrates. The do-it-yourself dieter tends to equate carbohydrates with calories and feels that if he is to cut down calories he must cut out carbohydrates. To the contrary, an estimated 100 grams of carbohydrates a day is considered by nutrition authorities to be necessary for good health. An average slice of enriched bread supplies about 15 grams of carbohyydrates and about 75 calories.

Factualist Knows Who Did It

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL

NEW YORK (AP) — Uncle Sam was a food inspector during the War of 1812. George Washington had to borrow money to attend his first inauguration. The Wright Brothers did not fly the first airplane.

These facts may not change the course of history, but they are the stuff of life for Joseph Nathan Kane—his hobby and his profession. The 77-year-old native New Yorker has devoted the last 53 years to digging out unusual facts, discovering who did things first and setting the record straight on any historical inaccuracy he comes across.

Although he collects historical data, much of which he compiles into books, Kane does not consider himself a historian.

"All I am is a factualist—a fact-detector, as I've been called. I lay no claim to anything else," he said in an interview. "If it's a first, that's fine. But I'm not promoting any cause."

Kane's first book, Famous First Facts and Records, an update of which has just been published, deals with strictly American "firsts" from the first abdominal operation to the first woman mayor. In it, he authoritatively debunks old myths and gives credit to pioneers and inventors who have long gone unnoticed.

Facts About the Presidents, also written by Kane and also recently re-issued, provides details on the lives of every American president since George Washington.

Kane's apartment is filled with mementos, including old radio microphones, first editions, what he claims is the first fountain pen and letters about firsts and purported firsts. A sign on one wall reads "The Man with a New Idea is a Crackpot Until it Succeeds."

In 1923, Kane was given a contract to do a book on the story of American inventions. In the course of his research he found endless historical inaccuracies and determined to set the record straight—it took 10 years to complete First Facts.

In addition to writing and updating his books, Kane at one time ran the Kane Feature News Service. He was host of his own radio quiz show. Famous Firsts, in 1945 and wrote questions for such shows as The $64,000 Question, Break the Bank, What's the Word and That's a Fact. He also worked for a time as a publicity agent and free-lance reporter.

Among the eyebrow-raising facts Kane has ferreted out in his years of research are these.

—Samuel Pierpont Langley constructed and flew a heavier-than-air machine more than seven years before the well-publicized flight from Kitty Hawk, N.C.

—Samuel Wilson, a provisions inspector during the War of 1812, went by the nickname Uncle Sam and he habitually stamped inspected packages with the initials "U.S." This prompted the application of the nickname to the federal government.

—Charlie McCarthy, ventriloquist Edgar Bergen's dummy, was awarded the degree of "Master of Innuendo and Snappy Comeback" by Northwestern University a first, and in this case, a last.

—Everyone knows that Benjamin Franklin was a great inventor, but few realize that he also invented the forerunner of the electric chair.

Bit of Luck, Courage And Hua's at the Top

By JAY MATHEWS
Washington Post

HONG KONG — Hua Kou-feng, a pleasant Chinese bureaucrat in his late 50s, has come to the verge of leadership of a quarter of the world's people through a lucky early job assignment, a bit of political courage and a talent for the mundane science of agriculture.

Since Hua's sudden promotion to the Chinese premiership earlier this year, Western analysts have bemoaned the lack of information on his exact age, material status and birhplace.

But a review of data about Hua available from the Chinese press and American and Taiwanese intelligence sources gives enough clues to sketch the character of the man who now holds the number one job in China.

With only five months as premier, Hur is not certain to remain on top once the mourning for the late Mao Tse-tung ends and the Chinese Communist hierarchy sits down to decide who ill be its new chairman. But he may win out.

A review of his life raises a question for China's future: Is he, like most other Chinese administrators, prone to stress progress over Maoist ideology, or is the loyalty to Mao that won him his job bound to continue even though the great man is dead?

No definite answer can be given now, but two things stick out of Hua's record:

One, he appears to have excelled in tense areas and times when opposing forces were in close contact. Two, there was a critical moment in his career in the late 1950s and early 1960s when he apparently risked the wrath of his local superiors and China's then-president to defend plans to honor Mao's birthplace.

That move won him Mao's gratitude at a time when the chairman's future seemed bleak, and it is possible that Hua might again take risks for Mao's memory against his better bureaucratic instincts.

Nine months ago, most outsiders assumed Hua had actually been born in Hunan, Mao's home province, but then Hua began to make public speeches and the clear accent of Shansi Province was heard.

Chinese officials confirmed that Hua was from that northern China province. Nationalist Chinese also reported that they had an old post-war record that identified Hua as secretary of the Communist party committee in Chia-Cheng County in the Lu-Liant area of Shansi before 1947.

His birth is assumed to have been sometime between 1915 and 1921. That puts him in a new generation of Chinese leaders, too young to have seen the early Communist difficulties of the Kiangsi Soviet and the Long March.

But the Lu-Liang mountain region of Shansi was not an easy place to be in the 1940s. The area was hedged between the key Communist base at Yenan in neighboring Shensi and Japanese occupation forces in Atiyuan, Shensi's capital.

Analysts here speculate that Hua may have been one of many bright young Chinese to attend middle school or college in Taiyuan and be drawn to the Communist fight against the invading Japanese and the corrupt Nationalist government.

Even the minor party post assigned him in the tense Lu-Liang area would have demanded talent for subterfuge and organization, and a knowledge of military tactics would be useful at the critical juncture China finds itself in now.

The event that appears to have opened Hua's way to great power was a transfer to a Hunan prefecture, 500 miles to the south, sometime in the late 1940s or early 1950s.

The first known official record of Hua's existence is a 1955 article in the party theoretical journal Hsueh Hsi. It identifies him as secretary of the party committee in Hsiangtan Prefecture, which committee includes the village of Shroshan, birthplace of Mao Tse-tung.

The article, "Fully Study the Dynamic Situation of Various Ruyral Strata," fervently supported Mao's call for rapid collectivization of agriculture. Hua bragged that his district had already collectivized 11 per cent of its peasant families, when much of the country was moving more slowly. It was the first sign of Hua's deep interest in agricultural reform, the major theme of his career. As a newly arrived member of the Peking hierarchy in the early 1970s, Hua received four delegations related to agriculture or the peasantry and only one on another subject.

Late last year, just before his rise to the premiership, he gave the concluding speech of a conference to promote China's ambitious campaign to mechanize almost all farms by 1980.

That interest in agriculture meshed with Mao's own insistence that peasants and farms take priority in the Chinese brand of communism. Indeed, in that same issue of Hsueh Hsi was a Mao report on agricultural co-operation. Hua's career blossomed.

HUA KUO-FENG
. . . sudden promotion

He was put on the provincial party committee in 1956 and became provincial vice-governor in 1958, but he retained responsibilities in the Shaoshan area.

In 1959, according to documents released by Maoists during the Cultural Revolution nine years later, one of Hua's superiors on the provincial party committee withheld 86 per cent of the funds for planting trees and grass in Shaoshan. The official allegedly used the money for such things as beautifuing the home for Liu Shaochi, then China's president, and elsewhere in Hunan.

The Cultural Revolution documents, designed to defame Liu after his fall from power, also charged that Liu in the early 1960s ordered that the revolution exhibition hall at Shaoshan be closed and the exhibits of Mao's early career be dismantled. He even insisted that the parking lot at the Shaoshan hostel be plowed into private plots — which are hated by Maoists as a vestige of capitalism.

The eventual purge of Hua's superiors in Hunanm and Hua's simultaneous rise, indicates that he did not cooperate with the attacks on Mao's legend. Hua had also defended Mao's Great Leap policy of rapid collectivizaton, and when Mao visited Shaoshan in June 1959 it is likely that Hua met the chairman and added to the older man's favorable impression.

As the Cultural Revolution attacks on Liu began to unfold in 1966, there is evidence that Hua, like many other top provincial officials, came under initial attack from local far-left groups.

But Hua had Mao's blessing, and when a new revolutionary committee for the province was announced in 1968, Hua shared power with two allies of the new heir apparent to Mao, Chinese Defence Minister Lin Piro. The Lin Piro men eventually were transferred out of the province; Hua was elected to the party Central Committee in the ninth party congress, in 1969, and became the undisputed chief of Hunan.

Then Lin, according to Chinese accounts, failed in an attempt to oust Mao by force and died in an airplane crash while trying to escape to the Soviet Union. This was late 1971, and the crisis apparently drew Hua to Peking to help fill gaps in the leadership left by Lin's men and help conduct an investigation of the alleged coup attempt.

Lockheed Document Missing in Germany

By MICHAEL GETLER
Washington Post

BONN — The West German defence ministry says that various documents relating to the original purchase of Lockheed Starfighter jets in the 1950s have been missing from the files for several years and that there is at least some "suspicion" that illegal payoffs into foreign bank accounts might have been made.

The ministry statement added fuel to what has become a potentially explosive and critical issue here with less than three weeks to go before national elections.

The principal allegations of illegal payoffs in Germany on the sale of more than 900 F-104 Starfighters have been made by former Lockheed employee Ernest Hauser, who claims that some $12 million in kickbacks were made to the Christian Social Union party in Bavaria.

The head of that party then and now is Franz-Josef Strauss, who will become finance minister and deputy chancellor if the conservative coalition forces oust Helmut Schmidt from the chancellery in elections on Oct. 3.

Strauss, who was defence minister at the time of the original sale in 1959, has repeatedly and vigorously denied Hauser's claims, and his aide labelled the new ministry statement as more "dirty campaign tactics."

Though the Lockheed affair has upset governments in Japan, Holland and Italy for many months now, the West German government had treated it as a low-key affair up until last week.

Then, it suddenly announced it was sending someone to Washington to arrange access to U.S. justice department material, and Friday the defence ministry issued its interim statement on its own investigation.

Strauss and his party are claiming such tactics are meant to keep a cloud over his head through election day.

The defence ministry said it had "no concrete evidence" that illegal payments had been made to German officials or politicians and that "all speculation that has not been confirmed by documents at our disposal."

But, the prepared statement went on, "a final clarification of the suspicion probably will be possible only when all documents collected by the American government have been analyzed."

The defence investigation here has also looked into sale of electronic equipment for the F-104s and sale of commercial Lockheed super-constellation airliners.

The missing documents apparently have been gone since about 1963, when the Germans began investigating reports of corruption on the Lockheed sales on their own. The missing defence ministry documents include even the original Lockheed sale offer, and the registries that normally would show at least what documents were available also have disappeared.

A spokesman said there was no evidence that the files had been destroyed deliberately, suggesting only that they might have been lost in an office move or when some water pipes broke in the ministry. The spokesman said that he did not think the missing documents would contain any evidence of wrong-doing, since illegal payoffs would not have been reported, but the missing files have nevertheless complicated the job of reconstructing exactly what happened.

The previous German investigation, that ran off-and-on until 1970, failed to turn up an evidence of wrong-doing.

In the meanwhile, there is known to be growing concern in both German and U.S. diplomatic circles here about alleged letters from senior American officials to Strauss in the late 1950s on the subject of Lockheed.

The authenticity of these letters, however, is known to be in doubt, and American diplomats are said to be afraid that the way the government is allowing the sudden new interest in Lockheed to unfold could embarrass the United States by putting an American issue into the final days of the campaign.

Coffee Boosts Inflation

BOGOTA (Reuter) — The fruits of Colombia's fertile coffee plantations, three times as valuable as they were a year ago, are posing problems for the country's elected rulers.

The so-called world "coffee bonanza" has brought record wealth but also threatens record inflation at a time when the government thought it had brought the economy under control.

Now President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen has blamed the unexpected influx of millions of coffee dollars for a resurgence of student and guerrilla violence and left-wing agitation.

A rash of unforeseen events contributed to the bonanza. Frosts in the Brazilian plantations, an earthquake in Guatemala and the civil war in Angola all sent prices shooting up on world markets.

For Colombia, which relies on coffee for 50 per cent of its international trade, the boom will mean $1 billion in foreign earnings in the current year. The record figure is 40 per cent higher than last year.

But the extra earnings have brought the familiar spiral of rising prices and increased wages. Inflation in the first seven months of this year has already overtaken the government's target limit of 15 per cent of the whole of 1976.

Lopez, who last year introduced a state of economic emergency to back up his declared intention to stabilize the economy, has brought in new measures to cope with the problem.

Exporters are being forced to take some of their foreign earnings in government bonds and technical deflationary measures have been applied to coffee marketing.

The government has told exporters that with official foreign exchange reserves now at an unprecedented $800 million, there is to be a ban on the foreign financing of coffee exports.

The technical measure, strongly criticized by the exporters, will effectively take the equivalent of $70 million out of the heated economy.

For the government, however, the problems brought on by the coffee bonanza go deeper than the economy.

Already fighting a war with left-wing guerrillas in the countryside, it has had to face a renewal of student rioting in the cities, sparked by an increase in public transport fares. In addition, a sporadic bombing campaign erupted in the capital.

The Colombian government is acutely aware of the country's delicate position as the only major South American state besides Venezuela not ruled by the military.

While the government rules in the capital, informed sources acknowledge that revolutionaries effectively run some small provincial centres and are increasing their strength in the cities.

The left considers President Lopez the inheritor of a system in which liberal and conservative oligarchies kept themselves in power by swapping power every four years.

But between the government and the far left there is the vast mass of the population which has more cause than those of most other countries to seek political peace.

In the violence of 1946 to 1957, hundreds of armed bands claiming to represent either conservative or liberals ravaged the countryside in a brutal civil war. Some 300,000 people are estimated to have been killed.

Now the government is worried that the desire for stability, often expressed in political apathy at the polls, may turn to open discontent if the economy gets out of hand, and that the far left is ready to exploit the situation.

To try to counter this it has increased the minimum wage for workers and farm laborers by 30 per cent, frozen gasoline prices and promised a halt to any more public transport fare rises.

The government has received no thanks from the left wing. A recent edition of the pro-Moscow Communist Party Voz Proletaria said the wage increase was an attempt "to sugar the bitter pill of famine."

The weekly supported demands by the Colombian Workers Union Confederation (CSTC) that the increase should be 50 per cent.

In Congress, the left-wing opposition Parliamentary Front reacted uncompromisingly to the government's measures. "The regime is absolutely antagonistic to the interests of the Colombian people," it announced.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A judge draws on experience as well as the facts of the case when he makes any decision and, when Judge Harold Alder did that Tuesday in Victoria provincial court, the result was a longer sentence than he really wanted to impose.

Alder was sentencing Victoria area resident Wayne Lorne Sinclair 22, no fixed address, who pleaded guilty Sept. 7 to a Victoria charge of a break-in attempt Aug. 26 at Queale Electronics, 1004 North Park, and possession the same day of a known stolen car.

The judge said a pre-sentence report showed Sinclair's problem with these offences and several in the past was alcohol "and the experience of the court has been" that it is useless to expect anyone to stop drinking "unless it is his own decision."

Alder said the report recommended a 30-day stay for Sinclair in a halfway house for alcoholics, "but I am not sure it will do . . . you need something a little firmer."

"The only other place I know of" where alcoholics were detained was the Alouette River centre on the B.C. mainland, and the minimum program there was six months, said Alder.

"Unfortunately, you need more time" than 30 days, he said, sentencing Sinclair to the six months, recommending Alouette River and adding a three-month term of probation.

Ivor Morgan, 19, of 3083 West Coast Road, was fined $300 by Alder following a plea of guilty to a Victoria charge of theft involving less than $200.

Prosecutor Robert Mulligan said Morgan was a lot boy at McCallum Motors, 1101 Yates, for about two months last spring. He said Morgan bought a 1966 car from the firm and it had "very poor tires," so the youth took new radial tires from another used car and put them on his own.

The tires were worth a total of $165.

In the court section of Judge F. S. Green, a total sentence of six months definite and 10 months indeterminate was imposed for Victoria area resident Richard Allan Murray, 20, address not known.

Murray pleaded guilty Sept. 2 to three charges — one of four worthless cheques written July 21-26 to obtain $249 in goods and cash, a second of a July 28 break-in and theft in an apartment at 1388 Hillside and a third of a July 28 car theft in Saanich.

At the time, Murray was on probation following a conviction last February for possession of known stolen property.

In the court section of Judge Blake Allan, a higher-court trial was ordered for Robert Bruce Rosin, 22, whose address was given as 608 Nelson, following a preliminary hearing of a charge of possession of hashish March 6 in Sidney for the purpose of trafficking.

In traffic court two persons pleaded guilty to separate charges of driving with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent. They were Serge Halle, 23, of 443 Superior, stopped Sept. 11 in Victoria and fined $400, and Ib Hansen, 36, of 1871 Hillcrest, stopped June 15 in Saanich and fined $350.

In traffic court Nirpal Mann, 19, of 3016 Jutland, pleaded guilty to a charge of driving with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent and failing to remain at an accident scene Sept. 5 and was fined a total of $550 by Judge F. S. Green.

Garry Leigh Chatten, 19, of Sooke, was fined $375 following a plea of guilty to a Sidney charge of impaired driving May 2.

Longer Work Week Own Idea, Says Gardom

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Monday that his off-the-cuff suggestion last week that government employees across Canada should go back to the 40-hour work week is his own and does not reflect any underlying philosophy of the Social Credit government.

The minister said something must be done to increase productivity and stabilize costs before the whole country is in serious difficulty.

He said it's up to governments to show the way.

Gardom said last week that he thinks a return to the 40-hour work week would be unifying and would be universally accepted and endorsed by the Canadian public.

No Trial For 312 In S.A.

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — At least 312 people are being held under South Africa's detention-without-trial laws, a spokesman for the anti-apartheid Christian Institute said Tuesday.

Since the country's racial upheaval flared June 16 in the black township of Soweto, some 5,200 persons have also been arrested under criminal laws and charges arising out of rioting, the spokesman said.

A delegation of seven colored-mixed race-leaders met Tuesday with Prime Minister John Vorster and demanded the release of all colored persons held under security laws, including the Rev. Allan Hendrickse.

The group gave Vorster a memorandum saying Hendrickse, a member of the executive body of the Colored Persons Representative Council, has to be released before the council will co-operate with government plans to establish a cabinet council for whites, coloreds and Indians.

A 55-page dossier compiled by the Christian Institute names 25 people who it says have died since 1963 while in security police custody, including three in the past six months, and lists 18 types of torture allegedly being used by police.

Security chief Gen. Michael Geldenbuys, asked about the institute's allegations, said: "I do not comment on anything the Christian Institute has to say."

The report, entitled South Africa — A Police State, also names 15 people currently under banning orders imposed under the Suppression of Communism Act which limit their speech, movement or association.

Among the types of torture alleged by prisoners during court cases, it lists holding the head under water in a toilet basin, electric shock treatment sometimes applied to the genitals, threats of assault or death, deprivation of sleep for long periods, standing blindfolded for five days and nights.

Security police are able to detain South Africans under 46 separate security laws which do not obligate police to say who has been arrested or give reasons for detention-without-trial.

Savings Soar As Lights Go Out

OTTAWA (CP) — For late-stayers at Carleton University it's lights out every hour on the hour after 11 p.m.

Time-controlled light switches are one of the major contributions to a three-year campaign for energy conservation at the university.

While some professors grumble about having to get up from late work hourly to switch the lights back on, administrators happily point to the money they are saving.

It started in 1972 when, faced with growing costs and a tightening in funds from government, the university started looking for ways to save.

They found one in cutting energy use. The savings are estimated at $590,000 annually.

James Whenham, director of physical plant at the university, says consumption of energy has been cut 31 per cent from figures for 1972-73.

One of the big changes at the university — overhauling its heating and air-conditioning systems — cost $74,000, money provided by the Ontario energy ministry. It is expected to pay for itself in three yeears as a result of fuel savings.

University officials say that under a single-control system of an entire building, when the sun shone on the south side the air-conditioning worked overtime to keep it cool. So cool, in fact, that the heat had to be turned on in rooms on the north side.

In winter the sun kept the south side warm but, with the furnace running, those areas became overheated and air-conditioners were turned on.

Now the system has been redesigned, with separate controls for each area of a building.

Other energy-saving projects include reducing the lighting in university buildings. One thousand new desk lamps were purchased for professors' offices in hopes they won't keep their entire office lighted unless necessary.

Timing devices placed on the lighting system in the Arts Tower, the highest building on campus, turns the lights out every hour. They stay out unless someone in an office turns them back on.

It's designed, the unviersity says, to prevent careless janitors or professors from leaving the lights burning all night.

Dialysis Made Bearable

MONTREAL (CP) — For 22 dialysis patients who spend at least six hours in hospital two or three times a week, life has become more bearable because of a group which helps them adjust to their new way of life.

The group, at St. Mary's hospital here, is believed to be the first of its kind in Canada, helping patients and their families adjust to the new way of living that dialysis involves.

Patients are totally dependent on a dialysis machine to perform the work of their kidneys which have stopped functioning.

Dialysis removes impurities from the blood and excess liquid from the body, and the process may take from six hours in hospital to 12 hours or more if a dialysis unit is used at home. After-effects such as cramps and fatigue often keep the patient from working for several hours after dialysis.

"It is not a normal life, but you have to try and live as normally as possible under abnormal conditions," says Bobie Lerner, who is a founding member of the St. Mary's group. Her husband, Abe, has been on dialysis for seven years.

Mrs. Lerner said that too little has been done by the medical profession in the past to prepare new patients and their families for the dialysis experience. But the St. Mary's group includes doctors, nurses, dietitians and hospital technicians as well as relatives of patients.

Life on the machine is not easy, but most patients say they realize that for them it is the only answer.

"If I get depressed, I tell myself I could be a lot worse off," said 55-year-old Larry Potter. "Without the machine I would have been dead years ago instead of having so many things to look forward to."

Mr. Potter, who has been on dialysis for 4½ years, earned a good living as a comedian under the name Larry Day until his kidneys failed. He is a feature attraction at group get-togethers, using his show-business talents to make patients forget their problems.

Alice Weir, head nurse of St. Mary's dialysis unit, said people like Mrs. Lerner and Mr. Potter are often much better in dealing with the fears and worries of new patients than the professionals.

"They understand them better," she adds.

For the majority of patients, vacations away from home are impossible although Dr. Vincent Pateras, chief of nephrology at St. Mary's, said there are patients who travel to other cities which have facilities for dialysis, but arrangements must be made well in advance.

Mrs. Lerner came to Canada from Hungary in 1956 and said it was hard at first to accept the fact she and her husband couldn't travel any more. "But that has passed," she added. "I don't care any more."

Another restriction facing dialysis patients is a rigid diet. Coffee, colas and fruit are not permitted because they contain potassium. Kidney failure produces high rates of this substance in the system.

Protein is cut to a minimum and fluids are limited to about one quart a day. Patients must eat salt-free bread and butter, special wheat-germ flour, and specially packed vegetables.

"Anyone on dialysis who does not follow the diet is wasting time," says Dr. Pateras. "It is a difficult diet to follow and patients must be motivated to follow it."

Smoking is forbidden because dialysis patients have a higher-than-average risk of heart disease and high blood pressure. Many dialysis patients also have hypertension and must take pills to combat it.

Jobs for patients also pose problems.

"There is a great need for more part-time jobs and for more understanding on the part of employers," Dr. Pateras said.

IWA Members Have Legal Aid

DUNCAN — Local 1-80 of the International Woodworkers of America has announced a program to provide free legal interview services for its members.

Local president Roger Stanyer said the union has arranged with a Victoria firm to provide free legal advice at the union office for all I.W.A. members and their families.

Under the program, lawyers from a Victoria law firm will be available at the IWA office in Duncan on Saturday mornings from 9:00 a.m. until noon.

Appointments can be made by phoning the office at 746-6131, 749-6731 or 245-2612 during the week or on Saturday mornings. Members or their families are also invited to drop in without appointment, if they wish.

"Many working people are afraid of lawyers. Yet working people have a wide range of legal problems," Stanyer said. "With this in mind we decided to institute this free legal interview program to ensure better access to legal service for people of moderate means."

After a three month trial period the local will consider expanding the program.

DONEGAL TWEED. WHAT THE GENTLEMAN WILL BE WEARING THIS FALL

10 DAYS ONLY $148.96
SAVE $25

Fashion-wise, tweed is the news.

Value-wise, our whole Henley suit collection is still the best in the nation. For at its regular price of $174.95, a Henley suit compares button for button with suits that cost $200 and more. And to bring you continuing value, we've managed to absorb rising labour and cloth costs and maintain our prices of last spring.

But now back to tweed. Will any cloth ever match its look of sporty elegance? The way it works so well with patch pockets, classic stitching, notched lapels?

The shades it comes in are natural browns, greens and blues. And as an extra extra, the suit jacket becomes a sports jacket when worn with a pair of flannel trousers.

And the price it comes with, for the next 10 days, is a beautiful $148.96. Any gentleman should pay no more.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One of the "gadgets" that has come into being during the past two decades is the "weak jump overcall." This bid shows a respectable six-card suit, with no outside aces. Quite often, the bid accomplishes its hoped-for obstructionist effect of depriving the opening bidder's side of the space needed to interchange information. But, at times — as in today's deal — the weak jump overcall greatly facilitates things for declarer by pointing the way to the winning line of play. The hand came up in a team-of-four match.

♡ 9 3 2
◇ J 6 5
♣ Q J 7 3

WEST
♠ Q 7 2
♡ K Q J 8 7 5
◇ Q 9 4 3

EAST
♠ K 9 6 5
♡ 10 4
◇ A 10 8 2

SOUTH
♡ A 6
◇ K 7
♣ A K 9 8 5 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	2 ♡
Pass	Pass	Dbl.	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

Declarer permitted the heart king to win the opening lead, after which the queen of hearts was led to trick two, South perforce taking the trick with his ace. Dummy was then entered via the club queen, and a low diamond was played. When East followed with a low diamond, South put up his king. When it won the trick, delarer claimed his contract six clubs, one heart, one diamond, and one spade.

Actually, if West had not bid at all, South would have had to play the hand as he did, with the hope that East was the possessor of the diamond ace. With the given bidding, however, South was spared a great deal of aggravation, for he knew that East had been dealt exactly two hearts. And, further, he knew that East had the diamond ace, for West, the possessor of a good six-card heart suit, would not have made a "weak" jump overall had he possessed the diamond ace; he would have made a one-heart overcall.

When the deal was replayed, South again opened the bidding with one club. But the second West defender did not overcall with two hearts. Instead, he made the preemptive overcall of three hearts. Perhaps surprisingly, three hearts became the final contract. It was fulfilled, declarer's only losers being two spades, one heart, and one diamond.

When Jane is twice as old as Betty was when Jane was a year older than Betty was when Jane was a third as old as Betty is now, Betty will be just four times as old as Jane was when Betty was as old as Jane is now.

That's assuming both girls live long enough, quite a reasonable assumption!

Of course we have taken ages in complete years, so how old is Jane?

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: PANDA was 59829 (DANNY 29887, odd).

Hunter answers all letters: ideas welcomed.

Fall Is No Time to Lament

Color is everywhere in local gardens now where thought has been given to the second half of the gardening year. For many, fall (which starts today) and winter are the more important seasons perhaps for the simple reason of being contrary. Too many writers, poets and garden writers have produced what amount to dirges and laments about what they call the "end" of the year.

"The sear and yellow leaf" is another favorite phrase, but to some of us, fall is a gloriously vibrant season, and winter a partial respite to bring unexpected sparkling pleasures with periods of calm unobtrusive beauty.

The vibrant colors of fall in the garden belong to dahlias, zinnias, the big yellow African marigolds, the scarlet salvia and the long-lasting dwarf petunias. Chrysanthemums are, by contrast, less pronounced with their gold, bronze and dusky rose colorings, while Michaelmas-daisies, the fall asters of the Easterners, have their peak hours of glowing beauty at sunrise and sunset. For the rest of the day, they are a muted tapestry like Persian art.

That other flowers will bloom in this fall season can be seen at any of the local flower and vegetables shows.

Spend some time poking around the display tables of miscellaneous flowers. Look carefully into the mixed flower vases, and into the "any other perennial" and annual classes for which separate classes have not been allotted.

You will likely come across very lovely spikes of fall blooming heathers; pink or red Schizostylis or Kafir-lily; strongly citrus-scented Acidanthera; dainty but hardy little Cyclamen flowers from half-shaded spots outdoors; and perhaps a half dozen big brown bulbs of Colchicums flowering without roots or leaves. These I would like to christen "the Glory of the Fall."

Many of these may be found by spending a couple of hours or so around the flower-laden tables at local shows. You may come across surprises such as a fine spike of fiery red Lobelia cardinalis, or a large basket filled magnificently with berried shrub branches, so skillfully arranged that every cluster of fruits is needed as a part of the finished picture.

These are things we look forward to and remember about fall; these and the coloring of dogwood and viburnum leaves as the season moves along. Dull, drab, "nothing in the garden now; you should have come to see it in spring or summer"—these are not phrases that should be heard in this Victoria vicinity.

This Saturday drop in on the Fall Show of the Esquimalt Garden Club in Esquimalt Recreation Centre from 1 to 4:30 p.m. You will get clues as to why I refuse the idea of sounding a knell for the passing season. Fall glory is just beginning and will change its tones many times before we glimpse the calmer beauty of winter.

I have just recently listed a home in the Goldstream area. It has been assessed by two groups of appraisers to have a market value in the mid-$60,000 range. If you are looking for a home this could be it. Less than 3 yrs. old, main floor area nearly 1400 sq. ft. LR with FP, DR, 3 bdrms., with en suite master, large kitchen with eating area. WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

309 IN MEMORIAMS

MILLS — In loving memory of our dear friend William (Bill) Mills who passed away September 22, 1975.
A little more gray in the hair
Each day as the years go by;
A little more stooping of the form
A little more dim in the eye;
A little more faltering of the step
As we tread life's pathway o'er.
But a little nearer everyday
To the ones that have gone before.

A little more halting in the gait
And a dullness of the ear;
A growing weariness of the frame
With each swift passing year
A fading of hopes and ambitions too,
A faltering in life's quest
But a little nearer everyday
To the sweet and peaceful rest.

A little more loneliness in life
As the dear ones pass away
A bigger claim on the heavenly land
With every passing day.
A little further from toil and care
A little less way to roam
A drawing nearer to a peaceful voyage
And a happy welcome home
((Bills favorite)
You're so sadly missed by the Forrester family.

In loving memory of our dear son Gordon William Daley who went away Sept. 22, 1964.
The heart is a home of many rooms
Where things are stored away.
The treasurers of long remembered joys,
The pearls of yesterday.
But there is a corner of the heart,
A secret place where we cherish above all other things
Our son's memory
—Still dearly missed by mum and dad.

TO BISHOP PIERCE, FATHER Page, lawyer and executors, Dr. G. Reilly, the nurses of Royal Jubilee Hospital, the staff and many friends at the beautiful Caroline Macklem Home. Amazon Tribe Kills Children

MANAUS, Brazil (UPI) — Mayurunas Indians in the remote, western edge of the Brazilian Amazon jungle have begun killing newly born females in an attempt to wipe out their tribe rather than confront civilization, according to a brazilian anthropologist.

Anthropologist Paulo Lucena said the Indians, whose numbers have been severely diminshed in the last four years since coming into contact with white oil explorers, intend to exterminate themselves rather than continue suffering the impact of civilization.

"Desperate and feeling that they have no place to go, they decided to die," Lucena wrote to Ismarth de Oliveira, the president of the National Indian Foundation. The document was made public today.

The Mayurunas, who inhabit dense jungle along the Brazilian-Peruvian border, 1,480 miles up the Amazon River, have been reduced from approximately 2,000 at the end of 1972 to little more than 400 at present, Lucena said.

He said the Indians died quickly from flu, measles, venereal diseases and gastro-intestinal ailments brought to their settlements by the whites.

Mt. Washington Resort Started

COURTENAY — Preliminary work started Tuesday on the slopes of 5,215-foot Mt. Washington, about 17 miles northwest of here, where developers have planned a $1 million ski resort.

Crown Zellerbach Canada Limited, which owns the land, granted developers permission to do initial studies after the two parties reached agreement in principle on a rental formula for the use of the property.

The work will include ski lift elevation studies and some clearing for an access route into an operating base on the mountainside.

Gordon Clark of Vancouver, Crown Zellerbach's company secretary, said talks are continuing with the developers to establish a lease and until these meetings are concluded it is not possible to estimate when actual construction of lifts and other facilities might begin.

"We are looking forward, however, to the orderly development of this site at the earliest possible time," he said.

The location, on the southwest slope of the mountain, has been described as one of the best potential ski sites on Vancouver Island.

The development group, headed by Campbell River businessmen Henry Norie and Alex Linton, approached Crown Zellerbach earlier this year proposing establishment of the ski complex.

Crown Zellerbach subsequently announced it favored recreational development on the mountain, providing environmental safeguards are met.

British Heritage Displayed

Magna Carta — touchstone of the parliamentary process — is depicted in a travelling exhibit titled Parliamentary Heritage showing in the rotunda of the Legislative Buildings.

Ancient manuscripts and parchments illustrating milestones of constitutional government are reproduced in 22 panels, which include renderings by artists contemporary to the times depicted from Alfred the Great through modern processes.

For the modern period, the day-to-day work of the two houses of Parliament — Commons and Lords — the cabinet, electoral systems and parliamentary reporting are illustrated.

The exhibit, prepared by the Central Office of Information, London, originally at the request of the Japanese government, was first seen in the Diet in Tokyo in 1973, was seen in Ottawa this summer and goes to Edmonton after closing here Oct. 11.

Land Claims Proposal Splits NWT Natives

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — There have been intense efforts here this week to seam a serious split between the two native organizations seeking a land claim settlement with the federal government.

Indications are the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories and the N.W.T. Metis Association have reached a written deal to allow them to continue to pursue the crucial claim together. But there is concern that any deal will not be accepted by the Metis association's general membership, which meets Oct. 14.

Ottawa is willing to negotiate a claim settlement to almost the entire Mackenzie Valley area, but its policy is that the Metis and Indians should bargain as a single unit.

The Metis, persons of mixed Indian and white blood, are upset about the brotherhood's toughly-worded Dene declaration and are concerned they will lose their identity by officially joining forces with the brotherhood. Dene means "the people" in a majority of Mackenzie Valley native languages.

The two groups are scheduled to deliver their proposed claim to Ottawa Nov. 1.

Indian affairs officials, chafing because the claim has taken so long to prepare, want a settlement or at least solid negotiations under way before any decision is made on construction of the controversial Mackenzie Valley pipeline on lands claimed by the natives.

These officials are uncertain what they will do if the Metis and Indians decide to seek separate claims and are putting pressure on the two groups to remain together.

The Dene declaration, which says the native people of the Mackenzie Valley are a distinct nation, was approved about 14 months ago by a joint assembly of Metis and Indians.

But Rick Hardy, Metis president, says the declaration is seen by many Metis as a separatist document and they want nothing to do with it.

The document is open to many interpretations and some Metis say it should be rewritten for clarification. But the brotherhood is adamant that it stand as is, says Mr. Hardy.

The other problem is that the Metis want equal participation in development of the claim and some now feel they're being swamped by the Indians.

Mr. Hardy said if the two associations are to continue together, there will have to be a formal, written agreement to Metis rights.

Brotherhood president George Erasmus said the quarrel over the Dene declaration is a misunderstanding.

"They said we are trying to break away from Canada. That's nonsense! We are a distinct group of people. We are a nation and the nation concept is what we want to maintain."

Mr. Erasmus said all descendents of the Dene should work for the same political rights. The Metis, caught between the Indian and white cultures, wanted to create special recognition for themselves.

The claims position of both groups is basically that the Mackenzie Valley lands either never were ceded in treaties or the Dene treaties were fraudulent. They are expected to seek more political power, their own lands and resource royalties in return for giving their land rights to Ottawa.

The Metis and Indians live side by side in the N.W.T. and Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand indicated Tuesday it would be difficult to settle two separate claims.

The Metis association voted earlier this year not to dissolve itself to create one Dene organization with the Indian brotherhood.

The Oct. 14 meeting will study the latest events and the result will determine whether there will be one united claim, or whether the two groups should part company permanently.

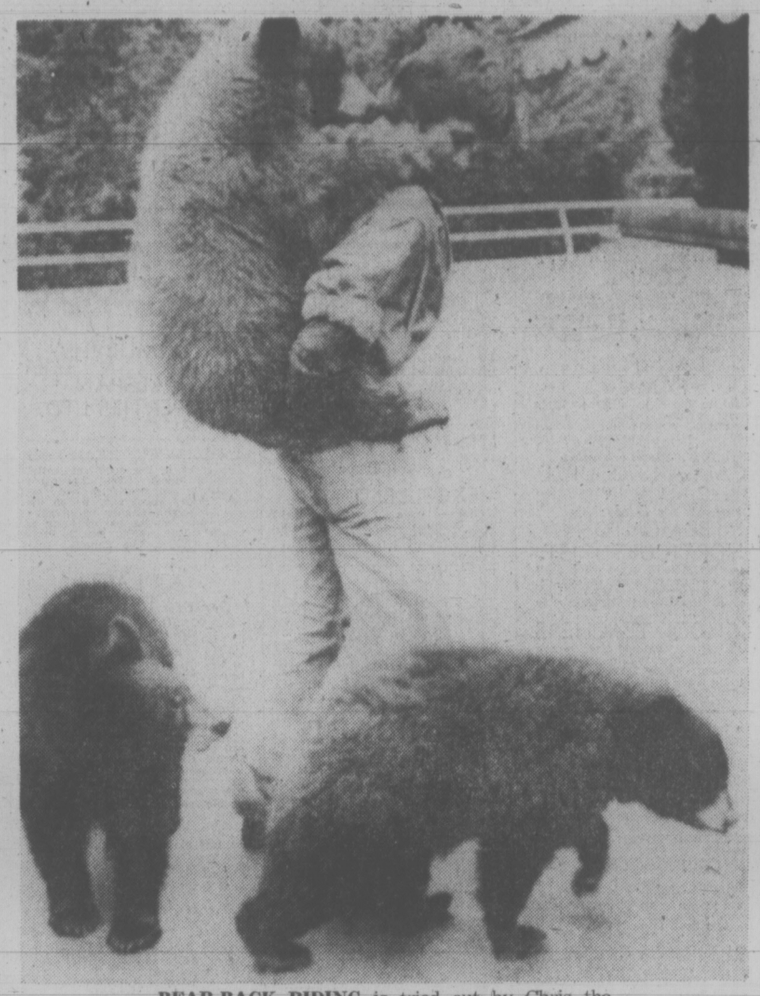
MINERS FIGHT IN GEM RUSH

SYDNEY (AP) — Armed police have stepped in to restore order to Australia's biggest sapphire fields after clashes involving hundreds of miners staking claims in a newly-opened gem land.

The Queensland state government has frozen new claims and is reconsidering its recent decision to open vast areas of potential sapphire fields for mining in an area 170 miles west of Rockhampton.

Queensland Minister of Mines Ronald Camm said the state government has suspended new regulations aimed at prolonging the life of the fields and will not allow new developments "until sanity returned."

Officials said the pegging of leases reached a climax last Thursday with conflicts over alleged claim-jumping leading to fist fights, gunshots and cut telephone lines. The sapphire rush was reported to be as hectic as the stampede for gold leases during the last century.



BEAR-BACK RIDING is tried out by Chris the bear, but Mark Verleyan of London, Ont.'s, Storybook Gardens says he can hardly bear it.

Banker Praises Bank Revisions

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rowland C. Frazee, president of the Canadian Bankers' association, said today federal proposals to revise banking legislation indicate Prime Minister Trudeau's government still has faith in the ability of the market place to achieve economic reforms.

Frazee said despite public discussion and controversy over planned economies and heavier state involvement in the market place, proposed revisions to the Bank Act "appears to reaffirm Ottawa's faith in the ability of market forces to achieve economic objectives."

The federal government had apparently reached the conclusion "that to arbitrarily limit the size of the larger banks would not bring greater competition in the provision of banking services to Canadians."

Frazee, of Toronto, executive vice-president and chief general manager of the Royal Bank of Canada, was speaking to delegates at the annual convention of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants.

He called the revisions a good sign for the free-enterprise system, particularly since they follow "two other public documents which take the same line."

The reference was to federal policy papers on competition, and the report of a royal commission into oil pricing in Ontario.

As to the banking revisions, Frazee said there will be some short-term disadvantages but these probably will be offset by "the benefits of a broader competitive market operating under common regulation across the country."

However, he said despite the claims of some critics, the proposed legislation does not "give the banks all they wanted."

B.C. Man Rescued Off East Coast

HALIFAX (CP) — A man identifying himself as David J. Dylan of Burnaby, was picked up Tuesday from the yacht Love adrift 600 miles off the coast of Virginia, a spokesman for search and rescue headquarters said early today.

The bulk carrier Mv. Ironian Pioneer reported the man carried no papers and that he said he had no family.

He told crew members he was on his way to Ireland from Saint John, N.C.

The search and rescue spokesman said there was no record of his departure but added that yachtsmen are not required to file route plans.

The Ionian Pioneer said the yacht sank while under tow.

The man was believed alone and was reported in good condition.

The Liberian-registered freighter is due in England Sept. 30.

Year Without Contract As CP Standing Firm

By MARGARET PITON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — September 17 marked one year that unionized employees of Canadian Press, Canada's wire service, have been working without a contract.

Negotiations between the Canadian Wire Service Guild, which represents about 270 of approximately 400 eligible employees across the country, and Canadian Press broke down in July over the question of union security and have not resumed. Canadian Press is a non-profit news-gathering co-operative jointly owned by 109 Canadian newspapers. CP also controls Broadcast News, an affiliated company which supplies recorded news to radio and television stations.

CP management has adopted a hard line in favor of an open shop, where there is no requirement for either current or future employees either to join the union or to pay union dues. The Guild is asking for a modified version of the Rand formula, under which any future employees would have union dues deducted from their pay whether they joined the Guild or not.

The Rand formula is generally considered the minimum standard of union security in Canadian labor law.

A conciliation report recommended the modified Rand formula by which new employees would have to pay union dues, though they would not have to join the Guild. This position was acceptable to the Guild, but not to management.

Guild spokesmen feel the issue of union security is a particularly important one, since in the 1950's Canadian Press managed to break the Guild through the application of what the Guild considered questionable labor practices.

Of the 109 member newspapers of Canadian Press, only 12 are unionized. Some Guild members claim the publishers are being particularly recalcitrant with the wire service because they often use it as a strike-breaking tool. If Canadian Press news were not available to struck newspapers, it would be much more difficult for management to put out its own newspaper. The question "hot copy" is not at issue in the first contract, but publishers may think it will eventually become an issue.

The Guild has offered to put the issue of union security to a referendum of all staff, or to go to binding arbitration or final offer selection on all the outstanding issues. Management refused all these procedures, offering instead to put its whole package, including the open shop provision, to a referendum.

Guild spokesmen point out it is rather ironic that newspapers which frequently advocate binding arbitration and final offer selection editorially will refuse them to their own employees. Management counters with the fact that the open shop does not prevent any present or future employee from joining the Guild, and offers a general non-discrimination clause with regard to Guild membership, race, religion and sex, though not marital status. CP management also points out that the Associated Press, which has had a contract with the Guild for two decades, maintains the same position on the open shop, as does United Press International.

One year following certification of the Guild, spokesmen say there is no sign of softening on the part of management. "Canadian Press is prepared to lose all its staff rather than give in," one said. Thus far Guild members have been participating in occasional short-term walkouts to protest the lack of negotiating progress. The most recent of these occurred in Ottawa the night of the Cabinet shuffle and continued the next morning.

Islanders Return

AGANA, Guam (Reuter) — Eniwetok atoll, a tiny group of Pacific islands where the U.S. exploded its first hydrogen bomb, has been officially returned to the former inhabitants after 29 years, it was announced Monday. The U.S. moved islanders out of the area in 1948 to make way for nuclear testing. A $20-million rehabilitation project now is under way to remove debris and build houses for the islanders.

24-MILE FENCE COMING DOWN

VALLEY FORD, Calif. (AP) — The shimmering curtain of white cloth that artist Christo Javacheff stretched across 24 miles of countryside to the ocean is coming down — just as he planned.

Soon it will be but a memory for its many beholders, who created traffic jams on local roads, tore away sections of it for souvenirs and took helicopter rides to view it.

A contested portion of the 18-foot-high fence that dipped into Bodego Bay, about 50 miles north of San Francisco, was removed Tuesday. The state coastal commission had refused to issue a permit for the final 1,000 feet of the project, but it mysteriously appeared there anyway on Sept. 7, the day before the formal start of the enterprise.

Workers on the unique example of "process art" said, however, that it will be November before the dismantling is completed.

Christo, a Bulgarian-born artist who dropped his last name and once draped a curtain across a Colorado canyon, raised $2 million to finance the fence. It is made of 2,000 pieces of nylon fabric attached to steel poles. About 300 students and others helped erect it over a two-day period.

D-i-v-o-r-c-e

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Country music star Tammy Wynette, whose song "D-i-v-o-r-c-e" once topped the charts, Tuesday filed for divorce from her fourth husband, John Michael Tomlin.

Miss Wynette, 34, charged in the divorce petition that her real estate executive husband is "guilty of such cruel and inhuman treatment as to render further cohabitation unsafe and improper."

The two have been married since July 18.

Miss Wynette, who has four daughters by previous marriages, divorced country singer George Jones March 12, 1975.

Crosswalk Plan Nipped

TORONTO — A borough of Scarborough father, concerned about traffic in front of the school his two children attend, was arrested after he painted a home-made crosswalk on the street.

The Scarborough works department sandblasted the markings in front of the school, but the man, undaunted by his arrest, returned later and repainted the crosswalk.

He also stayed on to act as school crossing guard despite police warnings that he might be legally responsible for accidents involving children other than his own.

Police said they have no knowledge of a second offence but that if it did occur the man would be charged again.

Police said that Joseph Charles Edwards, 27, was charged with mischief to public property.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. — The father of a prisoner at Collins Bay institution, whose fellow prisoners say he is dying, said Tuesday he would gladly welcome his son home if he is released.

Cliff Bryers said in an interview he was proud of what his son, Lloyd Bryers, had accomplished while he was in prison.

Bryers' fellow prisoners at Collins Bay sent a petition to Solicitor-General Francis Fox on Monday, calling for his release because of his illness.

"We know he is desperately ill," said Bryers' father. "There is only a minimal part of his liver functioning, just enough to keep him alive."

YAKIMA, Wash. — Five members of a religious household led by a self-proclaimed minister were charged with manslaughter Tuesday in the death of a boy whose body was locked in a sealed room for two months.

The victim's mother was among those charged.

The five were being held without bail in the Yakima County jail, where each was taken after their arrest Sunday at their house just outside the city limits.

Prosecuting Attorney Jeff Sullivan said each went to jail clutching a Bible.

Found in a sealed back room of the home was the body of David Weilbacher, 3, who disappeared about two months ago. Police went to the house on a tip.

TORONTO — Ken Carter knows there's not much demand for an over-the-hill daredevil.

That's why he's so bitterly disappointed that his greatest stunt yet — piloting a rocket-powered car a mile over the St. Lawrence Seaway — has been indefinitely postponed.

"What the hell am I going to do," he said Tuesday, "go out and pump gas? I jump cars and I'm getting to the end of my rope."

FULL-COURSE MEAL FOR JUST 12 CENTS

DEWITTVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Joe Sena rolled time back 142 years when he hired 25 extra waitresses and began selling full-course dinners for 12 cents.

In 3½ hours the restaurant served 1,500 meals. Hungry bargain hunters ordered from a bill of fare duplicated from the menu at Delmonico's Restaurant when that fashionable New York eatery was founded in 1834.

Tea or coffee sold for one cent a cup, soup was two cents, beef or mutton stew could be had for four cents, pig's head and cabbage four cents, roast veal five cents and ham and eggs 10 cents.

"I had half a pie for dessert — two cents," said one satisfied customer leaving Sena's Mar Mar Restaurant here Tuesday night.

Sena, 59, said he was attracted to that particular menu when the New York City Historical Society declared it to be the first printed menu in America.

"I just wanted to do something crazy once in my life. This is it," he said of the evening, which he estimated cost him $6,000.

Roughing Up By Police O.K.—Poll

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A sample survey of B.C. voters shows three out of five think police are justified roughing up a person who resists arrest.

Almost half of those answering also thought roughing up was alright where a person was disrespectful or abusive to police while one-third found such police action acceptable where the person was a sex criminal.

One in eight even said roughing up by police was justified if they needed to obtain informaion from a person.

The survey shows police enjoy strong support from the vast majority of the population and few people think police abuse of their powers is common.

Answers from those surveyed show more criticism of the court system, with 47 per cent claiming the courts are too easy on criminals in contrast to 1 per cent who think the courts are too harsh.

The opinions come from questionnaires mailed to a representative sample scientifically selected from voters lists across the province by sociologists Dan Koenig and Trevor Proberbs. The sampling in March drew 905 usable replies.

Asked what type of job B.C. police forces are doing, 94.1 per cent replied good or very good, 0.6 per cent said neutral and 5.3 per cent said bad or very bad.

On police treatment of people suspected of breaking the law, 21 per cent answered they did not know. Of the others who had a opinion, 46.8 per cent said it was "about right," 25.89 per cent said it was "too inconsistent," 21.4 per cent said it was "too easy" and 2.3 per cent said it was "too harsh."

MRS. NOT MS.

OTTAWA (CP) — For Pope Paul VI, Mrs. Joe Clark is Mrs. Joe Clark, not Maureen McTeer.

Ms. McTeer, as the opposition leader's wife has preferred to be called, was asked by Vatican officials to be Mrs. Joe Clark for a scheduled audience with the Pope. Clark's office confirmed Tuesday the Vatican's request was accepted. But because of prior commitments, Ms. McTeer did not get to the audience.

BACK-TO-WORK LIKELY MONDAY

CLRA, Unions Reach Accord in Shutdown

Officials of both sides in the construction strike-lockout said today they will urge their members to ratify a proposed agreement that could have the province's 40,000 trade union members back on the job by Monday.

Chuck McVeigh, spokesman for the 850 construction companies in the dispute, said he will recommend to the board of directors of Construction Labor Relations Association that they ratify the agreement at their meeting Thursday.

"It is the best agreement we could get under the circumstances. It provides the basis for a settlement and I will urge the board to vote yes."

A spokesman for the provincial Building Trades Council said the proposed agreement "looks very good."

He said unions will be urged by their officers to vote in favor of the settlement.

Neither side would discuss the proposed settlement. However, the only issue in the strike-lockout, which started Sept. 3, was the demand by plumbers for 15 minutes extra paid time at noon so the union members could walk to a place where they could buy a hot lunch.

One source said there was a compromise worked out giving unions the right to the extra 15 minutes but only under special conditions. The conditions were not announced.

The agreement was reached about 5 a.m. after more than 15 hours of negotiations. Both sides had expressed an eagerness to settle the issue and get back to work.

It was the second strike-lockout of the summer.

A strike by cement masons in late June resulted in a five-week lockout that was lifted Aug. 4 when both sides agreed to a one-year wage contract retroactive to April 30 for all 15 unions involved in negotiations. The pay award was an increase of $1.29 per hour in wages and benefits. Base rate ranges from $9 to $12, depending on the trade.

Money was not at issue in the second dispute which began in September. At the request of the provincial government a three-man commission was to be established to handle all non-wage issues. The question of downtown parking was referred to this committee.

The companies wanted a second controversial issue, 15 minutes extra time at noon, also referred to this commission.

However, the plumbers and pipefitters union vetoed the referral and said it was a strike issue. When they struck, the CLRA retaliated Sept. 3 by locking out all 15 unions working for 850 companies.

The CLRA said the new agreement could have some companies back at work by Friday but union spokesmen said it probably would be Monday before the proposal could be ratified by all unions.

Major projects held up in Victoria include the provincial government office complex at Broughton and Blanshard and the federal government mail sorting centre at Royal Oak.

Mrs. Young smiles grimly despite black eyes, bruises

No More Park Strolls For Fighting Granny

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Eighty-four-year-old Monica Young used to enjoy the Sunday afternoon concerts in Beacon Hill Park.

But the four-foot 10-inch grandmother will never go back again. Not after two youths, "who should be hauled up and a lash put to them," knocked her to the ground in an attempted purse-snatching in the park Sunday afternoon as she walked near Goodacre Lake.

"I look just terrible," Mrs. Young said Tuesday from her apartment at 1319 Newport.

"They came up behind me on the run and hit me with such force I went flat on my face to the ground. My glasses were bent, my nose was bloodied and my eles are all black," she said.

But she clung to her purse containing identification, a bus pass, her doctor's name and about $10.

Mrs. Young said a friend who lives near the park told her last year not to go there alone. She's learned her lesson.

Mrs. Young does not believe in capital punishment, ("Policemen and prison guards go into it with their eyes open.") but she doesn't agree with being soft-hearted toward young people who need discipline.

They need a good thrashing, she said.

It is believed Mrs. Young's attackers were fairly young because they were only about the same height as the diminutive pensioner.

Passersby helped Mrs. Young to the edge of the park where she took a taxi to Victoria General Hospital.

Her nose and mouth were x-rayed and she was treated and released.

"I knew what to do. I had been a nurse, you know," she said.

Victoria city police S.Sgt. Gordon Bennett said Sunday's incident was "not an isolated one" and recommended strollers, especially elderly ones, not carry valuables in their purses.

He suggested older persons should try and find a companion to walk with, and to carry all valuables on their person, not in a purse. They also should give the purse up without a struggle if accosted by a thief.

LONDON (Reuter)— Union leaders and shipping employers reached agreement today on a new contract package for British seamen and a strike set for midnight Sunday appears to have been averted.

UPSET POSTIES PLAN PROTESTS

MONTREAL (CP) — Country-wide postal disruptions are being considered to protest breaches of technological change clauses in the Canadian Union of Postal Workers' current contract, a senior union official said Tuesday.

"Our members are very upset these days and we are finalizing a strategy to counteract management violations of the agreement," said CUPW vice-president Jean-Claude Parrot.

He would not comment on the proposed strategy in an interview during a break in meetings on the dispute between union and post office officials, but hinted disruptions could begin as early as this week.

"The problems are getting worse across the country and members are at the boiling point. Something is going to break soon," Parrot said.

The post office department has publicly rejected union charges that it is not living up to its commitment to give the union prior notice of changes.

The meeting in Montreal and others across Canada have dealt with highly-mechanized post office operations opened recently in St. John's, Nfld., Windsor and London, Ont.

Split Grows In BCGEU

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The 33,000 members of the B.C. Government Employees' Union will be asked to stay off the job Oct. 14 in support of the Canadian Labor Congress day of protest against federal anti-inflation measures.

A formal announcement will come Friday when the BCGEU executive meets in Vancouver.

BCGEU general-secretary John Fryer said today there is "not much doubt" the executive will decide to support the CLC protest.

But in Victoria, the largest single component of the BCGEU — the 3,800 member administrative support Local 1201 — passed a resolution Tuesday that no matter what the provincial executive decides, members of the local can work or stay home as their conscience dictates.

The resolution asked that the union support its members no matter what position they take.

Fryer said it is a little upsetting that the Victoria local felt it necessary to pass such a motion.

"This union has always respected the rights of individuals not to comply, even in strike situations."

Norm Richards, president of the BCGEU and a member of Local 1201 said it is important only about 180 of 3,800 members attended the meeting in the Labor Hall on Quadra.

But Arnold Clark, former vice-chairman of the local and the man who proposed the resolution, said many of those present were shop stewards, and the resolution will be circulated among all members.

"Basically we feel the majority of the Victoria local want to report to work. They feel the protest is futile and won't accomplish anything," Clark said.

He said he hopes Local 1201's resolution will encourage more locals to "get off their butts and stand alone and make their own decisions."

He said too often union executives make decisions without canvassing the membership.

"The leadership makes decisions based on their own feelings. This is very evident in the BCGEU," he said.

A directive today was circulated around one government branch represented by Local 1201.

It said if the executive recommends members to go out Oct. 14, each member of the local should report to his supervisor and tell him whether he will show up for work that day or not.

Rhodesian Cabinet Consensus

SALISBURY (Reuter) — The Rhodesian cabinet has reached a consensus on proposals for ending the country's constitutional problem, Prime Minister Ian Smith said today at the end of a 2½-hour cabinet meeting.

He would not disclose the cabinet decision. But government sources later hinted that ministers favored accepting the settlement package presented to Smith by U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger last weekend.

Smith said the matter would now go to the ruling Rhodesian Front parliamentary caucus Thursday for a final decision.

The prime minister told reporters that he hoped Kissinger would be pleased with the cabinet decision.

"It's difficult to get Rhodesians down, as you know," Smith said. "I think we are going to go on keeping our chins up in spite of what the rest of the world is trying to do to us."

Government sources said after today's meeting — the second cabinet session in two days — that "some problems" could be expected at Thursday's caucus meeting, when that group's 50 members will debate the peace plan and cabinet decision.

TRUDEAU HECKLED

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — About 300 chanting demonstrators, some carrying signs bearing the Nazi swastika, swarmed into a downtown street here today to protest against Prime Minister Trudeau and the federal anti-inflation program.

The demonstrators, members from various unions in Saint John, blocked the road in front of a hotel where Trudeau was speaking to a group of service clubs. (No Subsidies without Conservation. See page 6).

They said they represented shipbuilding, steel, electrical, oil refinery, pulp and paper and sugar firms.

Irving Pulp and Paper Ltd. closed its mill and provided buses to transport its employees to the two-hour protest. The Irving company and its workers object to a ruling by the Anti Inflation Board (AIB) ordering a lower wage settlement.

At one point Trudeau stood in the hotel lobby with provincial Liberal leader Robert Higgins and talked to a group of school children.

The demonsfrators chanted "We want Trudeau," and "Trudeau is a bum," and waved signs saying "We need the AIB like we need VD."

Several of the signs said "Let's fight Trudeau" and carried the swastika.

The protests came as Trudeau continued his five-day tour of Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick.

He was jeeered by trade unionists when his aircraft arrived Tuesday night.

Rollback Pickets Extended at BCR

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Enginemen of the B.C. Railway extended picketing up and down the line today although maintenance-of-way workers ended a protest walkout against an anti-inflation rollback of wages.

The result was that service was still at a standstill on the provincial government-owned railway except for Budd car passenger service which continued with supervisory personnel taking today's run north from North Vancouver.

The maintenance-of-way picketing which occurred at Prince George ended after midnight after discussions between Ed Peck, Labor Relations Board vice-chairman, and officials of the Brotherhood of Railway Workers and the railway.

Hugh Armstrong, a B.C. Rail spokesman, said there are 170 enginemen on the railway, 40 of them at Prince George.

Enginemen went out at Prince George, North Vancouver, Quesnel and williams Lake.

Peck arrived at Prince George Tuesday afternoon in response to a call from the company.

Discussions continued through the afternoon and evening.

It was expected he would now turn his efforts toward some kind of agreement with the enginemen.

Tuesday's walkout was the third this year on the railway.

DROP BANKS WOMEN URGED

QUEBEC (CP) — The federal advisory council on the status of women today urged all Canadian women to withdraw their money from banks which do not have women on their boards of directors.

By a vote of 10 to 7, the council decided to condemn the attitude of the Royal Bank of Canada and of the Bank of Nova Scotia, whose executives said recently they could not find qualified women to fill directors' positions.

Hatred Drives 100 'Scabs' from Kitimat

KITIMAT (CP) — Confrontation and hatred created in June during an illegal strike has driven about 100 workers out of the Aluminum Co. of Canada plant here.

And a vociferous member of the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers told Vancouver Province reporter Chuck Poulson the "exorcism" won't end until every last one of the remaining 300 or so marked men have paid their union dues.

The campaign began during the 11-day blockade with threatening phone calls to families of workers who remained inside the second largest aluminum smelter in the world. The workers collected 24 hours of pay each day $300 per shift — to keep the pots boiling.

After the blockade was broken by a 160-man RCMP riot force, the retribution turned particularly ugly.

A Molotov cocktail was thrown through the window of one man's home — nearly destroying the building. ("I think his cigarette fell into a drink," grinned one worker).

A car was burned. ("Must have been lightning.")

Men were beaten — and sent to hospital ("Happens in Vancouver all the time.")

And tires were slashed — by the scores. ("I thought Alcan would have to buy out Uniroyal there for a while.")

Four months after the most bitter labor dispute in B.C. in years, the violence has calmed and given way to a more subtle form of harassment.

The "people who preferred to work," as the company calls them, have become work force lepers, forced to live and work with a large number of people who want only to drive them away.

Says one veteran of the Anderson Creek Road blockade, who like the others wished to remain anonymous:

"We don't eat with them at work, we don't talk to them anywhere, we've got no use for them and they know it."

Outcasts are shunned in various ways:

—When one of them entered a pub not too long ago, beer was poured over his head. The victim was thrown out of the pub.

Nuclear Blackmail Easy—Experts

LONDON (UPI) — A commission of 16 distinguished scientists appointed by the British government warned today that terrorists could easily seize nuclear material from power stations and face governments with "nuclear blackmail" by threatening to explode it.

In a report to Parliament, the commission said: "It is entirely credible that plutonium in the requisite amounts could be made into crude by very effective weapons that would be transportable in a small vehicle.

"The threat to explode such a weapon unless certain conditions were met would constitute nuclear blackmail and would present any government with an appalling dilemma," the report said. "We are by no means convinced that the British government has realized the full implications of this issue."

The commission is headed by Sir Brian Flowers, rector of the Imperial College of Science and Technology in London.

The report said there is no reason to doubt that "a sufficiently determined group with the necesary expertise" could construct a very crude bomb which might explode with the force of several tons of TNT.

"The amount of plutonium required could easily be carried by hand," it said.

The report said the equipment needed to make such a crude bomb would not be significantly more elaborate than that already used by criminal groups for the illicit manufacture of heroin.

The report warned also of the risk of sabotage of nuclear power plants which could release large quantities of radioactivity.

"It would certainly be difficult for terrorists or saboteurs to bring about a catastrophic failure and consequent release of radioactivity," it said. "But if they had sufficient knowledge of the plant design, the possibility of such an event cannot be ruled out and it is not beyond the bounds of credibility that a sufficiently intelligent and determined group could acquire the knowledge."

'Scabs' Driven Out

One section chief in the smelter's pot room who was sympathetic to the strikers, is known for "working them ragged seven and a half hours straight." Others get regular breaks because of extreme heat.

The official union position, according to business agent Peter Burton, is that there should be no harassment or violence directed toward the scabs.

Burton, who with over three dozen others faces criminal charges arising from the blockade, suggests that not all of them should be blamed for their actions.

He says the intimidation has to end.

Replies another CASAW member: "Yeah, it'll end — when all the scabs are gone."

Meanwhile, judgment was expected today on a charge of obstruction against Burton.

Prosecutor Gary Abrams said 31 other persons also were charged with obstruction of a road following a confrontation in June with RCMP.

justified in roughing up a person in certain circumstances, 59 per cent said yes where the person resists arrest, 47 per cent said yes if the person is disrespectful or abusive, 34 per cent said yes if the person is a sex criminal, 33 per cent if the person is a hardened criminal, 24 per cent if the police know the person is guilty and 12 per cent if the police need to obtain information.

Few of those replying believe improper police field practices are widespread. When asked: "How many police in your area do you think there are who just enjoy pushing people around and giving them a hard time?" fewer than one per cent replied "most" while one per cent replied "many," 28 per cent "a few," 25 per cent "none" and 45 per cent did not know.

A similar question asked "how many police in your area do you think accept bribes of payoffs?" Answers were "most," less than one per cent; "many" one per cent; "a few" nine per cent; "none" 26 per cent and "don't know" 64 per cent.

When questioned about impoliteor rude treatment by police, 11 per cent of the sample said this had personally happened to them at some time, eight per cent had seen it happen to others and 27 per cent had been told that it happened.

The survey also sought opinions on whether police should have specific types of authority in day-to-day operations.

Asked if officers should have "the right to question you about a lot of things if you are asuspected of committing a crime," 66.4 per cent said yes, 24.1 per cent said it depends an 9.5 per cent said no.

But on whether a policeman should have the authority to "search you if he stops you," 14.5 per cent said yes, 46.9 per cent said it depends and 38.6 per cent said no.

As to characteristics of those answering the questions, 49.3 per cent were males and 50.7 per cent females, all with an average age of 45.

Fifteen per cent had received a traffic ticket in the previous 12 months, five per cent had been arrested for impaired driving at some time in their lives, five per cent had been arrested at some time for a crime other than a traffic offence, four per cent had served at some time on a criminal jury and 23 per cent had at some time been a witness in court, most frequently for the prosecution.

Economists Disagree With Food Price Ad

OTTAWA (CP) — Government advertising appearing only in French-language newspapers suggests the federal anti-inflation program has helped hold down prices of sugar, meat and coffee — although economists disagree.

The ad, published last Thursday, admits in small print that the program does not apply directly to farm produce and imported products, but can affect processing, packaging and other costs.

Economists, including some in government, says that the international laws of supply and demand rather than federal policy are chiefly responsible for meat, sugar and coffee prices. Coffee prices, they point out, have in fact been rising and are expected to climb further.

Strangely, retail prices for roasted coffee have risen by 80 per cent since last September due to a 132-per-cent international price increase in the price of beans. A government economist said Monday further increases will occur at the retail level.

Part of a $1.1 million advertising campaign to promote the anti-inflation program, the record straight on food prices, a government spokesman said. But a New Democratic Party spokesman said the ad was blatant misrepresentation.

LOST VD SWABS NO EASY TOUCH

The doctor operating a medical clinic at the Cool Aid centre said today he inadvertently misplaced a sealed package of swab samples he was taking to a hospital laboratory Tuesday.

Dr. Joe Haegert said the well-labelled envelope, later found by a passing pedestrian at Gladstone and Fernwood, must have fallen from his car as he was loading other items into it.

A couple who found the envelope subsequently returned it to the clinic at 1900 Fernwood but were critical of the casual way staff there joked about the incident.

They were told some of the swab samples were possibly of venereal diseases.

But Haegert said today each swab is sealed within the envelope and he and his staff exercise great care in handling them. It is the first time in nine years he has ever misplaced such an item, he said, and he is sure the clinic staff was not casual or impolite to the woman who returned the samples.

HOTEL COMPLIES WITH FIRE LAW

The Regency Shield Hotel, 724 yates, has withdrawn its county court appeal against an order of provincial Fire Marshal Henry Jenns, requiring the hotel to carry out a number of fire safety improvements.

Cancellation of the court action was confirmed Tuesday by John Hayes, spokesman for the owners, MEPC Properties Ltd., who said the firm has agreed to comply with what is essentially a "reinterpretaion" of building code regulations by the fire marshal.

Hayes said the financial impact has been modified by Jenns' approach and MEPC Properties now estimates it will cost $35,000 to $40,000 to undertake the improvements.

(Earlier estimates by the firm last June ranged as high as $70,000. The original order was issued last February.)

The hotel, built in 1908, is home for 80 people.

the weather

A ridge of high pressure still dominates the weather scene in most of B.C. However, a disturbance weakened by the ridge began to move slowly eastward across the province this morning and was expected to dissipate later today. This disturbance developed a few showers on the coast Tuesday and overnight and may trigger isolated showers or thundershowers in the interior this afternoon. Mainly sunny skies are expected in all areas except the north coast region on Thursday. Another Pacific weather system will bring rain to that section tonight and Thursday.

Panama Canal Trip Eyed for Alaska Oil

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Confronted with a possible oil surplus on the west coast, Standard Oil Co. of Ohio (Sohio) is taking steps to charter small tankers to ship North Slope crude through the Panama Canal to inland U.S. markets.

The Anchorage Daily News reported in a copyright story Monday that Sohio officials said that even this measure won't be able to prevent the anticipated surplus.

The firm owns about half Prudhoe Bay's oil reserves and is scheduled to ship 600,000 barrels of oil per day from the Valdez terminal of the Trans-Alaska pipeline next year.

Sohio also is seeking permission to build a 500,000-barrel port and pipeline system to ship its oil from Long Beach, Calif., to Midland, Tex.

However officials at Sohio's Cleveland headquarters said they believe the California project will not be approved and built until at least six months after the Trans-Alaska line begins flowing.

Meanwhile, a U.S. energy official said Tuesday in Washington the U.S. government is considering the possibility of exchanging some Alaska oil with Canada and Japan in view of the potential surplus.

John Hill, deputy federal energy administrator, said such exchanges "may be possible and wise" until U.S. west-to-east transportation systems are developed to bring Alaska oil to midwest and eastern refineries.

Hill testified before a joint hearing of the Senate commerce and interior committees considering implications of a possible West Coast oil surplus when the Alaska oil pipeline goes into operation next year.

He said exchanges of oil with Canada are being considered in an inter-agency government study of Alaska oil transportation alternatives.

LIBERALS ATTACK TRUDEAU

OTTAWA (CP) — The executive of the Ottawa West Liberal Association has unanimously supported the decision of Lloyd Francis, Liberal MP for the riding, to quit as a parliamentary secretary because Prime Minister Trudeau did not appoint a minister from the Ottawa area during the cabinet shuffle last week.

In a letter written Monday to Trudeau, the executive also supported Francis' criticisms of some aspects of the government's bilingual policy and the moving of federal offices out of Ottawa.

The letter, signed by Carol Lenardon, association president, said that besides the cabinet appointment issue, area residents think consultation by the government on issues concerning Ottawa and eastern Ontario has been unsatisfactory.

The president said she regretted that the executive found it necessary to release copies of the letter to the news media Monday, "but unfortunately there is concern that this is the only manner in which to evoke a response" from government.

In his letter of resignation as a parliamentary secretary, Francis told Trudeau the lack of cabinet representation has hurt local Liberal MPs "very badly."

Electrical Companies Appeal Order to Obey CLRA Lockout

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four out of five electrical firms have appealed a B.C. Supreme Court order Monday to stop work and abide by the Construction Labor Relations Association's province-wide lockout.

Bill Woodill, president of C.H.E. Williams, one of the four, said the appeal is based on various documents introduced as evidence in Monday's court hearing.

He said there are up to 16 electrical firms within the CLRA that are continuing their operations and the same is true of numerous other firms in other trades within the CLRA.

Woodill said he is at a loss to understand why the five were chosen for court action.

The others appealing are Ross Morrison Electric, ALM Electric and ICR Electric, he said. The fifth firm ordered to abide by the lockout, United Power, has declined to appeal.

The Supreme Court injunction ordered the firms to live up to the covenants and directives of the CLRA bargaining council. It noted CLRA bargains with the construction unions on behalf of all companies, including the electrical firms which have signed over their bargaining rights to the association.

ICR Electric president Don Topp said there appears to be no satisfactory explanation why the CLRA took action against the five firms while not doing so against others.

"It's a disgusting situation," he said. "It appears to me they picked on a select few for these court injunctions. I would say it's definite discrimination."

Topp refused to name the firms he said were not being bothered by the CLRA but said they included "some large firms."

He said his firm has lost some clients last summer because of the construction industry stoppage in the contract dispute with the unions involved.

"The same thing could happen again if this situation is prolonged for any length of time," he said. "There is no total lockout throughout the province."

Ernest Almerling, ALM Electric president, said he disregarded the lockout because he feared it could be declared illegal and saddle him with damages to pay to clients.

But he said the injunction stipulated that the CLRA would be responsible for any damages incurred and this satisfied his main objection to the lockout.

Almerling said he has the suspicion that "someone is after us" but added he cannot substantiate this feeling.

LEFT BOYCOTT

BEIRUT (AP) — Leftist Moslem leader Kamal Jumblatt and his supporters will boycott the swearing-in Thursday of President-elect Elias Sarkis because it is being held in Syrian-occupied territory, Jumblatt announced today.

"The decision ... shows that Moslem parliamentary speaker Kamel Assaad is a man without dignity," Jumblatt said in a statement.

Assaad, a moderate, announced Tuesday that parliament will meet Thursday in Chtoura, 30 miles east of Beirut and well behind the Syrian lines, for the ceremony replacing Christian President Suleiman Franjieh by Sarkis, another Christian and the Syrian choice for the presidency.

Heavy fighting around the parliament building in Beirut makes it unsafe for such meetings.

Serviceman Denies Naval Supply Thefts

Accused serviceman Robert A. Ganner, 32, pleaded not guilty Monday to 24 charges against him in a court-martial under the National Defence Act.

Ganner was charged as a result of an investigation into funds missing from the junior ranks mess when he was president of the mess committee.

His trial before a judge advocate and five officers of Pacific Maritime Command is being held in the Chief Petty Officer's Mess on Esquimalt Road.

The charges against Ganner range from stealing and conspiracy to commiting an offence under the code of service discipline, to committing fraudulent acts and conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline.

They cover the period from Oct. 1, 1973 to Mar. 23, 1976.

Dates have been set for two more courts martial involving two other servicemen and a former member of the service still subject to military discipline.

M-Cpl. Michael Joseph Sylvio Dalrymple will be tried on about a dozen similar charges Sept. 28, and M-Cpl. Adolph Gustav Plewa and former M-Cpl. Craig Campbell will be appearing Oct. 19 on similar but unspecified charges.

Prosecuting officer Maj. William A. Reed, of Edmonton, produced a large number of exhibits ranging from receipts to military equipment which he asked to have entered as evidence.

But defending officer Maj. Brian Murphy, of Camp Petawawa, objected on the grounds that there was no evidence linking them to the accused.

Recitation of the charges and listing the exhibits took up most of the day to about 3 p.m., when Maj. Reed asked for a voir dire — a closed hearing to determine admissibility of evidence — and the court was cleared.

Judge advocate Lt.-Col. J. B. Fay, of Halifax, will determine whether the evidence will be heard by the panel presided over by Capt. R. D. Okros, Maritime staff Pacific.

Other officers of the court martial are Cmdr. P. G. Bissell, Fleet School, Esquimalt; Cmdr. H. B. Kieren, HMCS Yukon; Lt.-Cmdr. D. H. Alderson, Maritime staff Pacific, and Lieut. D. K. J. Baltes, HMCS Thunder.

It was expected the voir dire will not be completed until about midday Wednesday.

First witness for the prosecution was military police Sgt. Harold Hart, who said he conducted an investigation into Club 44, the junior ranks club, and on Mar. 18 he ordered Ganner's arrest.

He said he searched the mess office and seized receipts and bar cards produced as exhibits.

He said he got further material of a similar kind July 7 from bar manager Ken Stauber. Various amounts of up to $105 were indicated on each item.

On July 22, Hart said, he went to the fleet diving unit at Colwood and seized a document from the office of Lt.-Cmdr. LaFontaine, which was entered as a list of material issued temporarily to personnel.

The witness said on Mar. 23 he went with a master warrant officer, the accused and two Saanich police detectives to the home of Myrtle Ganner, 4639 Cordova Bay Road, and conducted a search of the house and outbuilding.

He identified items produced by the prosecutor as those he siezed from the premises, including a desk electronic calculator, a diver's compass, a set of jeweller's screwdrivers, a U.S. diver's lamp, eight snap shackles, two arctic sleeping bags, three metal tool boxes, a jerry can, three lifejackets and five SCUBA tank valves.

Later the same day, Hart said, he went with Ganner and three military police men to the fleet diving unit to a pickup truck owned by Ganner and to lockers in an administration building, in which he found a fragmentation grenade bearing live markings but found to contain no igniter or explosive.

Woodward's Records Loss

VANCOUVER (CP) — Woodward Stores Limited reports a net loss of $164,250, or three cents a share before an extraordinary item for the six months ended July 31. After the extraordinary item, the company showed a net profit of $282,857 or four cents a share for the period.

This compares with net profits of $2.6 million of 40 cents a share for the period last year.

The extraordinary item this year was a gain on the disposal of properties and equipment.

For the period, the company showed an operating loss of $633,914 on operating revenue of $296.2 million. This compares with an operating profit of $4.8 million on operating revenue of $251.5 million for the period last year.

Escalating costs combined with a very competitive market environment in a slow-moving economy were the major causes of the operating loss for the first half of this fiscal year, the company said.

"In addition, operating losses (including amortization of pre-opening expenses) incurred by new stores contributed $2.8 million to these poor results," C. N. Woodward, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the company, reported to shareholders.

Vibrant, Warm, Human Kind Of Town

'Big T', You're So Exciting!

Ever since I came to Canada eight years ago people have been telling me I wouldn't like "Hog Town."

Toronto, they said emphatically, was a terrible place, a concrete jungle, a cold, impersonal dog-eat-dog kind of town.

Finally, I decided to see for myself. With a friend I shall call John because that's his name, I set off to drive across this great country to Toronto and back with a few days to spare in between to wander the streets and feel the mood of the Big T.

And now, for those who have never been there and for the benefit of ex-Torontonians who for years have had to listen to people here downgrade their old home city, I must say I found it an exciting place.

It is a vibrant city that has not retired from life. It throbs with the surging movement of people on the subway, in the stores and on the streets. And yet it can be a warm, human place . . . if you take time to see the people.

Like many of the world's great cities — London, Paris, Rome, Singapore — Toronto is a cosmopolitan wonderland. People of all nationalities mingle on the sidewalk. Along exciting Bloor Street, the store names and the wares they sell might be in Greek, Italian, Hungarian, Chinese and even English.

Like a scene from France of Belgium, young people sit chatting over a beer or a coffee at quaint little roadside tables sheltered from the hot September sun by gaily-colored unbrellas.

At Christie Pits Park on Bloor Street, four marvellous old Sicilian men, their swarthy skin and dark clothes making them look like part of the cast for the Godfather, sit at a picnic table nattering away in their native tongue and playing cards.

And along fascinating Yonge Street, the explicit pictures and signs inviting you in to strip shows and body-rub parlors stand next to names like McDonalds.

Not everyone, of course, is happy with the new look the once-quiet city known before the Second World War as "Toronto the Good" has taken on.

'We Can Do Without It'

"It's a fascination we can do without," the wife of retired Metropolitan Police detective superintendent Adolphus Payne told me, referring to the strip joints.

But somehow, like the multi-lingual signs and the men selling fruit and vegetables on the sidewalk in the European way, it all adds spice to the mixture that it Toronto today. Well, I mean to say, little old Victoria, with all those British immigrants and not much else is a bit on the stuffy side, what chaps?

And another illusion that was shattered for me was that, despite what our premier's father used to have us believe, we in Beautiful B.C. don't have the market cornered on beauty.

Because I have a passion for trees, I found the Prairies rather desolate but loved the gentle rolling country in northern Ontario where the hundreds of tiny lakes sparkled in the sunlight and the leaves were just starting to turn those gorgeous shades of red and gold.

Unfortunately our trip, combining pleasure with research work for a book, was rushed. John and I set some crazy kind of record, not stopping along the way but alternating the driving with turns at snoozing in the back of the van and covering the 2,800 miles to Toronto in three days, and the return journey in three days, too.

It was pretty tiring but it was pretty cheap, also. We took enough food to manage with en route or fasted and didn't spend anything on motels. In Toronto, we stayed with John's brother so our only expense was the B.C. ferry fares and just over $100 each way for gas.

Of course, for some vehicles the gas bill could be a lot higher. My economical VW camper managed 25 miles to the gallon despite some high-speed travel on the Prairies. And the cross-country gas prices were a bit of a shock, raning from 72 cents a gallon in Calgary to $1.01 in one Ontario town.

Despite the hurried nature of the tip, it was a most memorable experience. And I shall do it again — with the family and a little slower next time.

In fact, it surprises me that more Canadians living in the west don't take the opportunity to see all of their own great country before embarking on those exotic and more expensive holidays south of the border.

LEAVE WELL ENOUGH ALONE, CITY TOLD

'Improvements' Harm Park

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

So-called "improvements" to Beacon Hill Park in recent years have alienated some sections of the park from public use, subjected others to unduly heavy wear and detracted from the park's original esthetic appeal.

These and other criticisms of park planning — or rather, the lack of it — are aired in a detailed brief which will be submitted to the city parks committee Thursday by the Beacon Hill Park Association.

The brief repeats the association's request to council earlier this summer, for a freeze on all further development in Beacon Hill Park until a comprehensive policy has been established for all city parks.

It claims there is a limit to the number of "improvements" the park can continue to accept without eroding its value as a major natural park, and warns that even without current development threats from new roads or buildings Beacon Hill Park is in danger.

"It is endangerd by the lack of a coherent plan. It is endangered by 'improvements' and a park policy which does not recognize the validity of the motto 'Leave well enough alone,' " the brief states.

Association vice-president Terry Reksten, who wrote and researched the 19-page douments approved by the BHPA executive last week, says in the introuction that "citizens activism" to preserve the park from misuse and encroachment spans more than a century.

In 1859, for example, only a year after the park reserve had been established by Governor James Douglas, "it was discovered that individuals had been permitted to buy lots within the park boundary and were busily clearing the land for houses."

This loss rankled for many years, and in 1882 there was another scare when the Agricultural Association was granted 20 acres of the park to build exhibition buildings.

The attempt was thwarted, however, when a private citizen obtained a court injunction restraining the city from setting aside the land for the buildings.

Against this background of past mistakes and threatened erosion, Reksten says it's reasonable to assume that an awareness of the park's natural qualities would increase with the growing urbanization of the surrounding municipalities.

. . . calls for freeze

"But this has not been the case. The park is all too often regarded as a city-owned vacant lot, as a conveniently inexpensive site for public buildings and public roads."

The brief, which illustrates its arguments with a number of color photographs, contrasts a plan of the present park with the plan drawn up in 1889 by Scottish landscape architect John Blair.

The latter, it claims, embodies principles of park design still valid today, whereas the present layout "demonstrates only too clearly the results of 'ad hoc' decisons made in response to pressures of the moment."

Blair's balanced plan attempted to disperse the various attractions widely throughout the park, to avoid congestion and over-use. But today almost all Beacon Hill's major attractions are crammed into a small area representing less than 15 per cent of the total acreage, while other areas with the potential to attract visitors "have become alienated from general use."

For example, the eastern edge of the park adjacent to Cook Street attracts few visitors as "it has been given over to the use of private sports clubs and has become the location of the parks maintenance yard."

Yet, when it was already apparent that the central area of the park was "overburdened with attractions," more items were added or extended in recent years — including the children's playground, miniature golf course and Garry Oak Farm (animal enclosure).

Among the brief's specific objections and criticisms:

—Some older play equipment still remains imbedded in asphalt, although an adjjacent "adventure" playground is sensibly set in sand to diminish the possibility of serious accidents.

—The park's two centres of attraction for children are the playground and the animal enclosure, yet to get from one to the other children have to cross two park roadways. There's an additional hazard because cars have to back out from the Garry Oak Farm parking area.

—The many rock-faced planters added to the park recently are both "ugly and unnecessary," and add to maintenance costs.

—The city's long-range plan to phase out automobile traffic during hours of peak pedestrian use appears to have been shelved, after the implementation of earlier stages.

—Not enough attention is given to esthetics. The chain link fencing used for the animal enclosure is "neither park-like nor farm-like, " and the design of some buildings such as washrooms and shower facilities does not blend with park's natural setting.

Rec Centre: With or Without

A $750,000 recreation centre in Central Saanich will go ahead right away — with or without a government grant — if a majority of voters approve it in a referendum Saturday.

Mayor Jean Butler said today she is hopeful the province will contribute a one-third grant next year but nothing has been promised and council is not counting on it.

The former provincial government gave such grants to approved recreation projects but Recreation Minister Grace McCarthy has said recently there is no more money available this year.

Main feature of the proposed centre is a 25-metre swimming pool but there will also be a sauna, whirlpool, activity rooms, kitchen and offices. It would be built on municipal land on Wallace Drive north of Centennial Park.

Cost of borrowing to build the centre combined with operating costs would add about 6 per cent to property tax bills in Central Saanich. This would be trimmed to about 5 per cent if the province does provide a one-third grant.

The referendum requires just a simple majority of over 50 per cent for approval. There are about 3,500 eligible voters.

Voting hours Saturday are 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at three polling stations, the municipal hall, Brentwood elementary and Keating elementary schools.

There will be advance polls Thursday and Friday at the municipal hall, from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Sewerage Costs Snag City-B.C. Land Deal

The city of Victoria and the provincial government appear to have buried their differences over alleged "profiteering" by the government on a piece of property which the city sold for housing purposes.

But one big snag — the question of sewerage costs — remains to be cleared away before the provincial housing department can proceed with plans for a 61-unit development on the 4.5-acre Mount Stephen site near Hillside Avenue.

The matter was discussed by city council at an in-camera session Tuesday, and Mayor Mike Young said today council's main concern is that a development of the density proposed will place an added strain on what is already an inadequate sewer system in that area.

He said council wants to reach an agreement with the province whereby the government will cover the city's off-site costs incurred in extending and improving the sewer services.

That money could come from the sum the government receives when it sells the site to a developer, he suggested.

The province bought the land from Victoria for $200,000 and was proposing last June to offer it for sale to developers at $600,000. The move produced accusations that the government was a "ripoff developer."

Young said today, however, that the city now agrees the property should be sold at market price.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. Can you tell me, please, if "tube lights" burn less power than ordinary bulbs of the same power? A.J.

A. The big difference between fluorescent (tube lights) fixtures and incandescent bulbs is the output of light, the fluorescent lighting producing twice the light for the same wattage. This, then, means they burn less power for the light produced.

Helmcken . . .'a love of history'

City Archivist Named Citizen of the Year

City archivist Ainslie Helmcken today was named citizen of the year at the annual meeting of Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce at The Empress.

Ald. Helen Beirnes, in announcing the award on behalf of the chamber, said it was a fitting tribute after a lifetime of "seeking out, recording and preserving the history of the City of Victoria." Beirnes is a former president of the chamber.

Helmcken, 75, has long been interested in history, she said, and became official archivist in 1966.

He is the grandson of Dr. J. D. Helmcken, Hudson's Bay Co. doctor who came to Victoria in 1850. His father, Dr. James Douglas Helmcken, was also a physician, who practised in Victoria.

"With this medical background, Ainslie Helmcken was vaccinated with a love of history at an early age," Beirnes said.

His father was born in Victoria in 1858 and his mother, Ethel Mouat, was born here in 1865. Ethel Mouat's father had first arrived in Victoria in 1842 in a sailing ship.

During the years, Helmcken has collected or become custodian of 50,000 old photographs and line drawings depicting various chapters in the history of British Columbia, particularly the Victoria area.

He has also collected thousands of letters, paintings and other items of historical interest.

He will turn 76 next Tuesday.

In presenting him with the award, including a silver bowl, Beirnes said the history of Victoria is richer, fuller and more colorful because of the efforts of Ainslie Helmcken and his family.

The citizen of the year award is presented annually by the chamber for outstanding service to the community by a local man or woman.

WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

309 IN MEMORIAMS

MILLS — In loving memory of our dear friend William (Bill) Mills who passed away September 22, 1975.
A little more gray in the hair
Each day as the years go by;
A little more stooping of the form
A little more dim in the eye;
A little more faltering of the step
As we tread life's pathway o'er.
But a little nearer everyday
To the ones that have gone before.

A little more halting in the gait
And a dullness of the ear;
A growing weariness of the frame
With each swift passing year
A fading of hopes and ambitions too,
A faltering in life's quest
But a little nearer everyday
To the sweet and peaceful rest.

A little more loneliness in life
As the dear ones pass away
A bigger claim on the heavenly land
With every passing day.
A little further from toil and care
A little less way to roam
A drawing nearer to a peaceful voyage
And a happy welcome home
((Bills favorite)
You're so sadly missed by the Forrester family.

In loving memory of our dear son Gordon William Daley who went away Sept. 22, 1964.
The heart is a home of many rooms
Where things are stored away.
The treasurers of long remembered joys.
The pearls of yesterday.
But there is a corner of the heart,
A secret place where we cherish above all other things
Our son's memory
—Still dearly missed by mum and dad.

TO BISHOP PIERCE, FATHER Page, lawyer and executors. Dr. G. Reilly, the nurses at Royal Jubilee Hospital, the staff and many friends at the beautiful Carolina Macklem Home. On behalf of our sister the late Mrs. Florence Rear a most sincere thank you and Godiv love to you all. Cis, Mollie, Floris and Margaret.

Amazon Tribe Kill Children

MANAUS, Brazil (UPI) — Mayurunas Indians in the remote, western edge of the Brazilian Amazon jungle have begun killing newly born females in an attempt to wipe out their tribe rather than confront civilization, according to a brazilian anthropologist.

Anthropologist Paulo Lucena said the Indians, whose numbers have been severely diminshed in the last four years since coming into contact with white oil explorers, intend to exterminate themselves rather than continue suffering the impact of civilization.

"Desperate and feeling that they have no place to go, they decided to die," Lucena wrote to Ismarth de Oliveira, the president of the National Indian Foundation. The document was made public today.

The Mayurunas, who inhabit dense jungle along the Brazilian-Peruvian border, 1,480 miles up the Amazon River, have been reduced from approximately 2,000 at the end of 1972 to little more than 400 at present, Lucena said.

He said the Indians died quickly from flu, measles, venereal diseases and gastro-intestinal ailments brought to their settlements by the whites.

Mt. Washington Resort Started

COURTENAY — Preliminary work started Tuesday on the slopes of 5,215-foot Mt. Washington, about 17 miles northwest of here, where developers have planned a $1 million ski resort.

Crown Zellerbach Canada Limited, which owns the land, granted developers permission to do initial studies after the two parties reached agreement in principle on a rental formula for the use of the property.

The work will include ski lift elevation studies and some clearing for an access route into an operating base on the mountainside.

Gordon Clark of Vancouver, Crown Zellerbach's company secretary, said talks are continuing with the developers to establish a lease and until these meetings are concluded it is not possible to estimate when actual construction of lifts and other facilities might begin.

"We are looking forward, however, to the orderly development of this site at the earliest possible time," he said.

The location, on the southwest slope of the mountain, has been described as one of the best potential ski sites on Vancouver Island.

The development group, headed by Campbell River businessmen Henry Norie and Alex Linton, approached Crown Zellerbach earlier this year proposing establishment of the ski complex.

Crown Zellerbach subsequently announced it favored recreational development on the mountain, providing environmental safeguards are met.

British Heritage Displayed

Magna Carta — touchstone of the parliamentary process — is depicted in a travelling exhibit titled Parliamentary Heritage showing in the rotunda of the Legislative Buildings.

Ancient manuscripts and parchments illustrating milestones of constitutional government are reproduced in 22 panels, which include renderings by artists contemporary to the times depicted from Alfred the Great through modern processes.

For the modern period, the day-to-day work of the two houses of Parliament — Commons and Lords — the cabinet, electoral systems and parliamentary reporting are illustrated.

The exhibit, prepared by the Central Office of Information, London, originally at the request of the Japanese government, was first seen in the Diet in Tokyo in 1973, was seen in Ottawa this summer and goes to Edmonton after closing here Oct. 11.
